Barkley Stakes Job As Leader On Hatch Act

Offers to Test Control as Row Splits Democrats And Delays Vote

By John B. Oakes.

Split to the very core over extension of the Hatch Act, the Democratic majority in the Senate wrangled bitterly throughout the day yesterday—with the result that final action on the proposed measure was again deferred.

So severe is the rift in Democratic ranks over the "purity-in-politics" bill that a group of dissident Democrats demanded that Majority Leader Barkley call a conference to solidify the opposition, but he refused with the warning that if a conference were insisted upon, he would make it a test of his leadership.

Barkley was called out to the Democratic cloakroom in midafternoon by a group of his colleagues, led by Majority Whip Minton, who are fighting the pending bill to prohibit political activity to District, State and local employes paid with Federal funds.

Parley Is Warm

In what was described as an exceedingly warm parley, the majority leader reportedly declared that he would offer his resignation if the conference were called. Barkley, a defender of the Hatch bill, later pointed out that never in the seven years' history of the New Deal have Senate Democrats demanded a party conference on pending legislation.

Barkley's control was again threatened at the very close of the day when the Democratic opposition attempted in an almost unprecedented move to overrule his motion to call the Senate into session today. Senator McKellar (Democrat), Tennessee, proposed to adjourn until Monday, when the agricultural appropriation and reciprocal trade bills are expected to displace the Hatch measure.

On a roll-call vote, McKellar was turned down, 34 to 30, but among the 34 supporting Barkley were only 16 Democrats, while the 30 against him were exclusively Democratic.

Opponents of the Hatch bill, who comprise a strange mixture of arch-New Dealers and Southern conservatives, pursued tactics in the Senate yesterday that led some defenders of the measure to charge that a filibuster was in progress.

Delays Likely

The apparent threat to talk the bill into next week was combated by Senator Barkley with his insistence on a session today; but it was indicated that numerous amendments and practically incessant speechmaking might again postpone a final decision.

One of the amendments, to be proposed by Senator Minton, would place under civil service all workers affected by the Hatch Act or by the pending bill to extend it.

Early in yesterday's session, the Senate turned down, 49 to 27, a proposal of Senator Maloney (Democrat), of Massachusetts, to weaken the bill under consideration by permitting District, State and local office-holders to engage in politics. The majority against this amendment was far greater than that against any of the other emasculating amendments proposed during the past four days.

The bill in its present form is "the most dictatorial proposal ever made by the Government," Maloney declared. He warned that it "opens

President Urges Agriculture to Stand By Friendly Government and Cites His Concern to Avert War's Repercussions

By Robert C. Albright

President Roosevelt last night told half a million farmers gathered at 2,000 farm rallies they have not yet reached the goal of social and economic justice, but are on the road and have a Government in Washington protecting their interests.

He said it is important that this Government is looking out for them "not just by uttering glittering generalities but by specific policies and concrete action."

Joined by radio with Secretary of Agriculture Wallace and Postmaster General Farley in addressing the farm dinners, celebrating the seventh anniversary of the first Roosevelt farm conference, the President said he is fulfilling his 1932 pledge "to reverse the process of agricultural decay."

While the "nonpartisan" character of the occasion was stressed, the speeches were widely regarded as launching the Democratic campaign for farm votes.

If listening farmers expected a hint of the President's plans, they found none in his brief farm program review. But the President did press throughout for continuation of New Deal social and economic policies.

Nor did the militantly "third term" Wallace, once chastised for outspokenness, plug again for a

House Group Seeks Action On D.C. Vote

Nichols, Dirksen Agree to Report Separate Resolution Providing Suffrage

By James D. Secrest

The local suffrage issue will be put squarely up to the House District Committee and probably the House itself, it was indicated yesterday, as public hearings were concluded by the Kennedy subcommittee on District reorganization.

Assurance that the subcommittee would not "bottle up" the suffrage proposal but probably would insist on its separation from reorganization was given by Representatives Everett M. Dirksen (Republican), of Illinois, and Jack Nichols (Democrat), of Oklahoma.

Both expressed their willingness to report out a separate suffrage resolution to the full committee without recommendation.

Bill Spares Commissioners

At the same time members of the subcommittee indicated they would report out a reorganization bill in which the Commissioners would be left intact and without a city manager.

Representative Ambrose Kennedy (Democrat), of Maryland, said he will call his subcommittee into executive session early next week to begin marking up the reorganization bill and hoped to have it ready for reporting to the full committee a week from Monday.

Representative Nichols gave his support to the suggestion of Dirksen that a suffrage resolution be reported by the subcommittee without recommendation and so assured that the franchise proposal will not be tabled despite the fact that a majority of the subcommittee favors retention of Congressional control of the National Capital.

Dirksen Backs Seal Plan

"I would be very damn happy to see suffrage brought out of the subcommittee right onto the House floor," Nichols said.

"I certainly have no disposition to bottle it up, and I hope the full District Committee will report it to the House without recommendation."

Previously, Dirksen had suggested the idea as a compromise plan so that the House might be given an opportunity to act on a local suffrage proposal independent of any differences of opinion on reorganization of the administrative system of the District government.

Dirksen said he favored retention of the present commission form of government, and, generally speaking, was for adoption of the Commissioners' program for administrative changes as incorporated in the Seal bill.

"I am convinced that some reforms are needed in the District Government," Dirksen said, "but I'm not so sanguine as to believe that any substantial economies will

Army Will Be Sent If Helsinki Asks It Openly, British Say

Swedes Are Bound To Let Aid Pass By League Pledge, London Indicates

London, March 8. — Great Britain and France, in an effort to stiffen Finland's resistence to Russian territorial demands on the Finnish government during the last 48 hours, have told the Finnish government, it was learned today, that while the Finns must decide for themselves how to answer Soviet peace proposals, they might get "substantial" help from the Allies if they would ask for it.

This offer is interpreted in some quarters as an indication of Allied willingness to send an expeditionary force to support the Mannerheim Line, but this has not been confirmed in British official quarters.

[The New York Herald Tribune reported from London that a Finnish appeal to Britain and France to engineer an arrangement under which Finland would be given direct military support on a big scale is expected to be made by Helsinki immediately.]

Though Finland has been asking for help ever since November 30, it is important to notice that she asked for indirect aid in the form of airplanes, war materials, and volunteers, and carefully avoided appealing to the Allies for direct intervention.

League Is Cruc

Great Britain and France both answered Finland's appeal by sending volunteers, planes, considerable quantities of ammunition and gasoline. Until Finland makes an appeal for a direct organized intervention, she is likely to get only about 150 men a day, which will not be enough to hold up the Russian advance.

By asking for allied intervention, however, Finland could change the entire situation. Great Britain and France could then take action and help the Finns under last December's League of Nations resolution, and could put diplomatic pressure on Norway and Sweden, who also are members of the League, to allow their troops to pass through Scandinavia to Finland.

Until such a request is forthcoming from Finland, however, Great Britain and France cannot overcome the opposition of the Scandinavian countries, who fear that the very hour a British expeditionary force is landed in Norway, the Germans will march through Denmark and attack both Norway and Sweden.

It is precisely this possibility which makes Finland hesitate about calling for a British-French force. What they fear is that, while the British and French are trying to land 40,000 to 50,000 men—in itself a staggering task—Germany will oc-

The War Today . . .

Diplomatic developments rather than fighting held the spotlight in Europe's belligerent and neutral capitals:

BERLIN—Per Evind Svinhufvud, former Finnish president, went from Stockholm to Berlin to enlist German aid in softening Russia's peace terms and bringing the peace negotiations now in progress in Stockholm to a successful end.

ROME—Premier Mussolini awaited the visit today or tomorrow of German Foreign Minister von Ribbentrop and of Svinhufvud. Von Ribbentrop is reported seeking to stiffen Italian resistance to the British blockade of German coal exports, as well as attempting to enlist Italian aid in a settlement of the Russian-Finnish war that would aid Germany. Svinhufvud is concentrating on his efforts for Russo-Finnish peace.

LONDON—Great Britain let it be known that, if Finland asks Great Britain and France, or the League of Nations, for direct military aid, such aid in "substantial" quantity will be sent at once. One London report stated that Finland is ready to make such a request.

MOSCOW—American Ambassador Lawrence Steinhardt, after an hour's private conversation with the Swedish Minister to Moscow, was closeted for 2 hours with Soviet Foreign Affairs Commissar Molotoff.

STOCKHOLM—Finnish Defense Chief Baron von Mannerheim and Russian Marshal Vasilly Blucher, were reported joined in Finnish-Russian negotiations at the Swedish capital. However, there later came reports, through the Associated Press, that Russia had ordered an end to the negotiations, with Finnish acceptance of all Russian terms before there could be an armistice.

HELSINKI—The Finnish government formally admitted Russia had made certain offers and that these were being negotiated. It was denied, however, that fighting had ceased, and the day's communique claimed Finnish victories which left many Russian dead.

Former President Of Finland Tells Berlin Allies Will Act if It Does Not

(See Editorial, "A Turning Point," Page 10.)

By International News Service

Berlin, March 8.—Germany today was asked to assist Finland in obtaining reasonable peace terms from the Soviet in the face of imminent danger of armed Anglo-French intervention in the Russo-Finnish war.

The plea for Nazi help was made by Per Evind Svinhufvud, former President of Finland. He arrived in Berlin with a Swedish delegation in a special plane from Stockholm and went immediately to the German foreign office where he was closeted with Foreign Minister Joachim von Ribbentrop.

It is expected Svinhufvud also will be received by Chancellor Hitler to whom he will state Finland's precarious case in person.

Soon after the meeting between Svinhufvud and the Nazi foreign minister, it was announced Von Ribbentrop would fly to Rome tomorrow to confer with Premier Mussolini and Italian Foreign Minister Count Ciano. It is a foregone conclusion Von Ribbentrop and the Italian leaders will discuss, among other problems, the Scandinavian situation.

Appeal to Italy Planned

Svinhufvud also is scheduled to go to Rome, but the time of his departure has not yet been revealed.

[Svinhufvud, the United Press reports, may accompany Ribbentrop, but perhaps not on the same mission. It was considered certain, however, that the Finno-Russian war would be a major point of Ribbentrop's talks with Premier Mussolini, along with an effort to stiffen Italian resistance to the British blockade of German coal exports.]

The former Finnish President told Von Ribbentrop Finland requires the good offices of Germany to obtain less harsh peace terms from Moscow than those contained in the Russian "peace ultimatum." Unless peace is attained, he is said to have declared, Allied armed intervention appears imminent.

[Russia is said to demand Lake Ladoga, Viipuri and Sortavala as well as Petsamo, the Finnish Arctic port. The Finns are holding out for preservation of the present status quo and compensation for the damage done to Viipuri and other Finnish cities.]

Official German circles took the attitude the Svinhufvud-Ribbentrop conversations were not of an official character, that Svinhufvud merely stopped over in Berlin en route to Italy for a rest.

This attitude was interpreted as an indication the Reich is not inclined to give further encouragement to Swedish efforts to bring about a truce. In some quarters it was even believed Svinhufvud's proposals already have been turned down. Observers could not, however, overlook the fact that both Svinhufvud and Ribbentrop are going to Italy.

Nazi reticence to take the initiative in a peace move is believed largely due to a desire not to undertake any action contrary to Soviet wishes. It was widely believed that Berlin and Moscow are now in consultation on the Scandinavian situation.

Tanner May Visit Berlin

There was a rumor tonight that Finnish Foreign Minister M. V. Tanner might come to Berlin to add his official voice to that of Svinhufvud, but this could not be confirmed.

Questions put to official Nazi quarters as to the extent of the

A.F.L. Reported Cleaning Up Chicago Unions

8 Officials Deposed To Stop Outside Rule, Labor Policeman Says

By the Associated Press

Chicago, March 8.—Frank Fenton, managing director of organization work for the American Federation of Labor, was in Chicago today on a mission which police Lieut. Charles Egan said would result in a housecleaning of local labor unions.

Fenton, who arrived from Washington last night, was reluctant to talk.

"This business is all in the allegation stage," he said.

But Egan, head of the police labor detail, and Capt. Daniel Gilbert, of the State's attorney's office, announced that Fenton had ousted eight officials of local 21,648 of the Shipping, Receiving Clerks and Assistants Union.

Fenton, called from a conference at the A. F. L. headquarters here, would not verify the ouster of the officials. "I've just taken over supervision of the union for the time being," he said.

Egan said Fenton came here by airplane last night after he and Gilbert had telephoned him that their efforts to rid Chicago unions of domination by men not members of the crafts had not met with cooperation.

All money of the local was impounded, Egan reported.

2 Policemen Are Accused Of Bribery

Brodie and Murray Named in Charges Filed by Maj. Brown

Charges of accepting a bribe, neglect of duty, failure to report a law violation and prejudicial conduct were preferred against Policemen Hubert E. (Steve) Brodie and Leo (Nix) Murray, former detective sergeants, late yesterday by Maj. Ernest W. Brown, superintendent of police.

Demoted from detective sergeants to uniform patrolmen November 15, both men were accused jointly in one set of charges taken from the police manual. They will be tried next Thursday in a public hearing before a special civilian trial board sitting at the District Building.

Containing six specifications, the four charges all pertain to transactions which allegedly took place last October 14, at a reported gambling establishment at 905½ G street northwest.

Trial Board Named

The Commissioners appointed a special board of civilians to hear the charges which were drafted by Assistant Corporation Counsel Oliver Gasch and approved by Corporation Counsel Elwood Seal. The board members are Jo V. Morgan, only member of the Board of District Tax Appeals, chairman; Mrs. Agnes K. Mason, member of the ABC Board, and Maj. Patrick

Colonel's Second Wife Shot To Death by His First

By the Associated Press

Columbia, S. C., March 8.—A stout, neatly dressed woman in black walked into a fashionable hotel cafeteria here at the lunch hour today and shot and killed Mrs. Richard C. Burleson, second wife of a United States Army colonel, with a rusty 32-caliber revolver.

The woman, identified hours later as Mrs. Masie Walker Burleson, 51, the Army colonel's first wife, crept up behind her and fired without removing the weapon from a cheap black bag. Then she walked around the table at which the second Mrs. Burleson, about 55 years old, was sitting and fired from the front.

The bag with the pistol dropped to the floor. The woman was led to the hotel office, where she stayed quietly until police arrived. For four hours, under questioning by police and Army officers, she refused to say who she was. She mumbled about wanting to see her mother, who, officers said, died some years ago.

Col. Simon B. Buckner, chief of staff of the Sixth Division, spokesman for the police and Army officers questioning the woman, said she was divorced from Col. Burleson in 1927. They were married in 1908, he said, and lived together "off and on" until 1927.

Col. Buckner said he was informed in telephone messages from Galveston that the first Mrs. Burleson was three times in a hospital as a mental case last year.

"The first Mrs. Burleson," he continued, "was inclined to be an erratic and peculiar person, and was on several occasions barred from Army posts." He was careful to explain that this was not because of "moral reason," but because she

Treasury's Gold Vaults Filled— But With Opium

By the Associated Press

The Treasury's massive vaults, built to hold millions in gold, now are hoarding 300 tons of a product its guardians consider even more valuable—opium.

In making this known yesterday, H. J. Anslinger, commissioner of narcotics, said that when it was foreseen three years ago that the source of America's opium might be cut off because of world considerations, the Government began storing it. Opium comes primarily from Turkey, Yugoslavia, Bulgaria and Afghanistan.

The Government does not own an ounce of it, however. Manufacturers and medical supply houses furnished the money to purchase it.

Some of the supply is being sold to South American countries and already "considerable amounts" have been sent to Finland.

Dutch to Extend Martial Law To Combat Spies

The Hague, March 8 (AP).—A royal decree extending martial law to the "greater part of the Netherlands" is in preparation, it was announced today. The minister of defense, Lieut. Col. A. Q. H. Dijxhoorn, made the announcement in the upper chamber in answer to questions as to what steps the government was taking in view of the "dangers of espionage."

"If necessary the government will not hesitate to proclaim martial law for the entire country," the minister declared. He did not indicate when the royal decree would become effective.

Martial law was declared November 1, 1939, in all strategic military and naval areas without suspending civil authority.

The defense minister said secret service agents and the police were actively combating espionage.

2,000 Russians Slain on Lake, Finns Claim

Viipuri Defense Holds; 'Can't Accept,' People Say of Red Terms

By the Associated Press

Helsinki, March 8.—There was no rejoicing in Finland tonight over the prospect of a peace with Russia.

On the streets of the capital, men looked at one another with grave faces and said, of the reported Soviet peace terms: "We can not accept."

Bitterly, some Finns saw only this in the Russian offer to trade peace for large andd strategic areas of Finland and military concessions: a bid to gain time to perfect offensive strategy.

Others thought it was a "bargaining offer," which might be scaled down if Finland looked upon it seriously.

There was official silence on the maze of reports concerning negotiations, but the Finnish armies of the isthmus fought on doggedly in their defense of Viipuri, which was Finland's third city before it became a hollow shell of war ruins.

The high command announced that 2,000 more Red army soldiers had been killed north of Lake Ladoga, where the Soviet military leaders yesterday claimed the capture of four islands.

Negotiations At Final Stage, Swedes Report

Stockholm Admits Taking Initiative, Denies Pressing Finns

By the Associated Press

Stockholm (Saturday), March 9.—Russo-Finnish negotiations for peace have reached the final stage, it was learned early today, with Soviet Russia demanding that Finland accept Soviet conditions before there is an armistice.

The Swedish foreign office confirmed that Sweden had acted as intermediary to establish contact between Finland and Russia.

This work of mediation is understood to have taken several weeks, both parties being unwilling to take any step which might be interpreted as a sign of weakness.

When the negotiations finally were begun, the Finns expressed a desire for an armistice.

The Russians refused. They said that if there was to be peace, the conditions must be established before hostilities were suspended.

Authoritative Swedish sources flatly denied that Sweden had pressed the Finns to accept Russia's conditions or that Sweden, in moving for peace, acted under German pressure.

[This dispatch was permitted to pass through a strict Swedish censorship.]

The Russian peace terms have been described as much more se-

U. S. Envoy Sees Molotoff After Swedish Legation Call

Moscow, March 8.—Ambassador Laurence A. Steinhardt went tonight to the Kremlin, where he arrived at 5 p. m. and had a two-hour conversation with the Soviet premier-foreign commissar, V. E. Molotoff, one other person being present beyond an interpreter. His interview followed a one-hour conversation with the Swedish minister this morning. The ambassador declared that he was unable to furnish any information concerning the subject.

No definite information was available either at the Swedish legation in Moscow, which maintained a strict reserve.

There may perhaps be some indication of the official Soviet attitude in the fact that today was chosen as the time to publish an article by Otto Kuusinen, head of the "People's Democratic Republic of Finland."

The article is published in the newspapers Pravda and Trud. It asserts that when the Finnish government rejected the Soviet demands of last year, it relied upon two things—the Mannerheim Line and British aid. Both, says the article, failed. M. Kuusinen claims that the Mannerheim Line is already broken

According to M. Kuusinen, the English "promised to send 100,000 troops from Canada, but the Canadians preferred to remain at home." The United States, he says, was to have supplied money, "but the promised money was not sent from America because the bankers doubted whether they would get anything in return."

Navy Red Tape Causes Captain To Dread War

Inefficiency Cited, Costs Hit by Witness On Reorganization

By John G. Norris

Veteran members of Congress blinked their eyes and pinched themselves yesterday at the unusual spectacle of a ranking Navy official citing instances of red tape and inefficient management in the sea service, and telling them naval expenditures can be reduced.

Capt. Charles W. Fisher, jr., director of Navy shore establishments, told a House subcommittee reorganization of the Navy Department should be effected, and confessed he felt "dread" at the thought the Navy might be called on to face a war with the present setup.

Fisher urged the special House subcommittee on naval reorganization to approve Secretary Edison's proposals for consolidating shipbuilding functions and centralization of shore facilities

President for Changes

Following the meeting, Chairman Vinson, of the House Naval Committee, discussed the naval reorganization problem with President Roosevelt. On his return from the White House Vinson announced that the President was in favor of legislation to merge the Bureau of Engineering and the Bureau of Construction and Repair into a Bureau of Ships.

Vinson did not disclose Mr. Roosevelt's stand on other reorganization proposals, but said he personally favored establishment of an Undersecretary of the Navy to coordinate industrial activities rather than Edison's plan. The latter, he declared, would create a "superbureau" which would dominate the Navy.

Declaring Edison's plan would permit economies, Fisher said larger naval appropriations are not necessary.

Forecasts Naval Fund Cut

"I am one who feels this billion dollar appropriation for the Navy this year is about the peak," he said. "From now on they will drop and they should drop."

As an instance of lack of proper coordination of industrial activities, Capt. Fisher cited a recent case of two Navy bureaus being in competition in purchasing armor-plate.

One bureau contracted with a firm for the armor and later another made a deal with the same company, he said. It was found that unless the company delivered on the second contract first, ship construction would be delayed, but if it did it would be subject to penalties under the first contract. It was therefore necessary to ask a third bureau to waive the penalty clause of the contract.

Unnecessary paper work and reference of minor difficulties to high officials was described by the naval officer. He said that recently it took two months and 20 letters to Washington to get approval for replacement of a messenger boy at the Puget Sound Navy Yard.

Complicated Budget Hit

On another occasion, Fisher said, the Assistant Secretary of the Navy had to be consulted before a naval station in Massachusetts could be permitted to work a chauffeur overtime.

Unnecessary paper work and duplication of effort was also hit by Capt. Fisher. He declared the Navy gets its money from 281 separate appropriations and 150 other special funds, whereas not more than 25 are necessary. The 12-volume Navy budget Fisher termed "one of the most complicated documents man has ever read."

The aircraft carriers Lexington and Saratoga each have 120 typewriters to care for paper work required under the present set-up, he said, a remark which prompted a member of the subcommittee later to observe that it was more than the number of planes carried by the ships.

Rep. Norton Calls for Vote On Labor Issue

Smith Committee Amendments Would Repeal Act, She Says

By the Associated Press

Chairman Norton (Democrat), of New Jersey, of the House Labor Committee, joined the tug-of-war over amending the Wagner Act yesterday with a statement that revisions proposed by the Smith committee would "practically repeal the law."

She referred to amendments brought forward Thursday by a majority of a five-man special investigating committee headed by Representative Smith (Democrat), of Virginia. In a formal statement, she expressed the hope that the labor issue would be "fought out at the polls next November."

"The Smith committee has really confused the whole issue by attempting to have amendments considered before the investigation was completed," she said. "This is something that I believe would not be approved by any fair-minded person, no matter how violently he might be opposed to the National Labor Relations Law. . . .

"The committee should have finished its work before coming to Congress with amendments, the effect of which would be to practically repeal the law. It would seem much more honest to bring out a bill to repeal the law in its entirety. The issue then would be clearcut."

The Smith committee amendments would create a new National Labor Relations Board, revamp the board's administrative procedure and otherwise change the act.

On the assumption that Mrs. Norton's committee would not approve these amendments quickly, if at all, Smith and Representative Cox (Democrat), of Georgia, already are studying methods to force them to the House floor for debate. There was talk that they would file a petition which, if signed by 218 members, would discharge Mrs. Norton's committee from consideration of the revisions.

Jackson Orders Inquiry

At the same time it became known that Attorney General Jackson had ordered an investigation of the Smith committee's contention that the Labor Board had violated the law against lobbying by Government agencies.

Smith had asked Jackson for an opinion on testimony before the committee that Benedict Wolf, former board secretary, wrote letters in an attempt to organize opposition to any amendments to the law. Jackson replied that he could not give such opinions to anyone but the President or a Cabinet officer.

Marble States Congressmen Turn Salesmen

Limestone War Dept. Would Not Last, 37 Tell President

The Taj Mahal and the Parthenon were held up as examples yesterday by 37 Senators and Representatives who sought to convince President Roosevelt that the new $26,000,000 War Department Building should be constructed of marble instead of limestone.

The theme of the group that called at the White House was that Washington should be beautified with permanent structures—an effect which, they said, can be achieved only with marble. The Senators and Representatives are members of an informal committee of 71 representing the 24 marble-producing and finishing States.

Mr. Roosevelt was asked to specify that marble should be used in the first unit of the building, which will be located in the northeast corner of a site bounded by Twenty-first, Twenty-third, C and E streets northwest.

Problem Complicated

The problem was complicated, however, by the fact that the Public Building Administration has already awarded a contract to John McShain, Inc., of Philadelphia, to construct the unit with limestone at a cost of $4,329,500.

Representative Hobbs (Democrat), of Alabama, is chairman of the marble States committee.

One member of the group said Mr. Roosevelt invited them to introduce a joint resolution in Congress specifying just what they wanted.

McShain was the lowest of ten bidders with respect to each of the five materials for which bids were invited. His bid for a marble unit was $4,615,000. Since the contract already has been made, any change would be up to the contractor, Hobbs contended.

Agreement Alleged

Much more is at stake, however, than the kind of material to be used in the unit, or in the entire War Department Building. The question at issue is whether marble or limestone will be used in the entire $50,000,000 national defense building group planned for what is known as the Northwest Rectangle.

Marble States committee members say there was an agreement that limestone was to be used in the Government buildings in the downtown triangle, and marble in the buildings in the area north of Constitution avenue and between Seventeenth street and the Potomac River.

Public Buildings Administration officials said they had never heard of such an agreement.

Hull Treaties Clear Hurdles In Committee

All Modifications Rejected as Extension Bill Is Reported

By the United Press

Administration supporters yesterday cleared the final obstacle to Senate action on a House-approved resolution extending the reciprocal trade treaty program when the Senate Finance Committee, voting 12 to 8, reported the resolution favorably after rejecting all moves to restrict operation of the program.

Apprised of the action, Secretary of State Hull, said he was "indeed gratified by this further evidence of recognition of the vital importance of our country of the trade agreement program."

Finance Committee Chairman Harrison (Democrat), of Mississippi, said he planned to have the resolution made the Senate's unfinished business Monday, but that he would then lay it aside until Wednesday in order to facilitate action on the agriculture appropriation bill.

Offered by Pittman

The nearest Administrationits came to defeat yesterday was on a proposal to require Senate ratification of all treaties. It was defeated, 9 to 11. The amendment was sponsored by Chairman Pittman (Democrat), of Nevada, of the Senate Foreign Relations Committee, usually a stanch New Deal supporter. The amendment was offered in committee by Senator Johnson (Democrat), of Colorado, because Pittman is not a member of the finance group.

Acting on behalf of another nonmember, Senator O'Mahoney (Democrat), of Wyoming, Johnson also proposed an amendment to require that treaties be approved by both houses of Congress before becoming effective. This proposal was rejected, 8 to 12.

A proposal by Senator La Follette (Progressive), of Wisconsin, to create an export-import control board to be composed of the Secretaries of Agriculture, Commerce and State to regulate treaty concessions, was rejected, 7 to 13.

Vandenberg Proposal Beaten

Senator Vandenberg (Republican), of Michigan, proposed a prohibition against reduction of excise taxes on coal, oil, lumber and copper imports. This was defeated, 8 to 12.

Senate leaders regarded the 12-to-8 final vote as indicative of the division in the chamber itself over the proposition. They were confident the resolution would be approved as it is now written.

The vote to approve the legislation and send it to the floor for debate follows:

For the bill—Senators Harrison, George of Georgia, Walsh of Massachusetts, Barkley of Kentucky, Connally of Texas, Bailey of North Carolina, Clark of Missouri, Byrd of Virginia, Guffey of Pennsylvania, Brown of Michigan, Herring of Iowa and Radcliffe of Maryland, all Democrats.

Against the bill—Senators Gerry of Rhode Island and Johnson of Colorado, Democrats; La Follette (Progressive), of Wisconsin, and Capper of Kansas, Vandenberg of Michigan, Townsend of Delaware, Davis of Pennsylvania and Lodge of Massachusetts, Republicans, King (Democrat), of Utah, was absent.

Rio de Janeiro, March 8 (U.P.).—President Getulio Vargas today signed a decree providing for resumption of interest and amortization payments on Brazil's foreign indebtedness.

By the Associated Press

Financial quarters here said yesterday they believed the debt settlement plan announced by the Brazilian government on her $1,000,000,000 defaulted foreign bonds involved the payment of $18,000,000 to $18,000,000 annually for four years.

About $25,000,000 would be paid to holders of defaulted dollar bonds in the four years. The total dollar bond indebtedness is about $360,000,000, most of which is held in this country.

The offer is, in effect, a renewal of the Aranha plan of 1934, but at about half the interest rate then offered for the bonds.

Flood Control Bill Put at $150,000,000

By the Associated Press

Chairman Whittington (Democrat), of Mississippi, of the House Flood Control Committee, said after a White House conference yesterday that he hoped to report out this session a general flood control measure authorizing expenditure of between $150,000,000 and $175,000,000. Whittington would not say what the President thought about the proposal.

third term, beyond looking forward to "completing the task" of farm security. Farley, reputedly anti-third term, made only one reference to the President in his speech.

The President, Wallace and Farley praised farmers for seven years of farm program cooperation as a $300,000,000 increase in farm bill funds was voted by the Senate agriculture appropriations subcommittee. Unbudgeted parity payments totaling $212,000,000 were written into the bill, $85,000,000 was added for farm surplus removal and the food stamp plan, and a $50,000,000 RFC loan was voted to finance the Bankhead farm tenant law.

The increases restored sharp slashes in the measure by the House and wiped out a net total of $295,000,000 in savings on all bills effected to date in the Congressional economy drive.

The farm bill will be sped to final committee approval today and will be laid before the Senate on Monday, displacing the trade agreements extension bill. Unexpectedly swift farm bill action followed close on Democratic election reverses on the Midwest farm front, and organized farm appeals for parity aid.

Politics Creeps In

Last night's Administration addresses to the AAA rallies in 24 rallies in 24 States fulfilled Secretary Wallace's pledge that the speeches would be predominantly "nonpolitical," but might have some political coloring. Fearing political implications, the American Farm Bureau Federation had warned member units against "official" participation.

Speaking with the President from his White House study, Secretary Wallace said farmers of all political faiths joined in 1932 and 1936 "to support the greatest friend the farmer ever had in the White House, Franklin D. Roosevelt," and added:

"We do not yet have full agricultural justice, but we are much closer to it than we would have been without Roosevelt."

Postmaster General Farley spoke from a New York studio. Farley said a decision was reached in 1933 to keep the farm program "out of politics" and has been adhered to. But the Postmaster General said the program "will be the object of political attack and counterattack for many years" and cited the rallies as evidence "that farmers are on the alert to guard their program."

Speaking last, President Roosevelt recalled the night, four days after he first took office, when he dispatched the Washington farm conference summons, in celebration of which last night's rallies were called.

Recalls the Evolution

He said that the farm program has undergone continual evolution in the seven years since, altered from time to time as drought conditions, "and even court conditions changed." Gradually, he said, the program has been adapted more closely to the needs of the farmer, of the Nation and of the land itself.

Hopes of restoring foreign commerce to absorb farm output, he told the farmers, has been "rudely disturbed" by a world at war. While 90 per cent of our trade is domestic, he said such commodities as cotton, wheat, tobacco, apples and lard are more largely dependent on exports, "and all agriculture is certain to be seriously affected if our export market disappears."

In this connection, the President stressed the past value of the Reciprocal Trade Agreements Act, extension of which now is pending in the Senate, and declared:

"That program has brought results. Results not only in better markets for our farm goods—results that are mathematically proved in terms of pounds and bushels and dollars and cents. If Congress consents, we shall continue that useful work."

Like the farmers, President Roosevelt said, great and small industrial and retail groups in the cities, and small businessmen, "have not yet attained the goal of social and economic justice, even though in these seven years they have made undisputed progress toward it."

He told the farmers it is more than ever important to maintain a flexibly adaptable national farm program, and "it is more than ever important to have a Government in Washington that can act to protect the interests of our farmers, as well as our businessmen, when foreign trade conditions are upset."

Wallace thanked farmers of all parties for "cooperating in an unprecedented effort" which he said led at last to national farm unity and which he said culminated "with the constructive and sympathetic help of the 'the New Deal'" in the first national farm program "carried out for farmers and by farmers."

He, too, praised Secretary of State Hull's trade agreements, which he said have helped the farmer to regain his export market. Enumerating points in the present program, Wallace said most important of all from the farmers' standpoint "is the nonpartisan farmer control which has been a cardinal feature of the farm program since its beginning in 1933."

The farm program, he declared, has "met and conquered" drought, surplus and the Supreme Court's adverse AAA decision—"has survived bitter political attack and unscrupulous misrepresentation." And now, he said, it faces new problems brought on by the European war. Finally he asked farmers to "look forward to completing the task of making the farm family secure in the market place, on the land and in the home."

Postmaster General Farley urged urban support of the farm program "because of the close relationship between farm prosperity and city prosperity."

Despite opposition from some urban interests, Farley said he believed the farmers "have special reason to feel kindly toward those urban representatives in Congress who have voted consistently for farm laws." He declared the farm program "in the long time interests of the cities themselves" and said "I have done what I could to spread an understanding of that fact among my city friends."

Farley proposed that in commemoration of the farm program anniversary the first Saturday or Monday in March be set aside as "Farmers Day" just as the first Monday in September is established as "Labor Day."

As the Senate Appropriations subcommittee approved a $958,000,000 farm bill to finance the farm program, Chairman Russell served notice he will demand a Senate roll call vote on the $212,000,000 parity payment addition. Russell predicted Senate acceptance of the farm bill increases as well as House agreement to the parity amendment.

The expanded Senate measure compared with $807,483,000 recommended by the Budget Bureau, $749,561,000 approved by the House, and the $1,307,780,000 program approved last year.

Not reflected in the $958,000,000 total of the Senate bill was $60,000,000 for soil conservation payments recently provided in a separate deficiency measure; $40,000,000 for REA, which was placed on an RFC loan basis, and the $50,000,000 for the farm tenancy program, which was similarly made subject to an RFC loan.

the door" to a denial of political rights to "millions" who receive benefits from the Government under, for instance, the Social Security Act.

Principle Upheld

However, at that time the tide was so strongly in favor of the Hatch principle that immediately after defeat of Maloney's proposal, the Senate adopted by voice vote two amendments tightening the bill, offered by Senator Clark (Democrat), of Missouri.

These changes would, in effect, exempt from the politics ban only elected officials, and would include within the prohibition even policy-making administrative officers if they held appointive jobs.

Clark maintained that these non-elective officers "have a peculiar facility" to exert political pressure, and he made special reference to State highway commissioners in this respect.

Senator Brown (Democrat), of Michigan, an opponent of Hatch Act extension, offered an amendment to prohibit political activity to a tremendous group of citizens, and to forbid them to make campaign contributions.

Widens Scope

While his audience tittered, Senator Brown proposed to include stockholders and officers of all corporations that benefit from the tariff, obtain loans from the RFC or other Government agencies, or have Government contracts, and all individuals employed as lobbyists.

"This would take care of Ernest Weir and lots of others," smiled Brown, referring to Ernest T. Weir, head of Inland Steel and chairman of the Republican finance committee.

Brown exclaimed that Senator Hatch was "hitting at the $2 contributors to party funds, while I'm hitting at the $300,000 contributors." The Michigan Senator then proceeded to reel off a list of prominent industrialists and others who have contributed large sums to the Republican Party; and he virtually challenged the Republicans to vote for his amendment to prove their political disinterest.

Throughout the debate, Republicans almost without exception maintained discreet silence, content to watch the Democrats fight openly among themselves.

Roosevelt Urges U.S. Rule Water Carriers

Overrides Opposition Of Wallace, Land And Woodring

Interstate Commerce Commission regulation of domestic water carriers appeared likely yesterday when President Roosevelt expressed the hope that the necessary legislation would be enacted at this session of Congress.

Mr. Roosevelt overrode opposition to such regulation by Secretary of Agriculture Wallace, Secretary of War Woodring and Rear Admiral Emory S. Land, chairman of the Maritime Commission.

Asked at his press conference about a conference Thursday with Senator Wheeler (Democrat), of Montana, he said he told Wheeler he hoped very much that the conference committee of the House and Senate, which is trying to compromise rail bills passed by the two houses, would agree and obtain final passage of the legislation.

Wheeler, he said, showed him letters by Wallace, Woodring and Land opposing the legislation. He told Wheeler, however, he said, that he felt these letters reflected the interests of the individual agencies, and that, notwithstanding their particular interests, he believed the greatest good for the greatest number should control.

Legislation before the conference group provides, in addition to water-carrier regulation, for broadened Reconstruction Finance Corporation railroad lending power, and permits greater leeway in railroad consolidations. Its object is to bring about more equitable regulation of the different forms of transportation.

Leading members of the conference committee predicted an agreement on differences between the House and Senate bills by the end of this month.

be effected if at all. We can hope to increase its efficiency, however."

Chairman Kennedy said that he will make a fight for an elective city council as an amendment on the reorganization bill, but it is believed that he will accept the compromise Dirksen plan rather than abandon suffrage.

Four of the five members of the subcommittee, it is indicated, will vote against the Kennedy motion. Representative Dan R. McGehee (Democrat), of Mississippi, is an outspoken opponent of local suffrage, and Representative George Bates (Republican), of Massachusetts, has shown no disposition to support it.

Nichols Reticent

While the entire subcommittee has become convinced of the need for municipal reorganization, the majority has been inclined to side with the Commissioners rather than Kennedy and Griffenhagen Associates.

Nichols declined to say what stand he will take on reorganization, but he said he believes some reforms should be effected in the interest of economy and efficiency.

Commissioners Assailed

The Commissioners were assailed again at the final hearing of the reorganization subcommittee by several proponents of local suffrage.

Col. Julius I. Peyser, president of the Security Savings & Commercial Bank, expressed the opinion that if suffrage were granted neither Melvin C. Hazen nor George E. Allen "would stay at the District Building."

Taking issue with members of the Board of Trade and other business interests, Col. Peyser said he found the present form of government unsatisfactory. His father in 1871, he recalled, testified in favor of the commission form of government.

Surprised by Colladay

He expressed surprise that Edward F. Colladay, Republican National Committeeman, should have indorsed the Commissioners "in view of the fact he has been a leading spirit for suffrage many years."

Members of the Board of Trade who testified Thursday in behalf of the Commissioners were criticized by Mrs. Ruth Buchanan, of the Voteless League of Women Voters, at the outset of the hearing.

"These representatives of the Board of Trade may know business," she said, "but I don't think they know anything about the city institutions or Washington slums.

"When they say the Commissioners are doing a good job, it should be remembered that they have access to them. There are hundreds of the underprivileged who have no spokesmen."

A plea for the retention of the department of weights, measures and markets as a separate agency was made by Mrs. Ernest W. Howard, of the Federation of Women's Clubs, who objected to the Seal plan for transferring it to the Police Department.

A proposal that the administrative assistant provided in the Seal bill be paid $10,000 or $12,000 a year so that a capable man could be obtained was offered by Mrs. Elizabeth Sullivan, of the Georgetown Progressive Citizens Association.

James McNamara, of the Hotel and Restaurant Employes International Alliance, spoke in favor of suffrage.

Ickes Attacks 'Mining Congress' As a 'Lobby'

Interior Secretary Ickes yesterday struck back at the American Mining Congress for criticism of his action in making public the report of Federal investigators on the Bartley, W. Va., mine explosion in which 91 lives were lost.

The organization had accused Ickes of presenting one-sided conclusions based on information which the mine management had given investigators in strict confidence.

Ickes said "the lobby which calls itself 'The American Mining Congress' seems to want the facts concerning mine disaster hushed up."

Detroit Prosecutor Defies Suspension

Detroit, March 8 (AP).—Duncan C. McCrea, Wayne County (Detroit) prosecutor, who has laughed at two indictments charging him with protecting gambling, and said he welcomed Gov. Dickinson's order for ouster proceedings, refused today to be suspended from his office pending the outcome of the ouster hearings.

His suspension was ordered by the Governor today on a petition from State Attorney General Thomas Read.

In a lengthy speech, Senator Neely (Democrat), of West Virginia, urged a substitute bill, which would require State and local government agencies to adopt merit systems if they receive Federal funds. Neely charged "the State House gang of West Virginia" with imposing an assessment on State employes, and displayed letters and checks to prove the point.

Federal Employes Get $195,055 'Raise' in January

Government employes in Washington received a $195,055 "raise" in their January pay roll over the month before, with but 12 more workers on the list, it was shown yesterday.

It was explained that the increases involved extensive changes in the employment rolls of major agencies.

The Civil Service Commission reported that 127,814 Government employes in the District received $22,794,111. The preceding month, with 12 fewer employes, the District's Federal employe pay roll was $22,590,656.

'Beady-Eyed' Bandit Gets 12 to 39 Years

10 Other Burglars And Robbers Also Sentenced by Gordon

Eleven burglars and robbers—including David H. Martin, the 25-year-old colored "Beady-Eyed Bandit"—were sentenced to prison in the District Court yesterday.

Justice Peyton Gordon sentenced Martin to serve a total of 12 to 39 years in the penitentiary for eight offenses to which he had pleaded guilty.

The sentences yesterday concluded a block of speedy prosecutions by the staff of District Attorney David A. Pine. Only one of the 11 men jailed was indicted more than two weeks ago. Meanwhile, two persons were arrested yesterday on charges of violating the narcotics laws.

Martin raided homes and apartments in the Northwest section for several weeks, threatening women and escaping with several hundred dollars' worth of loot. Last week he pleaded guilty to 15 indictments.

A few days ago, however, Martin wrote to Justice Gordon a plea for mercy, in which he stated that he was not guilty of seven of the offenses, but had pleaded guilty because he "had a record" and feared no one would believe his denial.

Investigation Planned

Justice Gordon assigned John H. Wilson to defend Martin, and yesterday permitted the man to withdraw his guilty plea in the seven cases, but sentenced him in the other eight. The prosecutor's staff planned a thorough investigation of the seven cases, recalling that two women identified an innocent man as having committed one of the crimes which Martin confessed. They subsequently identified Martin and the mistakenly accused man was released.

Others sentenced yesterday were:

By Justice Peyton Gordon:

Willie Ritter, colored, 23, one to two years for housebreaking and larceny, pleaded guilty.

Joseph L. Price, 31, one to two, probated, for unauthorized use of an automobile, pleaded guilty.

Wilbur B. Johnson, 21, colored, one to two years for unauthorized use of automobile.

Charles E. Cain, 24, colored, three to six years for three instances of housebreaking and larceny, pleaded guilty.

Clarence W. Coates, 35, three to five years for assault with intent to rob, pleaded guilty.

Lee Wing Quong, 42, 12 to 18 months for sale and possession of narcotics, also fined $50.

Agnes Wood, 31, colored, one to two years for unlawful sale and possession of narcotics, also $25 fine, pleaded guilty.

By Justice Daniel W. O'Donoghue:

Augustine Bowser, 30, colored, three to six years for housebreaking and larceny, pleaded guilty.

Leroy Davis, 21, colored, three to four years for housebreaking and larceny, pleaded guilty.

Jerry Lee Brooks, two to four years for unauthorized use of automobile, after conviction by a jury; sentence to begin after he serves another sentence of two to three years for housebreaking and larceny which had been probated; Justice O'Donoghue revoked the probation.

William Isaiah Butler, 20, colored, 12 to 15 months for housebreaking and larceny, pleaded guilty.

The 1100 block of Thirteenth street northwest, littered with rooming house operator's furniture

When the proprietor of the rooming house at 1114 Thirteenth street northwest and the adjoining apartment enterprise at 1116 couldn't pay the rent in advance the landlord came and yesterday there was an exodus generally, the block filling with evicted furniture and the rumble of moving vans hauling the belongings of 13 lodgers.

The proprietor, W. H. Graham, retreated then to a third enterprise, another rooming house at 1112 Thirteenth street, where he had rented all but one room and into this he piled his effects, mattresses, chairs, beds, tables and the like, reaching nearly to the ceiling.

There he burrowed out a tiny hollow among the pile and seated himself, saying: "Increasing rents, increasing rents. My eight years of striving and struggling come to this."

Eight years of honest work, he repeated. He had tried to make a go of the enterprises, working early and late. Two alarm clocks ticked on a table while he talked. "Increasing rents . . . first $100, then they ordered a fire escape erected; up jumped the rent $25; I had to fix the plumbing and fix the roof. I was continuously fixing something, one thing and another thing. Life wasn't worth the effort," he said.

Distressed and his eyes misting at times, Graham could not say just how many tenants he had had. But Mrs. Graham who sat knitting in the burrow among the pile, estimated that there were three families in 1116 and ten roomers in 1114.

Farm Mortgage Monopoly Seen In Interest Cut

FCA Chief Says U. S. Would Take Large Share of All Such Debt

Government control of a "substantial part" of the Nation's $7,500,000,000 farm loan business would result from proposals to revise the Farm Credit Administration system, the House Agriculture Committee was told yesterday.

FCA Governor A. G. Black said that if farm loans were offered at 3 per cent as proposed, the "Federal Government would not have all of the farm loan business but would have a substantial part of it." Its present share is a third of the total farm credit.

Black testified on a bill sponsored by Representative Jones (Democrat), of Texas, chairman of the Agriculture Committee; Senator La Follette (Progressive), of Wisconsin; Senator Wheeler (Democrat), of Montana, and Senator Bankhead (Democrat), of Alabama.

Would Cut Interest

The bill, which also is before the Senate Banking and Currency Committee, would:

Reduce to 3 per cent farm loan interest rates, which now are 3½ per cent on Land Bank loans, first mortgage obligations, and 4 per cent on land bank commissioner loans, second mortgage obligations.

Set up Government guarantee for Land Bank bonds.

Retire capital stock of the land banks and eliminate the present arrangement whereby farm borrowers take 5 per cent of their loan in stock.

Provide for refinancing farms where the debt is greater than the farm's productive value.

Black told the committee he did not want to appear in the position of approving or disapproving the measure until the Agriculture Department reported on it.

Hardships Forecast

It was suggested, however, that effect of the bill would be to liquidate the land banks in their present form, based on cooperative ownership by farmers. Retiring stock at par would work hardship on the Government where stock now is less than par and in other sections where it is above par the move would hit stockholders, it was said.

In response to questioning by Representative Cooley (Democrat), of North Carolina, Black said the Farm Security Administration should not be transferred to the Farm Credit Administration. The latter was removed from independence to the Department of Agriculture by Presidential reorganization order.

Black said an FSA-FCA merger should not be made until there has been more experience with Farm Security financing. He said the FSA dealt with matters with which his agency had had no experience.

Cooley asked whether emergency seed and feed loans might not be taken from FCA and given to FSA. Black said this move had been considered but added that nothing is to be done this year. Black said FCA's transfer to Agriculture had been made without consulting either Secretary Wallace or the credit agency in advance.

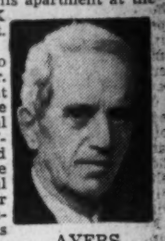
Grover Ayers Dies; Fought D. C. Suffrage

Saw Washington As Neutral Spot For All Citizens

Grover W. Ayers, leader of the antisuffrage forces in the District of Columbia, died yesterday after a long illness in his apartment at the Bradford, 1800 K street northwest. He was 65.



AYERS

For nearly two decades, Mr. Ayers had fought proposals to give Washington local or national suffrage. He waged his fight before Congressional committees, over the air, in newspaper columns and in his book, "A City-State in the United States."

He contended that Washington, Madison and the other founders knew exactly what they were doing when they established a 10-mile square Capital City and gave Congress "exclusive legislation" over it.

The founding fathers, he insisted, wanted a National Capital free from petty politics and local disturbances, a neutral spot where all citizens of the United States could meet and discuss national problems.

Cited London Riots

"Riots in London and Paris had much to do with this decision," Ayers said. "And it must be remembered, too, that our own Congress had been chased from Philadelphia by a mob of unpaid Revolutionary soldiers. This was meant to be essentially a Federal city, not a city-state as some people want it to be."

Mr. Ayers was born in Vincennes, Ind., July 13, 1875. His father, who served under Grant in the Civil War, and his mother, Sarah Ellen Ayers, were descended from old New England stock.

Mr. Ayers had planned to read law and enter politics, but ill health in his youth cut short his education. For many years he traveled in the West doing advertising and publicity work. He first came to Washington in 1892 to attend a G. A. R. reunion. He settled here in 1918 and shortly thereafter formed the Ten Mile Square Club in opposition to suffrage.

An Active Citizen

He was a member of the West End Citizens Association and a former delegate to the Federation of Citizens Association.

He is survived by his wife, the former Louise De Wolfe, whom he married in 1926; a brother in Ohio, and a sister in California.

The funeral will be Monday at 2:30 p. m. at the Lee funeral home, Fourth street and Massachusetts avenue northeast, and will be conducted by the Rev. John Rustin, of the Mount Vernon Methodist Church.

Postlude

By Ray C. B. Brown.

Friday Morning Music Club presents Helen Campbell Williams, pianist; Wilhelmina Spanhoofd Walter, soprano, and Joseph M. Florestano, barytone. Accompanists: Tera Bartley Sells and Dorothy Radde Emery.

At yesterday's meeting of the Friday Morning Music Club in Barker Hall, there was an illustration of the fact that virtually every miscellaneous program, like a varied landscape, has an elevation. The mesa on this occasion was the group of songs offered by Wilhelmina Spanhoofd Walter, whose light soprano voice and engaging manner of interpretation pleased her auditors. Contrasts of mood did not disrupt, but strengthened the artistic integrity of the group.

She began with "Marietta's Lute Song" from Erich Korngold's "Die tote Stadt," which has a wistful and imaginative quality. This established an atmosphere of poesy conducive to enjoyment of the songs that followed: Debussy's "Mandoline," the "Crepuscolo" of Ottorino Respighi, "To a Young Gentleman" and "Highwaymen" from John Alden Carpenter's "Water Colors," and Bainbridge Crist's "Colored Stars."

Helen Campbell Williams, whose piano technique is fluent but not flawless, contributed a group of solos on the familiar side. The Brahms gavotte on a theme by Gluck was followed by the first movement of Bach's "Concerto in the Italian Style," Chopin's C sharp minor waltz and A flat major etude, and Lecuona's "Malaguena."

Joseph M. Florestano, a young barytone with a voice of lyric timbre, selected an aria from Fevrier's "Monna Vanna" for his first number, and in a later group presented Scarlatti's "Gia il sole dal Gange," Donaudy's "O del mio amato ben," Respighi's "Nebbie" and Rossini's "La Danze." Both singers were fortunate in their accompanists, Tera Bartley Sells and Dorothy Radde Emery, who were able and consentient aides.

Washington National Ballet presents the season's second "Friday at Nine" at Wardman Park Theater. Program: "Melodrama" (Dorothy Radde Emery), "Danse Macabre" (Saint-Saens), Suite of Dances (Debussy), "Ceremony to the Sun God" (Justin Elie).

Collaboration between the Washington National Ballet and the Washington Composers' Club again was in evidence last evening when Dorothy Radde Emery's amusing burlesque of the old stock-company days, "Melodrama," was presented at Wardman Park Theater, heading the second program of the season. The repetition of this pantomime from last year's repertory was welcome, for Mrs. Emery's music cleverly underscores the foiling of the slick city villian's attempt to break up a rustic romance, and also catches the lilt of the folk dance.

Repeated from last season as well was Lisa Gardiner's choreographic version of Saint-Saens' "Danse Macabre," which went much better this time on a larger stage. Since the compeser's idea of a skeletal revel in a graveyard could not be realistically visualized in the theater, Miss Gardiner devised a plot that alludes to the age of the Decameron. Death is host to a band of merrymakers, and all goes well until he unmasks and strikes them with the plague.

To Miss Gardiner's ingenuity the spectators owed a decorative and pleasing suite of dances arranged to five of Debussy's piano pieces. The choice of the compositions was well made from such abstract patterns as the two arabesques, the "Plus que lente" waltz, the "Clair de lune" and the "Danse."

The new ballet on the program was "Ceremony to the Sun God," in which music by the Haitian composer, Justin Elie, was adapted to a story by Christine Stewart. Ritualistic in choreography and costumed in the Mayan mode, the ballet combined dance and pantomime in a depiction of the age-old sacrifice of a chosen youth.

Interludes of solos were provided by Tatiana Gnoocheff and Dawn Tagi, the former presenting two Hindu dances in the manner of Ruth St. Denis, and the latter a captivating czardas. The pianist upon whom most of the responsibility for accompanying fell was Madelyn Sheppard, who was assisted in two of the ballets by Mrs. Emery and Herbert Herzfeld at a second piano.

End of Youth

D. C. Boy Gets 10 Years in Holdup

Mrs. Thelma Wilt, of Washington, yesterday heard her 18-year-old son, Mack Lloyd Wilt, whom she persuaded to surrender on a robbery charge, sentenced to serve 10 years in the Baltimore house of correction for a $1,500 bank holdup. She collapsed as Judge Edwin T. Dickerson pronounced sentence in Baltimore.

Mack, former quarterback for the Baltimore City College junior varsity football team, and an employe of a Baltimore airplane factory, had pleaded guilty to the holdup charge.

Two other youths, Lester E. De Witt, 19, and Dean Dentry, 21, convicted of complicity, were released by Judge Dickerson. Dentry was placed on parole and sentence of one year was suspended in De Witt's case.

$92,769,021 Voted In Deficiency Bill

By the Associated Press

The Senate Appropriations Committee yesterday aprovved a $92,769,021 deficiency appropriation bill. The total included $60,000,000 for soil conservation. A like amount is to be deducted from soil conservations to be available later.

The bill was $2,699,882 greater than that voted by the House.

Preview of Spring To Continue

Yesterday's taste of spring will continue through today, at least, the Weather Bureau promised last night. The prediction is continued fair with slightly colder temperatures—but it will be warm in the sun.

The highest temperature registered yesterday was 49 at 3:50 p. m. The lowest was 32 at 7 a. m. The thermometer is expected to drop to 30 before dawn today.

And while strollers unbuttoned their overcoats yesterday another "first robin" was reported—in fact, two of them. A. C. Hegney, of 508 I street northwest, said he saw the redbreasts hopping about the lawn on Capitol Hill.

Spring, it appears, is just around the corner.

Funeral Today For N. J. Ward, Head of D.C. Firm

Funeral services for Nathan J. Ward, president of N. J. Ward Co., who died Monday at Miami, Fla., will be held today at 2 p. m. at his home, 1726 Varnum street northwest, with burial in Cedar Hill Cemetery.

A native of Virginia, Mr. Ward came to Washington many years ago, establishing the firm of commission merchants of which he was head. He was active in Masonic affairs, being a member of St. John's Lodge, past high priest of Columbia Chapter, R. A. M., and a member of Columbia Commandery, Knights Templar, and Almas Temple of the Shrine.

Surviving are his wife, Mrs. Mary Ernestine Ward; a stepson, Arthur Adams, and a brother and two sisters in Baltimore.

Death Sentence For D. C. Utility

The Securities and Exchange Commission last night announced the start of "death sentence" proceedings against two more major utility holding company systems, the North American Co., of New York, and the United Light & Power Co., of Chicago.

North American, with assets of $1,247,000,000, operates in the District of Columbia and nine States, including Virginia and Maryland, while the $577,000,000 United Light & Power Co. operates in 11 States.

The SEC seeks to confine operations of utility systems to a single geographical area.

District: Return must be filed, accompanied by half of the annual payment, by April 15.

Maryland: Return and entire entire annual payment must be submitted by March 15.

Virginia: Return must be filed by June 1, and the entire amount is due on or before December 5.

2 Men Kill Selves Here, 1 in Leap, Other by Pistol

Two men killed themselves yesterday, one by leaping 125-feet from Calvert Street Bridge, the other by firing a bullet into his brain.

John W. Brown, 57, of 1954 Calvert street northwest, an unemployed bricklayer, climbed over the bridge railing about 12:45 p. m. and dropped to his death on a pile of steel casings.

Brown was still alive when two men working nearby reached him and he survived until he reached Emergency Hospital almost an hour later.

Early yesterday morning, Kay Greathouse, 39-year-old restaurant proprietor, was found dead behind the bar in his establishment, 929 Tenth street northwest, by his wife, Annette. A .25-caliber German Luger was on the floor nearby.

Coroner A. Magruder MacDonald certified both deaths were suicides.

Vincent C. Burke Is Reappointed D. C. Postmaster

Vincent C. Burke was appointed for four years as Washington's postmaster by President Roosevelt yesterday.

BURKE

The nomination was included in a long list of postmastership appointments which the President forwarded to the Senate for confirmation.

Burke's first four-year term in the $10,000-a-year post ends April 1. A Post-office Department career man, he started out as a clerk in Louisville, Ky., his home, more than 30 years ago.

'Exit Smiling' Beauty Writes, Leaps to Death

Detroit, March 8 (AP).—A tall, raven-haired Michigan beauty who deserted her husband and child seven years ago for New York's bright lights marked the words "exit smiling" on the wall of her hotel room before dawn today and leaped 17 stories to death.

In her room police found a note professing love for William S. Paley, of New York, president of the Columbia Broadcasting System.

Relatives here identified her as Geraldine Kenyon Bourque, wife of an automobile worker at nearby Pontiac, Mich. She had registered at the hotel as "J. Stoddard, New York."

At New York, Paley said he had met a "Johanna Stoddard" about a year ago; that she sought his aid but had no talent that would justify putting her on the air. "Mrs. Paley and I both talked to her several times trying to straighten her out," Paley said, adding that finally she wrote him she had "developed an emotional attachment" for him.

Andy Kelley Gets 'the Works;' 300 Call Him a 'Regular Guy'

Andy Kelley, the man in the black derby and horn-rimmed glasses, was "given the works" last night by 300 friends who gathered at the Willard Hotel to tell him what they thought of him as newspaperman and theater lover, citizen and neighbor.

Summed up, they thought he was a "regular guy."

They gave him a bunch of telegrams from well-wishers; they gave him a collection of autographs by 300 guests; they gave him a watch, inscribed—"To Andy Kelley, because we love him." And they didn't forget his wife (despite it being a stag affair) and through Andy presented her with some pearls.

Commissioner Melvin C. Hazen, chairman of the reception, praised Kelley as an "honest, progressive journalist," as an "enthusiastic worker in any cause to help others." Charlie Garvin, secretary of the National Stationers Association and a neighbor, said: "He loves the theater, the people in it, the people who go to it."

"Andy Kelley is not a great man," remarked Joseph P. Tumulty, attorney and former secretary to Woodrow Wilson. "Greatness can often mean coldness. But Andy Kelley has great qualities—kindness, tenderness, consideration, tolerance, love of human beings and a heart of gold."

Similar sentiments were expressed by Alvin L. Newmyer, attorney and toastmaster; Dick Wilson, president, National Press Club; Mark Foote, president, Gridiron Club; the Rev. John Cartwright; Representative Bloom, of New York; Pete Mack, of National Broadcasting Co., and Carter T. Barron, of Loew's theaters.

"I feel a good deal of guilt in getting all this praise," responded Kelley. "It should really be shared by so many others here."

Each guest donned black derby and horn-rimmed glasses on arrival, so there were 300 Andy Kelleys.

A native of Maine, Andrew Raymond Kelley attended school in Boston, started as a copy boy with the Boston Herald transferred to the Boston American, and came to Washington March 3, 1913, as correspondent. Later he held various posts with the Washington Times and Washington Post, and until recently had been dramatic critic of the Washington Times for more than 10 years.

Entertainers included George O'Connor, Gene Archer, Randell Sisters, Lotus Girls, Carmen Miranda, Mills Brothers, Benny Davis, Ted Lewis, Bobby Clark, Hylton Sisters, Sid Marion and Cliff Hall, and the "Kellossal" Orchestra directed by Leon Brusiloff, Morgan Baer, Dave McWilliams, Pete Macias, Meyer Goldman, Bill Strickland, Bill McCune, Barnee and Sidney.

Rabbi J. G. Heller Talks Tomorrow At Hadassah Fete

Rabbi James G. Heller, of the Cincinnati Conservatory of Music, will discuss "The Place of Palestine in Jewish Life Today" at the annual banquet of the Washington Chapter of Hadassah at 7 p. m. tomorrow at the Mayflower Hotel.

Rabbi Heller

Meyer Davis will conduct his orchestra at the gathering. Guests will include Mrs. Paul Muni, wife of the actor. More than 1,200 persons are expected.

Hadassah, the women's Zionist organization of America, is the agency for Youth Aliyah, in addition to its regular program of health work in Palestine. Youth Aliyah removes young people between the ages of 15 and 17 from countries of Central Europe to Palestine where they are taught trades.

Rabbi Heller has been mentioned as a candidate for presidency of the Zionist Organization of America. He is a graduate of Tulane and Cincinnati universities.

Maj. Fox to Lead At Temple Corps

Maj. F. F. Fox will conduct services at the Temple Corps, Salvation Army, 606 E street northwest, tomorrow at 11 a. m. and 8 p. m. The Temple Band and choristers will render the music.

The Divisional Commander and Mrs. Charles Dodd will lead services at 11 a. m. and 8 p. m. at the Southeast Corps, 733 Eighth street southeast. Services at the Georgetown Corps, 1075 Jefferson street northwest, set for the same hours, will be conducted by Capt. Ben Jones.

Lieut. Col. William S. Quirk will lead revival services at 11 a. m. and 8 p. m. at the Northeast Corps, 715 I street northeast.

Model Aircraft To Vie Tomorrow

Model aircraft enthusiasts will gather at Seminary Field, near Bailey's Cross Roads, Va., tomorrow for their annual meet.

Events for gas, rubber-band and glider models will begin at 10 a. m. and continue through the day. Prizes in each class will be offered. The affair is sanctioned by the District Recreation Association, and NAA officials will be on hand to judge winners. Last year's event drew more than 4,000 spectators.

Neighborhood Council Discusses Safety

Safety and recreation were discussed at a meeting of the Central Neighborhood Council yesterday at the Y. W. C. A., 614 E street northwest. Robert W. Eaves, chairman, presided.

The recreation committee reported on plans for volunteer leadership for the downtown area of Washington.

British, French Industrialists Sign Permanent Pact to Coordinate Trade

Allies Urged To Use Each Other's Arms

Purpose Is to Free Both Nation's Plants For Big Export Drive

By the United Press

London, March 8.—British and French industrialists today signed, with full approval of their governments, an agreement for close coordination of manufactures and commerce, not only for the duration of the war but permanently thereafter.

Signatories were the British Federation of Industries and the Confederation Generale du Patronat Francais.

The point of the agreement of greatest wartime significance provides that the two groups will recommend that their governments utilize one another's armaments factories as much as possible in order to release a portion of the industries of both countries for a wartime export trade drive.

Other points included agreement:

That export trade shall be conducted so as to assure a fair return to the producer, with full regard for consumer interests.

To promote more detailed agreements between individual industries in order to maintain such price levels in the respective export markets as to insure increased consumption of Anglo-French goods.

To import as much as possible from each other instead of from third parties.

To avoid competition in purchase of raw materials and other supplies in foreign markets.

Paris, March 8 (AP).—The commercial accord with Russia which provided preferential tariff treatment for a variety of Russian products will not be renewed upon its expiration March 15, importers were notified today.

They were advised that thereafter all Soviet imports will be subject to regular tariff treatment except petroleum products, given special consideration under a separate accord.

Dollars Commandeered

London, March 8.—Under a rigorous extension of its foreign exchange control announced tonight, the British government has taken a significant new step toward increasing its supply of foreign currency for purchase abroad of war materials and foodstuffs.

Roughly, the order provides that a list of important exports from Britain and "the empire producing countries" for specified foreign markets, including the United States, shall be paid for henceforth in foreign currency. Under the existing wartime regulations, the government will take over this currency as it accumulates and pay British exporters and the like in sterling.

The exports as listed are whisky, furs, tin, rubber, jute and jute manufacturers. The markets which henceforth are required to pay in foreign currency include the Americas—except territories of the British Empire, French dependencies and Argentina—all non-American territories under the sovereignty of the United States, Belgium and Belgian African colonies, the Netherlands and the Dutch East Indies and Switzerland.

The currencies specified in which payments may be made are United States dollars, Swiss francs, guilders, Dutch East Indian guilders and belgas.

Helsinki Denies Report Fighting Has Been Stopped

Helsinki (Saturday), March 9 (AP).—A Finnish government spokesman, questioned concerning reports that fighting had ceased on the Karelian Isthmus, declared this morning "the situation has not changed."

The spokesman made his comment shortly after midnight. He pointed out that yesterday's army communique was dated "noon, March 8," and made no mention of an end to hostilities which have raged on the isthmus since last November.

"There will be no official comment on all of these rumors," he said.

said that the Russians had lost heavily as they attacked all day yesterday against the northwest coast of Viipuri Bay. Fighting raged around the capes and islands at the mouth of the bay until nightfall, but the Finns held their positions.

Eight batteries of artillery which the Russians moved out on the frozen surface of the bay to support their attacks were destroyed by Finnish coastal guns, which also blasted numerous enemy tanks, the communique declared.

It said the Finnish air force had bombed and machine-gunned "close-packed enemy units, transport vehicles, tank and troop columns and artillery batteries crowded on the islands and ice of Viipuri Bay."

Between Viipuri and the Vuoksi River the Russians failed in local attacks in which they lost seven tanks and two armored cars. Still farther west on the Karelian Isthmus, the Finns said, they repulsed an attempted crossing of the Vuoksi River, while in the vicinity of Paakola the bodies of 400 Russians killed in fighting the previous day were counted in front of the Finnish lines.

The fresh successes which the Finns recorded northeast of Lake Ladoga occurred near the Kollaa River, where hundreds of Russians have died in repeated assaults during the past week. The Finns gave no details concerning the battle except to say that a Russian attack had been repelled and the enemy left 2,000 dead.

London (Saturday), March 9 (U.P.) The Moscow radio broadcast today that Russian troops had captured six islands in Viipuri Bay.

Quoting the Russian military communique for Friday, the station announced that Red soldiers had captured 12 guns, 57 machine guns and 3,000,000 cartridges, and brought down two Finnish planes.

New Figures on the Peace Horizon

Associated Press WIREPHOTO

Efforts to mediate peace between Russia and Finland yesterday struck a swift pace with arrival in Berlin of Per Evind Svinhufvud (right), former President of Finland, and the reported arrival in Stockholm of the Russian Marshal Vassily Blucher (left) vere than those which Finland refused to accept last fall before she was invaded.

They are understood to include the ceding of the entire Karelian Isthmus, the besieged city of Viipuri, the entire northern coast of Lake Ladoga, the Hango Peninsula and its naval port and at least a portion of the Petsamo district in the Arctic.

Finnish Foreign Minister Vaino Tanner, talking by telephone with the Stockholm newspaper Aftonbladet yesterday, said Russo-Finnish contacts remained unbroken. Contact is known to have been established between Eljas Erkko, Finnish Minister to Sweden, and Mme. Alexandra Kollontay, Soviet Minister to Sweden.

Copenhagen, March 8.—Sweden, in anxiety to keep Scandinavia from being drawn into war, today pushed a quick drive for peace in the Russian-Finnish conflict.

Her effort centered in Stockholm, which had established contact with Helsinki and Moscow, but extended in its ramifications to capitals of neutrals and nations engaged in Europe's other war.

Reports of the almost simultaneous arrival in the Swedish capital of Finnish and Russian field marshals led to excited talk in Scandinavia of a possible conference between the two.

Marchal Baron Carl Gustaf Mannerheim and Marshal Vassily Blucher, once Russia's powerful Far Eastern army commander, were said to be in the Swedish capital, center of the new effort for peace.

Finland was known to be pondering Swedish-transmitted Russian peace terms, described as more severe than those she rejected on the eve of the war's outbreak.

(Well informed sources in London said the British government believed that the United States might be asked to mediate the Finnish-Russian conflict. Reuters, British news agency, reported from Stockholm that Frederick A. Sterling, United States minister, conferred there this morning with Eljas Erkko, Finnish minister.

[From Moscow, the International News Service reported that American Ambassador Lawrence Steinhardt had conferred for two hours with Premier and Foreign Commissar V. M. Molotov, and that the conference came only a short while after Steinhardt had been closeted at the Swedish Legation where foreign observers have no doubt he discussed the latest developments in Swedish efforts to end the war.]

(President Roosevelt said the United States Government had received no rquest for mediation in the Finnish-Russian war. He added that such matters were of a nature that could not be discussed even if negotiations of that kind were going on. A State Department official said the department was following with greatest interest the reports from abroad of Finnish-Russian peace prospects.)

That Berlin also was keenly interested in the peace move and might be a center for negotiations was indicated by the arrival in Copenhagen and immediate departure for Berlin of Per Ervind Svinhufvud, 79-year-old former President of Finland. It was believed the Finns, through him, might ask Germany to use her influence at Moscow for ending the war.

From Helsinki came evidences of Finnish determination to fight rather than bow to a victorious Russia.

But the Finnish government was said to have placed the choice of peace or war in the hands of Mannerheim, and a Stockholm newspaper, quoted Finnish Foreign Minister Vaino Tanner as saying his government was "in contact with a go-between for the Soviet government and this contact has not been broken."

Finns Request Nazis to Mediate

Reich's participation in Sweden's efforts to attain a truce met with evasive answers. Pressed for a reply, a German spokesman stated, "I cannot answer, as I do not know."

He reiterated, however, that the German attitude toward the Russo-Finnish conflict remains unchanged, namely, that of strict neutrality."

Authentic German quarters are convinced the Anglo-French Allies are anxious to keep the Soviet-Finnish war going full blast, and it is claimed London and Paris are "fanatically endeavoring to convert Scandinavia into a battle zone."

Negotiations Acknowledged

Copyright by New York Times

Stockholm, March 8.—Finnish confirmation that termination of the conflict is being discussed was published this afternoon, with the following statement by Finnish Foreign Minister Tanner.

"The Finnish government acknowledges that the Soviet government has now forwarded claims, which are considered to augment the claims made last year. But as yet not knowing the full extent of the proposals, momentarily, I am unable to state the Finnish government's attitude toward the new claims. I can add, that through intermediaries, I am in contact with the Soviet Union, and that this contact has not yet been broken."

cupy southern Sweden, and cut off Finland's supplies from that country and, finally, cooperate with the Russians in conquering the Finns.

Probably never in recent history has a nation faced such desperate alternatives as the Finns face in Helsinki tonight. If they bow to the Russian demands, they return to Russian domination. If they go on fighting they will probably be crushed. If they seek open Allied intervention, they, at the same time, invite a German attack. Finland's minister to Great Britain, George Achates Gripenberg, confirmed today that his country is negotiating indirectly with Russia for peace.

"We have always been ready for peace with Russia, but not on any terms," he said.

As to the terms Russia had forwarded, however, or to the details of his conversation with British Foreign Secretary Viscount Halifax, he had nothing to say.

It is disclosed officially, however, that British volunteers are already in Finland, although it is stated they are still not fighting.

A spokesman for the Finnish legation said that Col. Kermit Roosevelt would leave London soon to take over the British volunteer force, which it is said may reach about 3,000. One hundred men, many of the officer type averaging about 32 years of age, are applying to go to Finland at the Finish air bureau, every day, but it is not stated how many of these are being actually dispatched.

The general belief in diplomatic quarters here is that the Russian peace terms included a demand that Finland cede the entire Karelian Isthmus, the port of Hango, and its adjoining territory with the islands of Suursaari, Seiskari, Lavansaari, Tytarsaari, Kolvisto, Port Petsamo, the dismissal of Baron Mannerheim and the establishment of a government which would work in close collaboration with Russia.

At the foreign office tonight there was little comment on the peace talks, and Swedish quarters resented suggestions that Sweden was putting pressure on Finland to cease fighting. There it was stated that Sweden was merely acting as a postoffice to pass on messages from Russia to Finland.

France Would Aid

Copyright by New York Times

Paris, March 8.—Finland in her tragic emergency must make a new appeal direct to the powers or to the League of Nations, if any greater action is to be taken by France on her behalf, it was declared today by an official foreign office spokesman here.

He said that France had received no such direct appeal and that considerable assistance thus far forwarded by the Allies had been rendered in fulfillment of the decision of the League of Nations. He enumerated 175 airplanes, 496 cannon and other material France has sent, and added:

"France will continue to help, as long as necessary, but for that, the government of Finland must make a formal request."

Two-thirds of the Allied material has been delivered, he said, and the remaining one-third is going forward. In the meantime, Finland never appealed for direct aid except to ask Sweden to send two divisions, with complete equipment, but that request Sweden refused. France and Great Britain, it was stated, had produced more material aid than all the other League members combined.

Finland's position is compared here to that of Czecho-Slovakia just before Munich, and her position if she accepts Russia's terms, it is feared will be precisely that of Czecho-Slovakia, after Munich. The prospect offered the Finns, as it appears to French observers, is the choice of whether to be devoured in a single gulp or to be masticated slowly, in several mouthfuls.

In France, the Scandinavian policy is considered shortsighted and there is some anxiety lest if Russia's demands for Petsamo be satisfied, Sweden will not find the region of Narvik and, indeed, the whole Scandinavian peninsula endangered.

Britons of 23 Called

London, March 8 (U.P.)—Great Britain called 23-year-old reserves to the colors today, a move which will bring to 1,000,000 the number registered for military service.

Approximately 600,000 already were under arms and the new reserves will be absorbed in the armed forces within two weeks.

British Fliers Rain Pamphlets Over Poland

Drop Flares At Leipzig On Return

Daring Flight Made To Cheer Conquered; Nazi Plane Downed

By James MacDonald.
Copyright by New York Times

London, March 8.—Once again Britain's air force has thrown down the gauntlet to Germany's air force without having the challenge accepted. The Royal Air Force today shot down a German air raider off the north coast of Scotland for the second time within two days, and completed safely this morning a 1,500-mile reconnaissance flight over Poland.

The R. A. F. claimed to have flown over Posnan in western Poland, and reported harrassing three German patrol vessels near Borkum Sylt with bombing attacks yesterday.

The British pilots also asserted they had damaged two Nazi seaplanes over the North Sea yesterday.

The German raider downed off the Scottish coast today, not far from the scene of yesterday's air fight, in which a Heinkel bomber was destroyed, was the forty-fifth enemy craft destroyed over or near the British Isles since the war began.

Encountered by a group of British Hurricane single-seat fighting machines, the German dived 2,000 feet almost to the level of the sea. One Hurricane plane undertook to meet the craft in single combat and dived upon the Nazi with its machine gun blazing. A stream of bullets poured into the German machine which suddenly wobbled and then crashed to the ocean.

Last night's reconnaissance flight, in which pamphlets printed in Polish and bearing messages of cheer and encouragement to the Polish people were scattered over Posnan, marked the first time that British planes have been over conquered Polish territory.

Reaching Poznan, 750 miles distance by airline from London and only 150 miles from Berlin, the British fliers found the city well lighted instead of being blacked out.

The flight to France from Poznan was made via Leipzig, scene of Germany's big annual fair. There they added an unwelcome color to that fair by dropping more colored flares and then proceeded to their appointed destination somewhere in France.

Welles Hears French View

Sees Herriot, Blum, Bonnet; Daladier 'Satisfied' by Talk

By the Associated Press

Paris, March 8.—Extension of the French-British alliance into a "Pan-European Union" after the war, French foreign office sources said tonight, is one of the key ideas which French leaders have given Sumner Welles in the first two days of his three-day visit in Paris.

President Roosevelt's emissary is scheduled to conclude his fact-finding mission in France tomorrow with a conversation with Finance Minister Paul Reynaud and a visit to the Polish emigre government at Angers. Welles will leave Sunday for London, where Ambassador Joseph P. Kennedy is making arrangements for his talks with Britain's wartime leaders.

French foreign office sources said the conversations with Welles hinged more on what course the Allies would take after the war than on how the fighting is progressing.

Welles was told that France is strongly united and in a prime state of political and financial health.

Welles also has learned that France and Britain are linked solidly in combat and intend continuing their political and economic cooperation once the fighting ceases.

Among the ideas advanced to Welles, therefore, were the ways and means of forming around the Franco-British nucleus a cooperative international organization, perhaps based on the Pan-American Union scheme.

What part the United States might play in Europe's economic reconstruction also was said to have been canvassed in the conversations with Welles.

In rapid succession Welles today conferred with Jules Jeanney, president of the Senate; Edouard Herriot, president of the Chamber of Deputies; Leon Blum, leader of the Socialist Party; Andre de Laboulaye, former Ambassador to Washington; Vice Premier Camille Chautemps and Minister of Justice Georges Bonnet.

Yesterday he was received by President Albert Lebrun and Premier Edouard Daladier. Daladier expressed himself as "entirely satisfied with my talk."

Laborite Statement

London, March 8 (AP).—Dr. Alfred Salter, Laborite member of Parliament, said tonight he had information linking President Roosevelt's decision to send Sumner Welles to Europe with purported German peace terms which Germany since has repudiated.

"The final factor which decided President Roosevelt to send Welles on his European mission was the receipt from the Swedish Minister in Washington of a document which purported to contain terms upon which as a basis Germany was prepared to discuss peace," Salter said.

Vatican, Franco Locked on Right To Name Bishops

(By Telephone—Copyright, 1940, by the New York Times)

Rome, March 8.—Negotiations between the Vatican and Spain for a new concordat have resulted in a deadlock over appointment of Spanish bishops, it was stated in Vatican circles today.

Premier Franco wishes to retain privileges in the concordat of 1851, whereby the head of the Spanish state had the power to select three candidates for a vacant bishopric, leaving to the Vatican appointment of one of them. The Vatican holds that the privileges granted in 1851 were abrogated with fall of the monarchy.

Dr. Buttrick Urges Roosevelt To Publish Status of Taylor

New York, March 8.—A plea that President Roosevelt make public the status of Myron C. Taylor, whom he appointed as his personal envoy to Pope Pius XII, has been made by the Rev. George A. Buttrick, president of the Council of the Churches of Christ in America.

Dr. Buttrick made the plea in two letters to the President, it was disclosed today in the leading editorial of the "Federal Council Bulletin," the council's official publication.

Dr. Buttrick was requested by the President to confer with him from time to time on problems of world peace as a representative of Protestant churches at the same time he announced Taylor's appointment.

Dr. Buttrick wrote his first letter January 16 after a Vatican announcement had declared that Taylor would be regarded as "the provisional ambassador to the Holy See." He said this was creating serious misgivings among Protestants who "sense a threat to their convictions," and asked the President for "positive public assurance" that he had no desire or intention to establish diplomatic relations with the Vatican.

On January 23, the Assistant Secretary of State, to whom the President referred the inquiry, wrote that Taylor's appointment "does not constitute the inauguration of formal diplomatic relations with the Vatican." This reply was considered at a meeting of the executive committee of the council in New York on January 26, which voted unanimously to oppose the appointment if any indications developed that it might prove to be a stepping-stone to diplomatic relations with the Vatican.

Bethesda Boy To Forego War For Democracy

DeWitt Smith, 19-year-old Maryland University student who joined the Canadian army two months ago to "fight for democracy" is coming home—and democracy will have to take care of itself.

The boy's father, DeWitt Smith, sr., director of domestic operation for the American Red Cross, returned last night from Windsor, Ontario, where he persuaded the youth to leave his Essex Scottish regiment and return to classes at Maryland.

Young Smith will leave Canada as soon as "certain formalities" of mustering him out of service are completed, his father said. The boy expressed willingness to return, he added.

"I told my son," said Smith, "that as long as our Government is not involved in the hostilities, he has no obligations to fulfill. He agreed that his college education should be completed and that there were many other considerations. I look for him to come home in a very short time."

DeWitt, jr., is a sophomore at Maryland. He disappeared from home two months ago and earlier this week wrote his father that he had enlisted in the Canadian army.

'Strike' Revealed On Dash to U. S. Of the Elizabeth

New York, March 8.—Heavy police guards, on land and water, protected the British superliner Queen Elizabeth at her North River berth tonight as details of a seaman's "strike" during the voyage were told.

Seamen signed for the voyage at Clydebank understood they were going on a coastal trip and would be paid $17. When the voyage developed into a dash across the Atlantic they asked and received $120. The term "strike" was used by some of the seamen to describe the meeting at which their demands were made and granted.

Coal Blockade May Reconcile Italy to Nazi-Soviet Alliance

By Herbert L. Matthews.
(By Telephone—Copyright, 1940, by the New York Times.)

Rome, March 8.—The Italian dispute with England assumed a dramatic character tonight when it was announced that German Foreign Minister von Ribbentrop was leaving Berlin tomorrow morning for Rome. This conference with Italian press attacks of singular violence against the British today, showing that tempers are rising over the coal blockade.

Only the bare fact of Ribbentrop's visit has been announced, yet, without knowing the exact purpose of the trip, one must place it in the whole picture of Italy's resentment toward Great Britain and her new reorientation toward Germany and even Russia.

Already, Italian circles are taking the Russo-German viewpoint about the Finnish peace proposals and there are reports of resuming the Italo-Russian trade accord and a general returning to the old policy of anti-Communism, but not anti-Russianism. The Germans are certainly working hard to bring Italy around to a friendlier attitude toward Russia, and so far as Finland is concerned the Italians appear to have forgiven the Soviet.

Therefore, despite Berlin's denial that the Ribbentrop visit has nothing to do with the Finnish peace proposal, it is hard to see how the subject can avoid coming up, particularly as the former Finnish President is also coming here after passing through Berlin.

The fact that an Italian collier bringing English coal to Italy was deliberately attacked and set on fire by a German plane yesterday may seem like a paradoxical development, but it really has a grim significance to Italy. It must now be forgotten that the coal dispute is a triangular conflict not a bilateral one. Germany is playing a big role in it and, indeed, the British here are inclined to blame the Reich for the breakdown of their trade negotiations with Italy, which precipitated the whole quarrel.

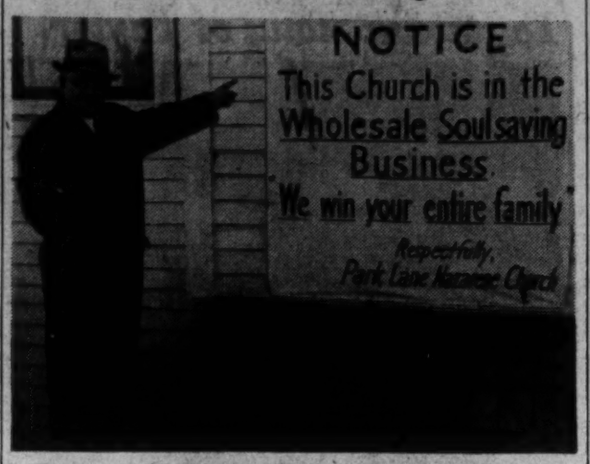
Nazarene Pastor Stresses 'Wholesale Soul-Saving'



The Rev. H. W. Stuneck points to the sign on his church in Arlington

By Robert Tate Allan

"This church is in the wholesale soul-saving business. We win your entire family."

Spread across the front of the Park Lane Nazarene Church in Arlington, Va., that sign is neither an idle boast nor an exaggeration. It is an absolute fact.

For, since the coming of the Rev. Herman J. Stuneck a year and a half ago, the congregation has been amazingly successful in bringing entire families into the fold, and developing them into loyal and efficient workers.

When he assumed charge, there was only one whole family in the congregation—the Rev. and Mrs. Charles Mateer and children. Pastor of the church for several years, Mr. Mateer is now superintendent of the Sunday school.

"Key Method" Explained

Welby Cockrill heads the adult class of the Sunday school, and his son, Lee, the young people's class. The primary and intermediate departments are led by Mrs. Alice Brown and Mrs. A. Simmerly, respectively.

The clergyman explained yesterday he uses the "key method" in drawing entire families into the church. He finds a key person in each family through whom others are reached. It may be the father, son, mother or daughter. This system has proven very satisfactory, he said.

Because he feels that more people will come to the church if impromptu programs are arranged, the pastor never prepares any service themes in advance. Instead, he steps into the pulpit on Sundays, asks the congregation to select a text, and preaches extemperaneously on that theme.

That air of informality also prevails in the Sunday school.

Wife Also a Minister

Musical and other talents are never wasted in the Park Lane church, thanks to the efforts of the pastor, who has been instrumental in developing much latent talent, particularly among the younger generation. A small orchestra is now forming. While there is no organized choir, the congregational singing is among the best to be found in the county.

The pastor is one of the few men of the cloth whose wife is also an ordained minister. She is the Rev. Mrs. Stuneck, leader of the Nazarene Church of Laurel, Del., and succeeded her husband in that post, commuting between Arlington and Laurel.

They were married in 1920, when Mr. Stuneck was working his way through Northwestern University, and she had just finished a course at Michigan University. Both pursued graduate work at Northwestern, being ordained later in Detroit.

Started 30 Years Ago

She is one of the six women Assyriologists in America, and at one time taught 12 languages. Mr. Stuneck has served pastorates in Richmond, Baltimore, Chicago and Laurel.

The program for tomorrow at the Nazarene Church will include Sunday school at 9:45 a. m., worship rites and sermon at 11 a. m., young people's meeting at 7 p. m. and services at 8 p. m.

Now located at Uhle and North Nineteenth street, the church had its origin about 30 years ago in what was known as the Park Lane camp meetings nearby. A church building was erected about a year later, and another edifice may be constructed in the near future to accommodate the growing congregation.

Christian Science Topic on 'Man'

"Man" is the subject of the lesson-sermon in all the Churches of Christ, Scientist, tomorrow at 11 a. m. and 8 p. m. Sunday school is at 11 a. m. All are cordially invited to attend the church services including the Wednesday evening meetings at 8 o'clock.

The Golden Text is from Daniel 10:19. "O man greatly beloved, fear not: peace be unto thee, be strong, yea, be strong."

Advent Lutheran Church

Dr. James H. Taylor, pastor, will preach tomorrow at 11 a. m. on "The Crisis in Religion," and at 8 p. m. on "Some Great Conversions."

River Road. The Rev. Virgil M. Cosby's sermon theme for tomorrow at 11 a. m. will be "Does God Care?" The Bible school will meet at 9:45 a. m., and youth groups at 7 p. m., M. P. Richmond addressing the Builders' Society, and Helen Brewton the Pioneers. The Bible school officers and teachers will meet on Thursday at 8 p. m.

Chevy Chase. Dr. J. Hillman Hollister tomorrow at 7 p. m. will conduct a communicant class for senior high school students who are considering joining with the church at Easter. "Eye to Eye" will be his 11 a. m. sermon theme. The annual men's supper, preceding the every-member canvass, will be held tomorrow at 6:30 p. m.

New York Avenue.—Dr. Peter Marshall will preach tomorrow at 11 a. m. on "Hearts and Treasures" and at 8 p. m. on "In Search of Faith." The choir, under Charles Dana Beaschler, will sing "In a Monastery Garden," by Ketelbey, at the latter service.

Covenant-First.—The Lord's Supper will be celebrated tomorrow at 11 a. m., with Dr. Albert J. McCartney, pastor, bringing the sacramental address. The Chancel Choir, directed by Theodore Schaefer, and with Miss Sylvia Meyer, harpist of the National Symphony Orchestra, assisting, will render Gabriel Faure's "Requiem" as a feature of the 5 p. m. choral vesper service.

Metropolitan.—The High School Christian Endeavor Society will be host to the Chevy Chase Epworth League tomorrow at 7:45 p. m., Dr. J. Lowrey Fendrich discussing "Making Life Pay Dividends."

Pastor Blames Anti-Christians For the War

Rev. L. L. Bowers Speaks at Southeast Noonday Services

The Rev. Leslie L. Bowers, pastor of Fifteenth Street Christian Church, yesterday blamed anti-Christians for the present war.

"It is those who will have none of His teachings who have plunged the world into a 'vestibule of perdition'," he said at the Southeast churches' noonday Lenten services at the Penn Theater.

Declaring that the scene of Christ before Pilate is being reenacted today in the halls of government, the clergyman said:

"Christ is standing before world leaders today, asking them to follow His teachings in order to save us from the hell ahead of us."

The Rev. Mr. Bowers was presented by the Rev. Barnard I. Barnes, pastor of the North Carolina Avenue Methodist Church, who will address Monday's service. The First Methodist Church, of which the Rev. A. F. T. Raum is pastor, will conduct the coming week's programs.

The Monday evening joint Lenten services of local Lutheran churches will close this Monday with services at the Augustana Lutheran Church, Sixteenth and V streets northwest, with the Rev. Lewis Koon, of New Market, Va., speaking. A city-wide Lutheran service will be held on Good Friday, March 22, from 12 to 3 p. m. at Reformation Lutheran Church.

The Right Rev. G. Ashton Oldham, D.D., Bishop of Albany, N. Y., will address Epiphany Episcopal noonday Lenten rites, Monday through Friday, at 12:05 p. m.

made herself a "nuisance."

Col. Burleson remarried about a year and a half ago.

Buckner showed newspapermen a telegram dated December 9, received by Mrs. Burleson. It read as follows:

"Mrs. Richard Burleson.

"Name for purpose of delivery only.

"Jefferson Hotel.

"Mrs. Knowlton, with all you took because I was too sick to defend my home against you and even though you sent my mother to her grave in grief, you could not take the many years this day gave to me. You can never take them. The wicked flourish like the green bay tree. May God have mercy on your soul."

Mrs. Burleson, besides her husband, is survived by three sons by a former marriage: Cadet William A. Knowlton, of the United States Military Academy at West Point; Frank W. Knowlton, of Boston, and Robert A. Knowlton, Washington newspaperman.

Post Plans Event for March 13 and 14; 'Alexander's Ragtime Band' to Be Shown to Guests at Harding Hall

American legionnaires of the Government Printing Office yesterday announced plans for a "movie party" March 13 and 14, proceeds to go to The Post-WJSV blood and serum bank fund for Children's Hospital.

W. J. Cassiday, chairman of the arrangements committee, said a full length film program will be presented on each of the two nights in Harding Hall, beginning at 6 p. m. "Alexander's Ragtime Band" will be the feature picture, garnished with several short subjects.

Tickets sell at 25 cents, Cassidy said.

Roy H. Musick is commander of the G. P. O. legion post and Mrs. Beatrice Jacobs is president of the auxiliary unit, joint sponsor of the program. Members of the committee headed by Cassiday are Edwin J. C. Murray, Edward R. Dixon, Massie W. Blankenship, J. Thomas Ford, Mrs. Patsy Yaendole, Mrs. L. Roux, Mrs. Charles Bussius and Mrs. Jacobs.

Receipts yesterday in the blood bank campaign included $65 from the Ladies of Charity, proceeds of a party given February 14; $29 from the Twenty-ninth Division Association, Post No. 29, and $15 from Lincoln Post No. 17, American Legion.

The legion's Police and Fire Post gave a benefit party last night at Joppa Lodge, 4209 Ninth street northwest.

Crawford, Premier Scots Earl, Is Dead at 69

Wigan, England, March 8 (AP).—The Premier Earl of Scotland, David Alexander Edward Lindsay, twenty-seventh Earl of Crawford, died of pneumonia tonight at Haigh Hall. He was 69.

He was a cabinet member during and after the World War.

A Three Days' Cough is Your Danger Signal

Even if other medicines have failed you may get relief now with Creomulsion. Chronic bronchitis can develop if your chest cold is not treated and you cannot afford to take a chance with any medicine less potent than Creomulsion which goes right to the seat of the trouble to help loosen and expel germ laden phlegm and aid nature to soothe and heal raw, tender, inflamed bronchial mucous membranes.

Creomulsion blends beechwood creosote by special process with other time tested medicines for coughs. It contains no narcotics.

No matter how many medicines you have tried, tell your druggist to sell you a bottle of Creomulsion with the understanding that you are to like the way it quickly allays the cough, permitting rest and sleep, or you are to have your money back. See that the name Creomulsion is on the bottle and you will get the genuine product and the relief you want.

Shut-in Boy's Mother Asks Teaching Aid

Appeals to Floridian For Fund Proposed To Replace WPA Help

Representative Caldwell, of Florida, this little story is directed to you particularly. Not merely because you happen to be chairman of the House subcommittee on District appropriations but primarily for the reason that you are a father.

Mrs. Ethel Fuschene today makes an earnest appeal to you, through the columns of The Post. She chose this medium because, in her own words, "The Post has led the fight to launch a visiting teacher system for the education of hundreds of shut-in children in the Capital."

Mrs. Fuschene has a son, 8, and another, 12, and her appeal to you, Representative Caldwell, is simply that you and your appropriations committee, now in the midst of visiting District institutions before you make up your minds on the 1941 supply bill—that you visit, as well, some private home where a WPA teacher is instructing some shut-in child.

"My son, Paul, was just about to enter the first grade when he was stricken with a hip infection," said Mrs. Fuschene, who lives at 637 Eleventh street northeast. "For months he lay in a plaster cast but even then his main worry was that he was missing out on school. Seeing his older brother go to classes each morning made him even more conscious of his plight.

"Last fall, when the District WPA resumed its visiting teacher project, after funds again had been denied to put this work on a permanent basis, I succeeded in obtaining an instructor for Paul. It has worked wonders!

"Although she comes to the house only three times a week, an hour each time, my son already is taking third-grade work. He reads well and the teacher says he is good at arithmetic. But even more important, his whole outlook has changed for the better. Instead of envying my older boy, he now boasts to him that he will be right up with his class next fall, when we hope Paul will be able to go to school."

The WPA has announced it will be unable to continue the visiting teacher program beyond this June. The Association for Education of Physically Handicapped children, a mothers' group, is asking Congress to appropriate $22,400 so the work may be carried on next September as an integral part of the public school system.

Contract Is Let For Water Main

The District Commissioners yesterday awarded a contract for $171,819 to the Spiniello Construction Co., of Newark, N. J., to lay a steel trunk water main from the new reservoir on Soldiers' Home grounds to the Bryant street pumping station.

Work will get under way within several weeks and will be completed during the summer. The reservoir will service the residents north and east of the grounds.

Station PDS Presents Popular Pianist

The guest artist on the PDS program this morning broadcast over station WMAL will be Mr. George B. Showalter, 3150 Sixteenth street northwest. Mr. Showalter has been studying piano recently under Miss Grace Shannon of this city. He is a member of the Presbyterian Church.

SHOWALTER

"Station PDS Presents," broadcast by Lee Everett from the Peoples Drug Stores Studio, Eleventh and G streets northwest, is presented each weekday morning from 7:30 to 8:30 over Station WMAL by Peoples Drug Stores in cooperation with The Washington Post. Anyone over 18 years old may participate in the auditions at 7:30 p. m. Tuesdays at the N. B. C. Studios. Performers are paid $5 for their appearance.

Two Police Accused of Taking Bribe

H. Tansey, Assistant Engineer Commissioner.

Both men declined last night to discuss the charges against them. Murray said he had not yet seen a copy of the specifications and Brodie said he had read them but preferred to answer them before the trial board.

The first charge, accusing the policemen of conduct "unbecoming officers," bore two specifications, alleging that the men "October 14 about 2 p. m. while on duty as detective sergeants at the First Precinct, accepted a bribe and permitted acceptance of a bribe from one Carl T. Updyke."

Charge 2 asserted that they "failed to report to the major and superintendent, through the proper channels, any violation by any person, without or within the Police Department."

In two specifications accompanying this count, Brodie and Murray were accused of "having knowledge that an illegal enterprise, towit, violations of the laws of the District relating to setting up a gaming table and the taking of bets on numbers and horse races was being conducted in premises 905½ G street northwest and that the officers failed to take proper action; that they did permit Updyke "to give them, or either of them, a bribe without placing Updyke under arrest."

The charge of neglect of duty was based, according to specifications, on the allegation that the detectives "well knew an unlawful business was being operated at the G street address and failed to take proper action."

The fourth charge was that of "conduct prejudicial to the reputation, good order and discipline of the force."

The specifications accompanying this count charged that Brodie and Murray went to 905½ G street and "proceeded to attract the attention of Updyke, who came from the place and handed them a sum of money in an attempt to bring about their failure to take proper police action."

Brodie and Murray were demoted summarily without explanation except "for the good of the service" November 15. Both men had spent more than 15 years in the Detective Bureau.

It appeared that no charges were to be placed against them until Senator Byrnes, of South Carolina, took the matter up on the floor of the Senate. He demanded that the men be given a chance to defend themselves and refused at that time to approve the reappointment of Commissioner Melvin C. Hazen.

The Commissioners and Maj. Brown ordered the charges drawn up after Byrnes' action. Hazen subsequently was confirmed.

Police records show Updyke was arrested in a raid at 905½ G street northwest, November 10, and charged with setting up a gaming table, operating a lottery and possession of lottery slips. The raid was made under supervision of Lieut. Earl P. Hartman.

Updyke was indicted November 28 and February 23 he pleaded guilty to all three charges. March 1 he was sentenced to serve one to three years in jail and was placed on probation.

India Held Saved by Finns

Had Finland not stood her ground, it is highly probable that Soviet forces would now be pouring into the Khyber Pass for an assault on India, the Rev. Dr. Edmund A. Walsh, S. J., vice president of Georgetown University and regent of its school of foreign service, declared last night.

"The Russian assault, in the estimation of detached observers, would have been the signal for Japan to move on Hongkong, Singapore, and probably the Dutch East Indies, which are always in Japanese contemplation," he told a large audience attending his weekly lecture on American diplomacy at Memorial Continental Hall, Seventeenth and C streets northwest.

Says Nazis Fear U. S.

Father Walsh predicted that Germany will continue her "caution and consideration" toward America because the Nazis are hopeful that the "tremendous weight" of this country will not be mobilized against her. On the other hand, the Allies seem resigned to America's determination to stay out and have based their plans on the assumption they can't count on the United States, he said.

Father Walsh warned that the United States cannot afford to ignore or minimize the possibility of a German victory. Such a victory, he said, might involve the United States through a Nazi attack on Bermuda, Jamaica or other British strongholds in the Caribbean.

Canal Threatened

"Within striking distance of the Panama Canal," Father Walsh said, "these territories are invested with direct strategic interest for the United States.

"It is not accidental, therefore, that the President has recently inspected our defenses at Panama and proposed to Congress that the Canal be strengthened by the addition of supplementary locks."

That Genial Crook Bobs Up Again On Screen at Loew's Capitol

David Niven Plays 'Raffles' in Renewal, With De Havilland; Benny Davis a Hit

IF YOU HAVE HEARD of "Cinderella," "Jack, the Giant Killer," "Sherlock Holmes" or even "The Hardy Family," you must also have heard of "Raffles." He is the elegant gentleman "amateur cracksman" who has been flitting in and out of the theater, on one or another of its branches, ever since Kyrle Pellew created him for the stage as a Charles Frohman star some four decades or so ago. He was portrayed first on the screen, I believe, by House Peters, a star unknown to this generation. John Barrymore did him later—say 20 or 25 years ago.

BELL

All of which is merely leading up to the fact that "Raffles" once again is on view on the screen of Loew's Capitol Theater this week, in the person of the suave and debonair David Niven, latterly recruited to His Majesty's service on the Western Front. The girl in the case is Olivia de Havilland. That in itself is enough to set your romance on edge.

In resurrecting this infallible stimulus to the ganglia, Samuel Goldwyn has betrayed his habitual penchant for going the full distance in the matter of supporting cast and material embellishment. The present "Raffles" takes rank as one of the best of its prolific lot. But I wouldn't be sure that that is enough to write it down as a contender for a place on the list of the year's "ten best" pictures. Having knocked around backstage and in the scenario departments all these years, it bears a slightly smudged label of "old stuff."

The amiable gentleman of the title role, to be sure, is a highly delectable fellow who exercises a peculiarly warm influence upon the sympathies—even if he is an unconscionable crook, who plunders his best friends to salvage his kid brother from his gambling debts and make a monkey of Scotland Yard. The gal in the case is wholly winning—as when was Olivia de Havilland ever anything else?

If you have never met "Raffles" before, you will be glad to make his acquaintance now. You will only be falling in line with generations of playgoers ahead of you.

On the stage at the Capitol this week, Benny Davis, that present-day reincarnation of the exploratory instinct of Gus Edwards and Maj. Bowes' hardest-riding competitor in the role of Columbus to new talent, offers his "Star Dust Revue of 1940." Benny has never let the Washington public down. Certainly he does not on this occasion. His "kids" are afire with ambition and blazing with that embryonic sense of showmanship with which the galvanizing Mr. Davis alone, among the current crop of impresarios, seems able to imbue them.

Every act goes over the footlights for an unequivocal popular "smash." Foremost among the youthful aspirants for stage renown we should name Mary Dooley, daughter of Yvette Rugel and the late Johnny Dooley, who seems to have inherited more than a little of her mother's incomparable voice and a sense of how to use it; Marie Austin, a diminutive, brunette Mae West, who does things with "Oh, Johnny;" Norman Duke, a tap dancer close on the heels of Fred Astaire; the four Harmonica Revelers; the Three Chords, who do amazing things with their vocal cords, and Benny, himself, who drags a grist of his song hits out of the past. Everyone in the act is a hit.

It is a pretty good bill at the Capitol these seven days. The younger you are the better you will like it.

The New Yorker

By Leonard Lyons

New York, March 8.

WHEN ALEXANDER WOOLLCOTT arrived in Hollywood to appear in "The Man Who Came to Dinner," he renewed his acquaintanceship with Norman Krasna, who had been an office boy for the New York World in the days when Woollcott wrote a column for that paper . . . Krasna's salary now is $3,500 a week, and he invests his savings in antique furniture and English paintings which Woollcott treasures . . . Alex visited Krasna's home, and immediately wrote a letter to Booth Tarkington, confessing" "I know I have passed a certain phase of life—because my former office boy now owns a painting by Sir Joshua Reynolds."

ARCHDUKE OTTO VON HAPSBURG, pretender to the throne of Austria, who arrived on Monday and confessed that he was here to learn about a democratic form of government, was entertained at the home of Mrs. Cornelius Vanderbilt, Sr., Wednesday . . . Otto, who told all interviewers that he came to America to study the inner workings of the American Way, spent the afternoon being guided around the Vanderbilt mansion by his hostess—who insisted upon showing him the paintings and vases and rare pieces which once had adorned the palaces of Europe.

PAT O'BRIEN'S attorneys have registered legal complaint with the Globe Theater on Broadway, where John Garfield gets star-billing over O'Brien and Ann Sheridan. O'Brien's contract provided that he get equal-billing in that picture, "Castle On The Hudson" . . . H. T. Tsiang, who wrote the book, "China Has Hands," and produced his own play, "China Marches On," is at Ellis Island now, in ill-health and fighting deportation . . . Serge Oblensky, former brother-in-law of Vincent Astor, is cruising the Caribbean, on Astor's yacht . . . The British Consul complained to the telephone company yesterday, because movie press-agents called every five minutes, saying only: "Three Cheers For The Irish."

GIOVANNI, the professional pickpocket who entertained at the President's dinner to the Cabinet, has been asked to return to Washington, for the White House Correspondents Dinner . . . Giovanni stole the suspenders off the trousers of "Pa" Watson, the President's aide. Then he stole all the money carried by Secretary of the Treasury Morgenthau . . . When Giovanni stole the wrist-watch from President Roosevelt's wrist, returned it—and then repeated the stunt three times more, the President told him: "Say, that gives me an Idea."

SAM GOLDWYN had a private showing of a movie at his home, for his family and the film's director. In the middle of the movie, Goldwyn ordered the showing stopped, turned to the director, and told him, "You'll have to change that scene. I don't understand it" . . . The director assured him it wasn't difficult to understand—and then Goldwyn's young son interrupted: "But I understand it" . . . "See, even your son understands it," said the director . . . "Tell me," Goldwyn reprimanded the director, "since when are we making movies for 14-year-olds?"

GEORGE JESSEL was with Tony Martin in Miami Beach, on the day Alice Faye announced that she was divorcing Tony . . . One of their friends consoled Martin, by telling him: "Well, at least you and Alice had some nice times together. Keep thinking of those moments. Those tender memories will give you satisfaction" . . . "As much satisfaction," said the experienced Jessel, "as a Croix de Guerre gives when it's pinned over an armless sleeve."

IN MIAMI, Jessel also spent some time with another torch-carrier—Al Jolson. Once, years ago, he and Jolson had a dispute and stopped speaking to each other. But when Tammany Hall gave a testimonial dinner to Jessel, Al appeared and made a speech paying homage to George . . . "That was very nice of him," David Warfield told Jessel. "Now you be a nice fellow, too, and go up there and shake his hand. Life's too short, and you shouldn't have enemies. Go ahead and shake his hand" . . . "Okay," Jessel agreed, "but look, David. Sitting over there is David Belasco. Go on over, and be friends with him again" . . . "What? With Belasco?" replied Warfield. "Never."

THE MARX BROTHERS flew to Tucson, to consult with their script-writers, Dore Schary and Irving Brecher, about their new picture . . . "We've got to work fast," Groucho told the writers. "The home office says we must finish this picture in a hurry. We have very little time left" . . . "But what's the rush?" Groucho was asked . . . "It's the plate-company," he explained. "They've got an early release-date for their new dishes."

Irish Brogue Has Innings At the Earle

Tom Mitchell Aids 'Cheers for Irish;' Ted Lewis on Stage

By Richard L. Coe.

"An' what are the Republicans complainin' about this mornin'?" sighs Thomas Mitchell in the thickest of brogues on the Earle's screen in "Three Cheers for the Irish." Well, one thing no one can complain about is the freshness the versatile Mitchell brings to a film that otherwise might be as uninspired as its title.

Credit, too, the brightly written screen play by Richard Macaulay and Jerry Wald for enlivening a familiar tale of flatfeet, ward-heelers and young love which parenthood smiled not on. Without chunky Mitchell, who only last week copped the Academy Award for the finest work contributed to the screen by a supporting actor of 1939, the film would have lost its predictable but effective humor. While the idea of a lone male at home with his three daughters, never finding the bathroom door unlocked, hardly sounds original, white-haired Mitchell makes of his retired policeman a lovable fellow.

As a garrulous guy, one Gallagher with a fondness for tossing chairs out the window, Alan Hale contributes another richly played characterization. When Hale, with an eye on a job in the sanitation department, sees to it that his friend is elected alderman, the scenarists quicken the electioneering invariables with neat touches of minutiae. Frank Jenks is on hand as the contractor who tears down what other people build. Henry Armetta is elegant as a long-suffering fruit vendor.

Young love is in the pretty charge of Priscilla Lane who falls for her Pop's successor on the force, a nice chap, unfortunately named Angus Ferguson And how Irish father and Scottish boyfriend, acceptably played by Dennis Morgan, get along you shouldn't have to hear. The lad is so Scotch that marriage plans are at a standstill until a couple he knows get a divorce. So he can buy their furniture, you dope.

The comedy is too long, the situations obvious, but by clever scripting, Mitchell and Hale often make it highly amusing. Anyway, who can quibble about the Irish with St. Patrick's Day but a week in the future?

Ted Lewis returns to the Earle stage, smiling and heading his own reveue. The "Top-Hatted Tragedian of Song" is as effortlessly pleasing as ever, doing smartly by his amiable song and dance. With sepia "Snowball" Whittier, a fellow with that infectiousness so inherent in his race, Lewis offers the most characteristic number of his revue, "Me and My Shadow."

The Radio Aces and the Dennis Sisters vocalize smoothly and the Hackers burlesque the dance. Betty Jane Smith and Marie Hollis are other dancing principals who join the "South American Way" finale, during which, if you are within reach, Ted sees to your happiness by tossing you a hatful of peanuts.

Howard

First-degree fun, with plenty of frolic and syncopation, seemed to be the patrons' unanimous verdict for the Howard Theater's footlight offering this week, starring that unique sepia foursome, the Mills Brothers, in their own stage revue.

Experts for a decade in warm and mellow harmony, the Mills Brothers easily take the lead with their vocal vending of "You Tell Me Your Dreams," "Lucy Brown" and their famous "Dinah" and "Tiger Rag."

On the screen, "Cafe Hostess," with Ann Dvorak and Preston Foster, is a well-filmed expose of the clip joints and shady night spots in the biggest city.

Louella O. Parsons

Close-Ups and Long-Shots Of the Motion Picture Scene

Hollywood, March 8 (INS).—The widely publicized romance of Norma Shearer and George Raft will be used as a comehither box office move. Remember I said in this very column some months ago that there was talk of remaking "A Free Soul," Adela Rogers St. John's story, which Norma played so long ago with Lionel Barrymore and Clark Gable. Well, it's more than idle chatter for George has actually been loaned to M.-G.-M. by Warners and the picture will be made, possibly as Norma's next.

LOUELLA PARSONS

The deal is interesting because in the very beginning Metro was opposed to the Shearer - Raft combination, believing that such publicity might hurt Norma. But instead of hurting her it has helped her, for the whole world is interested in this pair, who now make no secret that it's love.

Chatter in Hollywood: Edgar Bergen leaves Monday for New York, taking with him what looks like a really serious romance. Edgar has been mentioned as attentive to so many girls that we always take his new girl friends with a grain of salt. But he's really greatly interested in Joan Valerie, Twentieth Century-Fox actress, and it wouldn't surprise this writer, and a number of Edgar's other friends, if one of these days he ends his bachelorhood with the fair Miss Valerie as the reason. He has been keeping her telephone wires hot.

Snapshots of Hollywood collected at random: The rumors that Florence Rice and Robert Wilcox are saying au revoir are denied by Florence herself, who says it was only a family misunderstanding and all is well again, Lya Lys and her bridegroom, John Gunderson, are no longer seeing eye to eye, according to current rumors; Richard Greene had scarcely left the Hollywood Hospital when Virginia Field moved in for a sinus operation; Dick Foran limped into the House of Murphy. He narrowly escaped death when he fell off his horse and was trampled on; Ruth Nolander, for many years Joseph Schenck's private secretary and much loved in the picture industry, underwent a serious operation yesterday; Sonja Henie, her mother, brother and sister-in-law left on the Matsonia for Honolulu. Dan Topping, as we said, joins the party in San Francisco and—yes, you're right—it's love; contrary to all rumors, Anita Louise and Buddy Adler have not broken up. She gets back Wednesday and he's still head man; Mrs. Lorna Hearst hostessed a cocktail party for Ruth and Paul Zuckerman yesterday. No wonder we're staying away from the scales today for we went on from Lorna's party to the Little Hungary with Daisy and Paul Lucas. He ordered all the Hungarian delicacies — and what food!

Barbara Stanwyck is recovering from a bad attack of food poisoning; Ilona Massey and Sam Katz taking up where they left off at Ruby Foo's; Irene Dunne, wearing a chef's hat, aided by Edgar Bergen and Rudy Vallee, served at the Hollywood Somerset Guild luncheon—all for sweet charity; George Zacharias with his wife, Babe Didrikson, former Olympic champion, and John Montague, golf specialist, talking sports into the wee hours at Slapsie Maxie's;

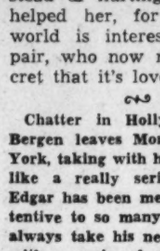
That's all for today. See you tomorrow!

In Hollywood

With Hedda Hopper

Hollywood, March 9.

"Too Many Husbands" started out with a whale of an idea, gathering wild guffaws at the antics of Jean Arthur, Fred MacMurray and Melvyn Douglas. And there wasn't a woman in the preview audience who didn't feel a pang of jealousy that Jean had two husbands, when most of the women present were struggling to hold one. And for awhile, the laughs came fast and furious—until Melvyn Douglas got the cutes. Now, it's bad enough when women get them. But when a big 6-foot-2 man becomes cute, it's a little bit hard to bear. And at that moment I think she should have switched to Fred MacMurray. Harry Davenport gave his usual polished performance, and Melville Cooper was his suave self. And what a joy to see Dorothy Petersen again, who looked beautiful and acted ditto.



HOPPER

Understand two studios are trying to get Ruth Draper to turn some of her wonderful character sketches into shorts. Why they haven't done it before is a mystery to me. She's entertained millions all over the world with her one-woman show. I'm always surprised at Ruth's versatility. Our town is turning itself inside out entertaining her during the week she's playing here.

I'm happy to say, I'll never forget years ago when Ruth, Ina Claire and I went to hear Aimee Semple McPherson. If Ruth had any idea of doing a sketch about it she changed her mind. She had never seen religion take that form before, nor had I.

She's never written her sketches down. They're done solely from memory. I found this out when Frank Crowninshield wanted to publish some of them. She said: "I don't know whether I could or not. You see, I've never put them on paper."

Mickey Rooney learned a lot from his role in "Young Tom Edison." Now he has gadgets on his dash-board, and operates by remote control the opening and closing of his gates, and his garage door. He hopes to put gadgets on "Babes on Broadway" with Judy Garland—their next.

Philo Vance Cooks Up New Crime Broth

James Stevenson Takes Over Detective Role At Metropolitan

Short-order murders are the Metropolitan specialty this week and Philo Vance is the cook. But mar's best friend, the pooch, is also Philo's best friend. Without the aid of a frowsy terrier called MacTavish and a police dog with a Karloff look, the murderer of Archer Coe and Brisbane Coe would never have been discovered.

Everything but the camera lens has been tossed into "Calling Philo Vance." There's a smidgeon of espionage, a mess of airplane plans, ten pounds of assorted murders and assaults, two cupsful of wise cracks and a delicate suggestion of illicit love. James Stephenson gives suavity but hardly enough frothiness to the title role. The tee-hees of the picture are reaped by Edward Brophy, as a mick detective, and Jimmy Conlon, as the autopsy surgeon who never sits down to cut a steak but what he's being called out to cut a cadaver. Ralph Forbes is stabbed in the back. (How we enjoyed that!)

The Three Stooges and Walter Catlett are featured in a pair of comedy shorts. The news reel shows the Queen Elizabeth scooting into New York Harbor.

P. S.—"Calling Philo Vance" illustrates the technique of barring a door on the inside while you're on the outside after committing a murder. But we fear that any midnight killer who tried it would still be fiddling with the contraption at sunrise.

MARY HARRIS.

To Graduate

Jackie Cooper was graduated from Beverly Hills High School in February. The actor recently celebrated his seventeenth birthday by completing work on "Seventeen," the Booth Tarkington classic.

Wonder Horse

Who says they never come back? Here's the horse that was retired in 1938, never ran a race in 1939 and came back last week at Santa Anita to become the greatest money winner of all time. Walter Haight tells you about Seabiscuit in Sunday's Post.

Freedom of the Seize

What else is the British blockade accomplishing besides infuriating Italy and giving Congressmen a chance to make the eagle scream? Hedley Donovan's Sunday Post article tells you what the blockade is doing and why the British are stubborn about it.

—BOTH are featured in Sunday's Post

SIX PAGES of spring styles and eight pages of school pictures are the headline attractions in the Sunday Post, with plenty of interesting articles on other subjects to give your Sunday reading balance and variety.

Schools

Educating adults for jobs and self-improvement. Teaching children with physical handicaps. These are the twin themes of the "Our Town in Pictures" section this Sunday. Here you can see how the vocational classes teach Washingtonians how to become welders, office workers, auto mechanics. How the night classes teach trigonometry and English to those dauntless spirits who are never too old to learn. How youngsters who can't hear and children who can barely see are aided by special classes. This picture section will give you a new appreciation of what Washington's schools are doing to help the whole community.

Styles

Washington's own debutantes model clothes from Washington's own stores for you in Sunday's Post. There are pictures of the spring fashions in prints and in evening gowns, in millinery and in shoes—even in hair styles. These six pages in the society section give you a preview of what you will find in Washington shops.

Underpass

Washington's miniature Holland Tunnel, under Thomas Circle, will open for traffic Thursday. Robert DeVore brings you the complete story; what it cost, how traffic will benefit, how water and carbon monoxide dangers are avoided, what is planned for Scott and Dupont Circles.

Alumni

Almost every American college has some graduate in Washington, and when alumni meet, why there's an association! You'll find an article about Washington's alumni groups in Sunday's Post, and also a new column of news from these organizations.

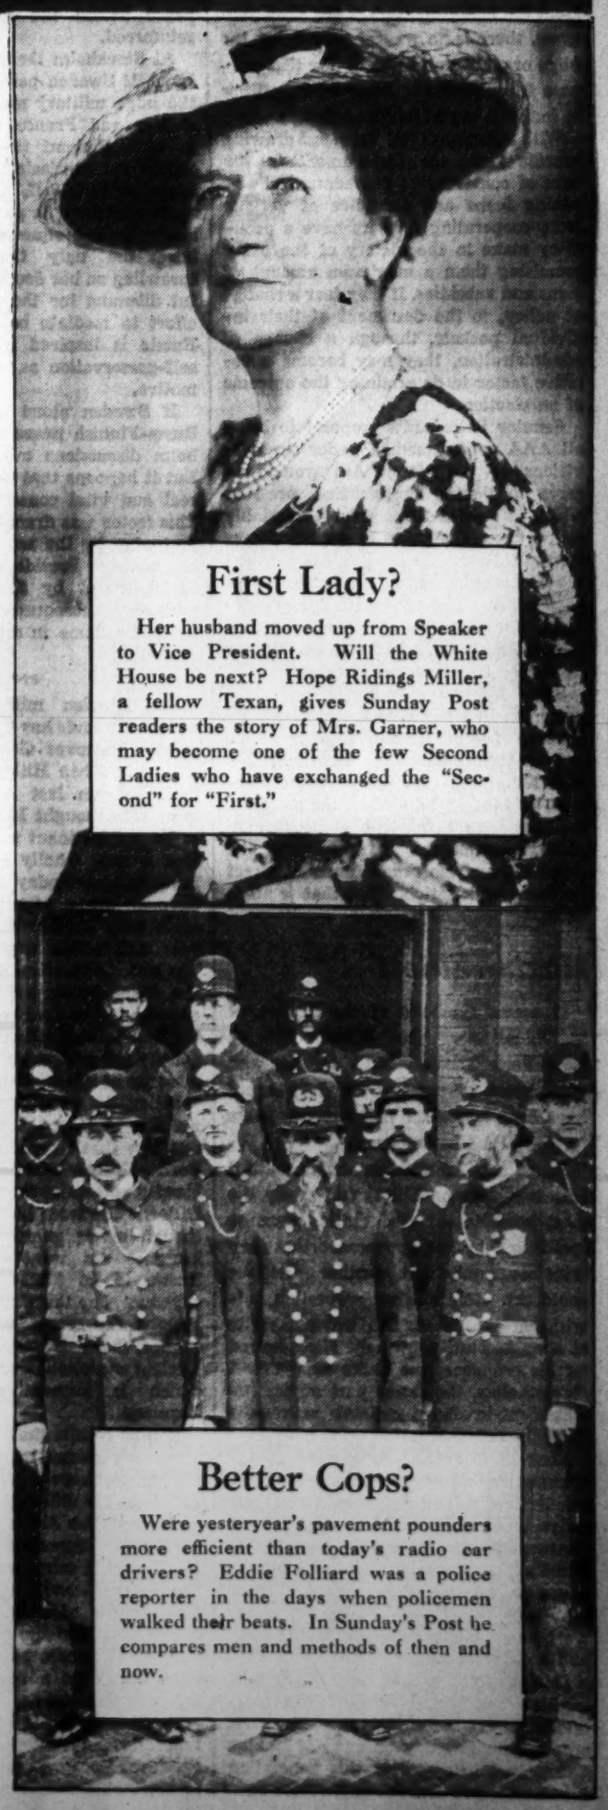
Measures

How many ounces to a pound? The District's Department of Weights, Measures and Markets sees to it that you get the full 16 ounces to which you're entitled. Here's one branch of government every housewife will cheer for, and Post reporter Stofberg shows you what is done to protect the purchaser.

Census

What's all the shootin' fer? Why all this rumpus about a census when we've had one every ten years? Al Friendly wondered, too, so he went over to the Census Bureau to question the fellows who question us. Here's the story of what you'll be expected to tell the census man—and why.

And Bob Considine will be back in The Post on Sunday!



First Lady?

Her husband moved up from Speaker to Vice President. Will the White House be next? Hope Ridings Miller, a fellow Texan, gives Sunday Post readers the story of Mrs. Garner, who may become one of the few Second Ladies who have exchanged the "Second" for "First."

Better Cops?

Were yesteryear's pavement pounders more efficient than today's radio car drivers? Eddie Folliard was a police reporter in the days when policemen walked their beats. In Sunday's Post he compares men and methods of then and now.

There's always a lot to enjoy in the BIG Sunday Post

Politics And Farmers

The Hatch Act does not apply to community and county committeemen serving on AAA conservation control associations. But these committeemen are prohibited by regulations of the Department of Agriculture from engaging in various kinds of political activities.

Although not as severely circumscribed as Federal employes subject to the Hatch Act, the AAA committeemen may not solicit contributions for political purposes from their fellow employes or from Government employes. They may not run for or hold elective Federal, State, or major county offices, nor may they serve as officers or employes of political organizations. Use of the property or facilities of an association for political purposes is also forbidden.

Thus it appears that the local organizations set up to administer the farm-control programs are safeguarded to a considerable extent against becoming a vantage point from which ambitious politicians can launch their campaigns. But, despite efforts of the Department of Agriculture to exclude partisan politics from the administration of the farm program, there is no way of preventing the huge organization built up for that purpose from becoming involved in politics in indirect and highly undesirable ways.

With thousands of farmers drawing benefits from the Government in the form of conservation payments, and obtaining loans and subsidies of various sorts, cooperating farmers have a pecuniary stake in the victory of the party promising them a maximum amount of loans and subsidies. If they fear a change of policy, to the detriment of their individual pockets, through a change of administration, they may become a decisive factor in determining the outcome of an election.

Senator Shipstead's proposal to bring all AAA committeemen under the provisions of the Hatch Act would not serve to lighten the political pressure which interested farm groups invariably exert upon Congress to secure larger appropriations. At the present moment the Senate is being bombarded with demands for restoration of parity payments, for extension of the surplus-crop removal program, and for more millions to finance the farm tenant program.

Since farmers have votes, and since votes can in many cases be attracted by the lure of larger benefits, it is impossible to keep politics out of the farm program. It is something that farmer committeemen, paid to help administer the program, are forbidden to participate actively in political campaigns. This protects the organization from crude forms of direct partisan exploitation. But that is all it does.

Maxine Elliott

It seems symbolic of the decline of individual stars that Maxine Elliott's New York Theater, built for her and other great actresses of her day, should have been leased for the past few years to the WPA Theater project.

In an era of famous and beautiful actresses, Maxine Elliott was easily the most beautiful of all. Critics were so spellbound by her appearance that they were never quite sure whether or not she could act. Nor did her reputation fade with her youth. As she was a favorite of King Edward, so was she also admired by his grandson, the Duke of Windsor. Nevertheless, the latter part of her life was spent in almost complete retirement from the public eye.

Miss Elliott never succumbed to the common failing of returning to seek the admiration which can only be a pale reflection of early triumph. And her one venture in films she frankly described as ghastly. On the other hand, she had no cause to attempt a comeback. Those who admired her and followed her career were never likely to forget, and she has had no successor.

Democratization of entertainment, premeditated buildup and equally premeditated turnover of entertainers, have left no place for reigning queens. If Maxine Elliott had belonged to this generation the chances are that she might have been known by her true name, Jessie Dermot. Or, and more horrible alternative, she might have been called a Glamour Girl.

A Turning Point

The vital importance of the Russo-Finnish struggle as a part of the general war picture is amply demonstrated by the negotiations now spreading from Stockholm to other European capitals.

The discussions which the Swedes have initiated with Finnish and Russian envoys already ramify to Berlin, Rome, London, Paris and even Washington. They may lead to a merger of the war in Finland with the larger sphere of hostilities. They may lead to the beginning of overtures for a general peace. They may lead to a peace in the Baltic area which will only intensify the larger struggle.

But regardless of which of the three broad possibilities eventuates, it is obvious that the Stockholm negotiations are moving toward a turning point affecting far more than the fate of Finland alone.

The Russian invasion of this small Baltic republic was launched, on November 30, with the expectation that it would be a walkover. This belief was demonstrated when, coincident with the first Communist attack, a puppet "People's Government" of Finland was set up in a border village and promptly recognized by Moscow. There is a certain humor in the fact that Stalin is now willing to discuss peace terms with the same Helsinki authorities who, over three months ago, were said in Moscow to be outside the pale. This change of front is a good measure of the education as to the extent of their inefficiency, disorganization and lack of leadership which the Communists have lately received.

Of course Russia will, if permitted, eventually conquer Finland. The fact that the Red armies have at least 60 soldiers to every one which Finland can raise will determine the issue regardless of Finnish heroism and Communist ineptitude. But the fact that Finland is by herself so close to overcoming these terrific odds has encouraged Great Britain and France to send substantial aid to the Baltic democracy. And it is the promise that this aid will be rapidly augmented which has precipitated the present negotiations. Russia, if she can obtain face-saving terms, will welcome peace before the Finns are strongly reinforced.

At Stockholm there is desperate anxiety. If Sweden permits the passage of the huge military supplies which Great Britain and France are now prepared to send Finland there will be every excuse for reprisals from Russia, Germany, or both. If, on the other hand, strict neutrality is preserved, then Finland will be conquered and Sweden will have the ugly Communist colossus sprawling on her doorstep. It is a dreadful dilemma for the Swedes, and their effort to mediate between Finland and Russia is inspired by the instinct for self-preservation as much as any other motive.

If Sweden alone were interested in Russo-Finnish peace the present Stockholm discussions might be discounted. But it happens that Germany also has a real and vital concern in the outcome. This factor was dramatically emphasized yesterday by the sudden visit to Berlin of former President Svinhufvud of Finland, and by the German foreign minister's subsequent decision to leave today for Rome in order to confer with Mussolini.

The Russian military incompetence which Finland has revealed of course greatly improves Germany's diplomatic position. When Hitler and Stalin made their bargain last August there were some who thought Moscow would prove to be the dominant partner. That naive idea is now wholly exploded. If anything is clear today it is that a single German army corps could wipe the earth with Russia wherever and whenever such action might seem advisable. The series of tactical defeats inflicted on the Communists by the Finnish high command are basically victories for German-trained military leadership. And nobody knows this better than that small minority of Russians who know anything.

Hitler, in other words, is now in a position to turn the heat on Stalin, to tell him that the ruling partner in the Berlin-Moscow axis has decided that the Finnish enterprise should be ended. And Hitler is the more likely to do this, even though in very guarded manner, because he does not want disorganization in Russia to go further—not at present, anyway. For the more bogged down in Finland the comrades become, the less chance there is for that prompt and efficient exploitation of Russian resources which is imperative for blockaded Germany.

It thus results that, for the first time, a common interest between Germany and the Anglo-French alliance is apparent. Although for different reasons, both the Reich and the Allies now want to see the Russian aggression stopped. And this joint interest coincides with the fervent hope of the Scandinavian countries, with the interests of Italy, with the prayers of the Pope and the wishes of the huge number of people everywhere who believe that even a poor peace is better than any sort of war.

For this reason it is entirely possible, regardless of any intervention which President Roosevelt might be disposed to make, that Swedish mediation between Russia and Finland could lead logically to negotiations on a broader basis, involving the major belligerents.

In the way of such an outcome, however, stand many obstacles. Foremost among them is the fact that the salvation of Finland alone would not fulfill a single Allied war aim. France and Great Britain went to war nearly three months before Finland was attacked by Russia. And none of the fundamental issues for which they are fighting would be met by a German decision to tell Stalin to lay off.

It is, moreover, incontestable that Germany is likely to gain in strength if she uses diplomatic pressure to save Finland. Such a move would arouse deep gratitude throughout all Scandinavia. It would, as mentioned, be in the economic interest of the Reich. It would give a certain plausibility to the Nazi claim that all that government seeks is the development of political stability throughout central Europe, from the Baltic to the Mediterranean.

Any intervention by Hitler in the Russo-Finnish struggle will, therefore, inevitably be regarded with deep mistrust in both London and Paris, as well as in Moscow. If in some ways it seems to point a solution, in others it would obviously raise new problems. But such intervention, now evidently under consideration, would certainly bring the war into a new stage of development. The quiet on the Maginot Line serves only to emphasize the present electrical tension and nervous activity on the diplomatic front.

Another Hurdle Taken

The House passed the bill to extend the trade agreements program by a vote which was largely along party lines. A mere score of Democrats voted against the measure and even fewer Republicans deserted their colleagues to vote with the majority. Following this example, the Senate Finance Committee has divided the same way in approving the House measure without amendments. All those voting affirmatively are Democrats, while only two Democrats joined the minority.

Thus the votes so far throw very little light upon the views of Congress as a whole on the merits of the trade agreements program. Without partisan appeals for support of the bill, it is impossible to say what its fate would have been. That is unfortunate, for by making a vote for the measure a test of party loyalty, the Administration has been unable to obtain a clear-cut indorsement of the program on its many merits. In future negotiations, therefore, our representatives will be handicapped by not really knowing whether Congress sympathizes with their aims.

However, it would be premature to assume that the trade agreements bill is assured of passage in its present form. There is still too much danger of amendment from the floor of the Senate that might virtually sabotage the program. One of the most important amendments considered by the Finance Committee and lost by a vote of only 11 to 9 provided for ratification by the Senate of all trade agreements. Another called for approval of the pacts by a vote of both houses.

While the House would doubtless bitterly oppose ratification of the agreements by the Senate alone, there is sentiment in both House and Senate for Congressional approval of negotiated agreements. Hence, until the debate from the Senate floor is concluded, it cannot be said with assurance that the trade agreements program will be extended in a form acceptable to the Administration.

Men With Hoes

In the painting of "The Man With the Hoe" Edwin Markham, it is probable, saw both much more and much less than the artist intended. Himself a peasant, and dogged throughout his life by hardship and poverty, Jean-Francois Millet neither idealized the French rustic as did the townsman Rousseau, nor yet dehumanized him as did the aristocrat de Maupassant. Certainly, Millet was not attempting to portray the "dignity of labor," but neither was he attempting to raise a cry of social protest.

Yet few will deny that the painting and the poem (reproduced on the opposite page) have at least a common greatness. The appeal of the picture lies in the immediacy of its message to all who have ever known the taste of back-breaking toil. The undying majesty of the poem is not only in the splendid quality of its emotion but also in its prescience. Markham infused the sodden and passive weariness of Millet's ageless serf with the sullen angers of the modern proletarian.

What Millet painted was an individual broken by slavery to the soil to which he was so closely akin. What Markham foresaw was that revolt of the masses which has since been unleashed upon the world.

The Negro's Contribution

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: May I add a few remarks to those made by E. T. Eiland in The Post of March 4, by stating that there are but two possible objections to Negroes, and neither of these is tenable, (1) color, which God or the laws of nature gave them and therefore, if any fault exists, is not to be blamed on them, and (2) the fact that the Negro has an abundance of faith in God and in himself, and therefore is not materialistic. But I believe materialism is a moral and an intellectual disease.

The Negro need not be dismayed because a fraction of 1 per cent of their number has a criminal bent. Perhaps the Negro's rating is superior to that of many others. It may be noted that Warden Lawes, of Sing Sing, has said that all people, while migrating, furnish the criminals of that particular period. There is nothing for the Negro to be ashamed of. He did not come here looking for a Santa Claus and he has tried to contribute and, in my judgment, has succeeded in contributing much to the pool of social good.

The Negro has been, is now and ever will be a great asset to this Nation. GUY G. MOORE.

"Resisting Pay Cuts"

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: In your editorial, "Resisting Pay Cuts," you use the occasion of a recent meeting of Commerce Local 23 of the United Federal Workers of America to condemn the organized activity of Federal workers against what they believe are ill-considered economy moves.

The United Federal Workers, and, we believe, most Federal employes, do not agree with your implied definition of constructive economy. Federal workers believe that eliminating provisions for a uniform policy of granting earned pay increases is not "constructive" economy, but a move to perpetuate the chaotic and inconsistent promotions practices now in effect in most Government agencies.

We Federal employes believe that it is in the best interests of efficiency in the Federal Government and in accordance with modern personnel practice to institute a system of regular pay increases for those whose work and length of service justify it. We know that nothing destroys initiative and ambition as readily as unrewarded merit.

According to officials of the Department of Commerce, $118,360 would be needed to grant administrative increases to eligible employes who have gone two years or more without a promotion (excluding those in the Census Bureau). Reduced to the number of persons affected, this means that two out of every three Commerce Department employes have not been promoted for at least two years and have been denied promotions for at least another year.

Your editorial makes it appear that any movement to request Congress to restore such funds is to "fight all constructive economy moves."

The United Federal Workers of America has never opposed constructive moves to improve the functioning of the Federal Service—witness its support of the reorganization bill. It does oppose blind and unjustified slashes at the expense of needed Federal services and the working conditions of Federal employes.

ROBERT SHERMAN,
President, Commercial Local 23, United Federal Workers of America, (C. I. O.).
Washington, March 5.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: On March 4 you carried an editorial which criticized a meeting of several hundred Commerce Department employes, held under the auspices of the United Federal Workers of America, for deploring Congressional budget slashes in the non-military Governmental agencies.

The editorial criticizes the United Federal Workers for placing the selfish interests of Government employes ahead of national needs. I feel that The Post has really overemphasized the expense of the Federal pay roll. If every single Federal employe were discharged today, it would only cut the national budget 12 per cent. In short, 88 per cent of our total expenditure is distributed to the general public and not to Federal employes.

As a matter of actual fact, the U. F. W. A. is campaigning against these drastic budget slashes because its membership is convinced that curtailment of needed social services by the Federal Government is ruinous economy—ruinous not only to the Government employe but to the country at large. Indiscriminate waste-basketing of needed funds will hurt labor, the farmer, the consumer. Elimination of farm parity payments will not only hurt Federal employes, it will be a body blow to our farming and agricultural group the country over. Unwarranted reduction in needed relief, and namstringing of WPA will boomerang into private industry through increase in unemployment and decrease in buying power. The ruinous economy of 1937 helped bring on the recession of that year.

It is interesting that on the same page in the same issue of The Post there is another editorial—a gloomy one—indicating that unemployment in the Nation in January jumped up 1,000,000, and saying that this very problem of unemployment ought to be "the Nation's foremost concern . . . there can be no prosperity for the country as a whole—only a partial and unstable recovery."

JACOB BAKER.
Washington, March 4.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Your editorial, "Resisting Pay Cuts," expresses a philosophy dangerous to both Federal employes and the entire American people whom they serve.

"Hardships for Government employes" are acording to your editorial, synonomous with "constructive economy moves. For there is no way of cutting Government costs except at the expense of persons on swollen Government pay rolls."

The fact is that military and naval expenditures, interest on the national debt, and outlays for relief of unemployment and farm distress make up the bulk of Government costs. Even the most drastic slashes in salaries of Federal employes would fail to make more than a slight dent in the budget problem, which is essentially part of the larger problems of eliminating unemployment, raising the national income, and achieving world peace.

You mislead the taxpayer, therefore, when you imply that he can hope for relief at the expense of Government workers.

Communist Testimony

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: The Post report of the hearings held before the Senate Judiciary Subcommittee on the antilynch bill at which spokesmen for the Communist Party were present paid attention to the prejudice of the committee members rather than to what Benjamin Davis had to say.

After repeated requests and insistence, the Communist Party sent representatives to the hearings, and 15 minutes was the time magnanimously allotted! The Communist Party has been a consistent defender of Negro rights and has always supported the antilynch measure.

The truth of this statement can be verified by reference to the ample literature they have published on the Negro problem in America. They had every right to appear before the committee to explain their party's stand on this most vital issue.

Chairman Van Nuys is quoted as saying: "I don't care a rap what Earl Browder or his whole party thinks of this or any other bill." Is this American democracy? The Communist Party is a legal political party in our country with a membership of approximately 100,000 drawn from the working people, students and professionals. Surely, these people have a right to express themselves before a committee of the Congress which professes to be a servant of the people.

The lynch terror is a vicious practice which must be wiped from our country before we can do more than pay lip service to democracy—and for the passage of such a measure as the antilynch bill support from all sources is necessary—even that of the Communists.

Local Loan Sharks

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: I see by the papers that our city fathers are coming in for a lot of abuse from the disfranchised citizenry. Among other things, the Commissioners and their adjutants are accused of being derelict in protecting us from the wholesale depredations of thugs, bandits, purse-snatchers, etc.

I, too, want to take advantage of this open season. I want to focus attention, not upon the current epidemic of underworld terrorism, but upon the existence of one of what the Hon. Al Capone was wont to describe as "the legitimate rackets."

Specifically, I refer to the plague of sub rosa loan sharks who flourish unmolested under the sanctimonious noses of the municipal authorities. The annual "take" corralled by these sheltered brigands from the penny-pinched poor of this community doubtless exceeds the irregular gains achieved by the gun-totin' banditti.

Save the Commissioners, it seems that every yokel in Washington knows that you can pawn your last piece of worldly goods with the tacit understanding that it can be redeemed by paying 25 cents per month interest on each dollar. Save the dignified minions of the law, every beleaguered unemployed knows that these loan gyps will, without your knowledge, sell your miserable possessions while continuing to draw interest.

Save those in upholstered offices in the District Building, every sap knows that, after anguished months of meeting the interest payments, you are finally able to reclaim your chattels, only to discover they have long since been sold.

But the juiciest pay-off comes when the sucker runs to the nearest precinct looking for redress. There he will get his real education in District democracy. For there his tears and humiliation will be greeted with a hearty horse laugh.

A RECENT VICTIM.

Hamlin Garland: An Appreciation

Hamlin Garland, son of America's middle border, died on March 4, in Hollywood, his home. He would have been 80 years old next September. He was deservedly called the dean of American letters, for he was the last of the great writers of his period, the age of realism. For more than half a century Garland was a personal friend to scores of distinguished Americans; he was also a friend of America in the truest and finest sense.

Hamlin Garland lived a long time and wrote many books. And during his life he knew a lot of people, all kinds of them: Novelists—William Dean Howells; Thomas Hardy, John Galsworthy; poets, Oliver Wendell Holmes, Walt Whitman, Robert Frost; playwrights, Sir James Barrie, George Bernard Shaw, A. A. Milne; naturalists, John Burroughs, Frank Chapman, Carl Akeley; artists like John Sargent; Presidents, Theodore Roosevelt and Herbert Hoover; businessmen like Henry Ford; actors, Edwin Booth to Douglas Fairbanks; humorists, Mark Twain to Will Rogers, and critics, scientists, politicians, musicians and some who defy classification.

He has lived in Wisconsin, Iowa, North Dakota, Boston, New York, Chicago, London and Los Angeles. Once, in 1898, he took a six months' trip overland to the Klondike, and wrote about it in his book, "The Trail of the Gold-Seekers." He traveled the country over on lecture tours. He was, at one time or other, a farmer, prospector, school teacher, lecturer, writer and psychic investigator. He wrote biographies, short stories, novels, essays, poetry and plays.

Garland's first book, "Main-Traveled Roads," was published in 1890; his last, "The Mystery of the Buried Crosses," in 1939. Over this period of 50 years he published about 45 volumes, some of them in several editions. That is no mean output!

His stories were realistic; he pictured the loneliness, drudgery and often ugliness in the lives of the farmers and their families. His was a realism with a purpose: "To spread the reign of justice," he said, "should everywhere be the design and interest of the artist."

During all his active literary career Hamlin Garland kept a diary, a document replete with priceless biographical detail and anecdote, not only of himself, but of his hundreds of friends and acquaintances. From this diary Garland took the meat and wrote what he called literary log-books. There were four of them—"Roadside Meetings," "Companions of the Trail," "My Friendly Contemporaries" and "Afternoon Neighbors."

One is amazed, in reading these intimate and informal reminiscences, at the number of celebrities he knew. We see him viewing the American scene through all these years with remarkable awareness. Sometimes he looked on modern trends in literature and the arts with the alarm and disfavor natural to a conservative and an idealist. And unfortunately he often felt himself regarded as "old fogey" by the younger writers of today and, to their great loss, did not care to mingle with them as he once did.

Of his literary logs, Garland wrote (in a letter to me in 1935): "I have all through these commentaries of mine put the emphasis on the other fellow and not on my own career. The names of the various volumes were chosen for this purpose. I am but the interpreter. Furthermore, assuming the prerogatives of age, I have written in the mood (so far as I could achieve it) of the future historian. I have tried to seperate the time serving, the ephemeral, from the permanent. In my next volume I shall be still more outspoken along these lines, for it will not be printed till after my death."

During the last years of his life Garland enjoyed a rest at his new home in Hollywood, beside his wife, daughters and grandchildren. Again, he writes: "I am living here in pleasant exile—a man hastening to be forgotten. I have no complaint to make. I have had a long and happy life, fully 50 years of daily effort, and I now am enjoying such luxury as I never expected to know. While not precisely waiting for the bugle, I am aware of the lengthening shadows across my lawn. 'Lights out' must soon sound. I am done."

Certainly, but unregretfully, he knew that the shadows were closing in. Only a few days before he died he wrote me regarding a memorial volume that his friends were planning for his eightieth birthday. "They are taking a long chance," he said, "on my living into my eighty-first year."

Yes, Hamlin Garland is done; but we know that he is not hastening to be forgotten. We know that though he lived beyond his time, and though his fame was not a sensational one it will for that reason be all the more enduring.

There will never be another Hamlin Garland, for the things that produced him for American literature have passed from our national life. The Middle Border has been replaced by the Dust Bowl; there is no frontier; the trail-makers now are harvesting the Grapes of Wrath. But because of him we know what the frontier was like and how the sons of the Middle Border lived, worked and felt.

Every generation brings forth its kind, but generations continuously overlap and are interminably interlinked. The literature that joins us to the past is of the most vital and enduring kind. Hamlin Garland belongs to the tradition of America's past, and his writings link us—us now living—to it.

We envy him for having lived nearer to America's beginnings, at a time when America was less complicated and when one could understand her and catch and record her vigorous spirit, as he did. We salute him for his work well done and for its indispensability.

'Local Boys Make Good'

Sometimes They Don't

(From Editorial Research Reports.)

PRESIDENT ROOSEVELT, at his press conference Tuesday, said he hoped Senator Vic Donahey (Democrat), of Ohio, would reconsider his decision to retire from politics this year. Many political commentators laid the Senator's decision to a belief on his part that Ohio was bound to go Republican in November. At all events, the senior Senator from the Buckeye State said on Wednesday that there was a chance that he would change his mind, but he usually stuck to his decisions.

In remarking that he hoped Senator Donahey would run for some political office again in November, President Roosevelt told his press conference on Tuesday that the Ohio Democrat was a very valuable man who ought to remain in public life. But Donahey's voting record in the Senate in the last five years hardly shows intense activity. A tabulation of 131 of the most important roll calls from 1935 to 1939 shows him not voting on 60 (46 per cent). In only 8 of the 60 absences was he paired.

Such votes as Senator Donahey did cast show him neither an out-and-out New Dealer nor an out-and-out anti-New Dealer. All in all then, cynics in Washington found another answer for President Roosevelt's attitude on Senator Donahey. They held that the President wanted the national Democratic ticket to be aided in Ohio by having the name of Donahey on the ballot. "Honest Vic" has a formidable record of vote-getting. He was elected Senator in 1934 by a majority of 437,000 over Senator Fess, formerly chairman of the Republican National Committee, while the Democratic candidate for Governor (Davey) was winning by only 66,000. Two years before, the Democratic candidate for the Senate (Bulkley) had won by only 167,000.

TO HELP OUT the national ticket by having a powerful vote-getter in a large, doubtful State on the ballot is an old political maneuver. But the record shows that often the local favorite either fails to help out or else is not needed. And sometimes the maneuver backfires.

It backfired in 1928 when Alfred E. Smith persuaded Franklin D. Roosevelt to run for Governor of New York while the former was running for the Presidency. Roosevelt was understood to prefer private life, in order to regain his health, and to have accepted the nomination only because of his close personal and political ties with Smith. As former Assistant Secretary of the Navy, Democratic Vice Presidential candidate and up-State anti-Tammany leader, Roosevelt was expected to help out Smith in the most important State politically.

But the State which had elected Smith Governor over Ogden L. Mills by almost 250,000 votes two years before now went against him by over 100,000. Roosevelt himself managed to squeak through by 25,000 votes; and that was the beginning of Smith's political decline.

IN 1936 Roosevelt tried similar tactics in New York and persuaded Herbert H. Lehman to run for Governor again. Lehman had announced his decision to retire to private life, but finally he was persuaded that his name on the ticket was needed to help out Roosevelt for re-election. But Roosevelt needed no help, carrying the State by over 1,100,000 votes, while Lehman's majority was only 520,000.

The next year Lehman helped mightily in killing President Roosevelt's Supreme Court plan by coming out publicly against it. In 1938, after Thomas E. Dewey had been nominated for Governor by the Republicans, Lehman consented to run again, to save the State for the Democratic Party. But this time he squeaked through with a majority of only 64,000 and Dewey immediately became a strong Republican Presidential possibility.

Similarly, a man strong in a certain State or a certain section may be given the Vice Presidential nomination in the hope that he will help out the Presidential nominee. But here too the maneuver often fails. F. D. Roosevelt gave little help to Cox in 1920, when Cox lost New York by over 1,100,000; Charles W. Bryan gave John W. Davis no help in the Middle West in 1924; Senator Joseph T. Robinson, Protestant dry, could not even hold the Solid South for Smith in 1928, and in 1936, although the Republicans nominated a Chicagoan for the Vice Presidency, Landon lost Illinois by over 700,000 votes.

The Once Over

By H. I. Phillips

The Twitchell Poll

Problem Number One now facing all Americans is "How to Behave and What to Say" to the question, "Do you think Roosevelt wants a third term?"

The question is becoming irritating. It is driving many people mad to the point of violence. A survey by this department shows that more people go around asking "Do you think Roosevelt wants a third term?" than any other question, including "What time is it?" and "How is business?"

"Do you think Roosevelt w. a. t. t.?"	11,546,789
"Did you ever see a winter like this?"	6,785,432
"Do you think things are any better?"	5,935,824
"Do you think there is any chance of peace by spring over there?"	5,436,890
"Am I lifting my head or is it my grip on the club?"	1,456,233

The interrogation is becoming a menace. It is getting on the nerves of America. The Twitchell Poll showed that 550,634 persons interviewed last week favored bashing the head of the person asking the question; 134,588 favored throttling; 25,678 were for the use of firearms.

Mr. Twitchell thinks there will be wide bloodshed if something isn't done about the matter. Always against violence, he believes the thing to do when anybody asks the question is to stare at the person intently and make no reply at first. When the person repeats the question he would answer: "Oh, I don't know. You've got to remember that the Yanks are a terrific hitting club."

When the third person says, "What I asked was do you think Roosevelt wants a third term?" he favors the reply, "That's all very well, and the Finns are putting up a brave fight, but Russia has them outnumbered."

But this course has its drawbacks. It foils the questioner, but is a strain on the other party. This column has asked some leading citizens what they now say when anybody chirps, "Do you think Roosevelt, etc."

John Hamilton: "I just say, 'I'm all right; how are you feeling?'"

Al Smith: "My answer is always, 'It depends whether it's on white or rye bread.'"

Nicholas Murray Butler: "When anybody asks me, 'Do you think Roosevelt will run again?' I just yawn and say, 'I don't know; I'm a stranger here myself.'"

Congressman Dies: "I just ask questions, I don't answer 'em."

Greta Garbo: "When anybody esk me if Roosevelt bane run again I always say, 'No; Jimmy no want it any more; he is satisfied to stay in Hollywood.'"

So there you are.

Regulating Regulators

By Mark Sullivan

Courts Too Slow

RESENTFUL CITIZENS see those census questions merely as impudence, invasions of privacy—questions asked by a Government agent which would not be asked by a relative or friend. But those disputed questions illustrate something broader. They come just in time to make vivid to the public America's new experience with an age-long controversy, the difference between government by law and government by men.

Those disputed questions were never written by Congres. Congress never anticipated those questions, nor knew about them, until the public outcry arose. When we go back to examine the law authorizing the census, which Congress enacted, and the circumstances of the enactment, we find that the law does not authorize the questions now resented. It is safe to assume Congress never would have authorized those questions. Congress today disapproves the questions. If Congress does not now forbid the questions to be asked, it is only because the millions of blanks are printed, and the census is under way. In spite of that, Congress may still forbid the questions. They will, if the public demand is strong enough.

These disputed census questions are not laws; they are regulations, which is quite a different thing. Persons who refuse to answer the questions, like the shoemaker of Wisconsin, are not law-breakers. They are mere regulation defiers. They are not resisting a law that Congress wrote; they are resisting a regulation that some Government employe wrote.

THIS SORT of thing happens all the time. Congress passes a law. Necessarily, Congress, in writing the law, cannot make a detailed provision in advance for every situation that will arise under the law. So Congress merely writes the law in broad terms and provides a penalty, commonly fine or jail, or both, for violations. Then Congress leaves the execution of the law to the executive branch of the Government, to employes in the various departments and bureaus. These now proceed to make what are called "regulations." These regulations are not the law itself, but they have the effect of law.

More and more, employes in the executive branch tend to exercise wide latitude in making their regulations, and to regard the law as a charter permitting them to exercise wide discretion and great power. More and more, as in this census case, the executive employes tend to write regulations which go beyond what Congress intended. The bureaucrats tend to make themselves a kind of Congress of their own creating. They write regulations—in effect laws—which the real Congress would not write. This privilege, of their own seizing, is prized by the bureaucrats. When the real Congress protests, or a citizen complains, the bureaucrats resent it. They try to hold on to their power and extend it.

There is a vivid illustration in the National Labor Relations Board. When the labor law was written, employers assumed, as a matter of course, that they could make petitions to the board. But when they tried it, the board refused to receive any petition from any employer. Complaint arose. It was proposed that Congress should enact an amendment to the law, making it clear that the board must receive petitions from employers.

The Labor Board took account of the complaints. They said, in effect, it won't be necessary for Congress to change the law—we will change it ourselves. The Labor Board said they would now receive petitions from employers, and proceeded to do so.

Here was a case of law-making by the Labor Board. First, the law denied employers the right to petition. Then the law gave employers that right. It was the same law, in the same words. Congress, the real Congress, had not made the change. The change had been made by the board, acting as if it were a self-authorized law-making body, a self-created Congress.

This self-conferred privilege, this power, is hotly defended by the Labor Board. It resents complaint by citizens. It resists revision by Congress. It resents review by courts. It insists upon having power within itself to make the law mean one thing today, the opposite tomorrow.

THIS MAKING of regulations by boards and individuals in the executive branch of Government has increased enormously under the New Deal. It has become a problem recognized by everyone who prizes the liberty and the rights of the individual citizen. True, in many cases, the citizen has theoretically the right to appeal to the courts. But as a practical matter, appeal to the courts is difficult. One of the triple-A laws, dealing with the acreage a farmer might plant of a crop, gave him specifically the right of appeal to the courts from any quota that an agent of triple-A might impose upon him. But crops must be planted within the limits of a brief season. Before the appeal of an aggrieved farmer could be carried through the courts, it would be time for harvest.

To meet this situation, to restrict the powers of boards and Government employes, to insure that regulations made by Government employes shall not exceed the bounds of laws as written by Congress, and to give the citizen wide and easy opportunity for appeal and quick decision—to accomplish this purpose, there is now pending in Congress a measure called the Walter-Logan bill. Last year it was passed by the Senate without a dissenting vote. It is likely to come up in the House before the end of the present session.

L'HOMME A LA HOUE
The painting by Jean Francois Millet which inspired Edwin Markham to write the verses which lifted him almost overnight from obscurity and made him one of the best known and best loved poets of his age. The poem, which was first given to the world in the pages of a newspaper, the San Francisco Chronicle, is republished below

The Man With The Hoe

By Edwin Markham

"In The Deep Abyss Of Labor"

God made man in His own image:
In the image of God He made him
—Genesis.

Bowed by the weight of centuries he leans
Upon his hoe and gazes on the ground,
The emptiness of ages in his face,
And on his back the burden of the world.
Who made him dead to rapture and despair,
A thing that grieves not and that never hopes,
Stolid and stunned, a brother to the ox?
Who loosened and let down this brutal jaw?
Whose was the hand that slanted back this brow?
Whose breath blew out the lights within this brain?

Is this the Thing the Lord God made and gave
To have dominion over sea and land;
To trace the stars and search the heavens for power;
To feel the passion of Eternity?
Is this the dream He dreamed who shaped the suns
And markt their ways upon the ancient deep?
Down all the caverns of Hell to their last gulf
There is no shape more terrible than this—
More tongued with cries against the world's blind greed—
More filled with signs and portents for the soul—
More packt with danger to the universe.

What gulfs between him and the seraphim!
Slave of the wheel of labor, what to him
Are Plato and the swing of Pleiades?
What the long reaches of the peaks of song,
The rift of dawn, the reddening of the rose?
Thru this dread shape the suffering ages look;
Time's tragedy is in that aching stoop;
Thru this dread shape humanity betrayed,
Plundered, profaned and disinherited,
Cries protest to the Powers that made the world,
A protest that is also prophecy.

O masters, lords and rulers in all lands,
Is this the handiwork you give to God,
This monstrous thing distorted and soul-quencht?
How will you ever straighten up this shape;
Touch it again with immortality;
Give back the upward looking and the light;
Rebuild in it the music and the dreams;
Make right the immemorial infamies,
Perfidious wrongs, immedicable woes?

O masters, lords and rulers in all lands,
How will the future reckon with this Man?
How answer his brute question in that hour
When whirlwinds of rebellion shake all shores?
How will it be with kingdoms and with kings—
With those who shaped him to the thing he is—
When this dumb Terror shall rise to judge the world,
After the silence of the centuries?

Anxiety Increases In Rumania

Copyright by New York Times

Bucharest, March 8.—The approach of spring finds this country nervous and pessimistic and the feeling was given expression the other day in an article appearing in the Bucharest daily, Curentul. Despite the words of the Turkish prime minister, the paper says, which were meant to be reassuring, March has not started out encouragingly. The speech, according to the writer, caused a certain amount of excitement, but he takes cognizance of the fact that Turkish-Soviet relations have not undergone any marked change.

The article goes on to cite the restrictive measures taken last week in France (which proved that country is preparing for a long war), the closing of the German-Belgian border, the increased activity on the Western Front, on the sea and in the air, and the generally oppressive atmosphere, and concludes that these "are all signs which prevent any optimism and which makes us believe that more and tragic events are bound to happen before long."

The Thrill That Comes Once In A Lifetime

Text of Roosevelt Speech to Farmers

The text of President Roosevelt's address last night to the AAA farm dinners follows.

As I listened to the remarks of Henry Wallace and Jim Farley just now, and in my mind's eye saw the hundreds of groups of farmers and their friends meeting throughout the country, my memory went back to the scenes of other years.

I remembered the day in September, 1932, when, at Topeka, Kans., under the very hot sun that beat down on the steps of the State Capitol, I talked with an audience of farmers about the farm problem. I gave them my pledge that, if I were called to the White House, I would take the lead in action to reverse the process of agricultural decay which had been eating at our national foundations for many years.

And I have sought consistently and constantly to keep that pledge. Four days after I took office in 1933—while the banks of the country were still closed and we were sternly wrestling with the question of how to get them open again—I called the conference of farmers and leaders of farm organizations to which Secretary Wallace has referred. Seven years ago tonight the call went out to farm leaders by wire and by telephone to convene here in Washington on March 10.

Unity in Emergency

Well do I remember the historic conference at the White House that followed. In that grave emergency, past disagreements were forgotten and all the farm groups quickly united on a new farm plan.

The adoption of that plan in its essential outlines by the Congress marked a far-reaching decision in our national life. We stopped asking agriculture to pay the bill for industry's high tariff. We decided that as a nation we would no longer promote commerce and industry at the expense of agriculture. We decided that as a nation we would abandon the policy of rural neglect.

That old policy of neglect had brought about ten years of depression on our farms and had contributed greatly to depression in the cities. It had hastened the bank panic which in February and early March, 1933, paralyzed business all over the United States.

Program Changed

In the seven years that have elapsed since that time, the national farm program has properly undergone a continued evolution. That first piece of legislation—the Agricultural Adjustment Act of 1933—was a long step forward, but it was not perfect. As the years went by, weather conditions changed, market conditions changed—yes, and even court conditions changed. So the provisions of the farm program have been correspondingly changed.

We have learned from experience, and have gradually adapted the program more and more closely to the needs of the individual farmer, to the needs of the Nation, and to the needs of the land itself. We realized that we had reached our last frontier of new lands—and had no choice but to conserve and rebuild our existing soil.

All through these seven years, one fundamental feature has run like a thread through the successive adjustment and conservation and ever-normal granary programs. That is the essential policy of localized control, with the program run by committees of farmers elected by farmers—and that goes for farmers regardless of what party they happen to be enrolled in.

Committeemen Praised

Experience has amply borne out the wisdom of the safeguards with which those county associations and committees were surrounded. In 3,000 counties—practically all the counties of the Nation which are not occupied wholly by cities—they win respect and they deserve respect. None but those farmer committeemen themselves will ever know how they have sweated over details of the program, how they have sacrificed their own personal interests and their leisure as they spent thousands of hours and drove thousands of miles to make the program succeed.

Back of these committeemen, helping them in their work, giving support to the program, have been some of the great general farm organizations. Not only in the farm communities, but right here in Washington, these organizations have helped to shape and perfect the successive farm laws.

When we launched the National farm program seven years ago, we hoped that recovery in the United States would be accompanied by a great revival of our trade with other countries.

Many Things Have Helped

I wish I could tell you tonight that the whole world had been restored to prosperity and friendly commerce. I wish I could tell you that the markets which your fathers and grandfathers once enjoyed were again open to receive more of your wheat, your pork, your lard, your cotton, your tobacco, your fruit.

I can tell you this—that we have done many things which have helped the situation. Through our reciprocal trade program, we have tried to spread our good-neighbor philosophy through many nations of the world. That program has brought results—results not only in better markets for our industrial goods but in better markets for our farm goods—results of which are mathematically proved in terms of pounds and bushels and dollars and cents. If Congress consents, we shall continue that useful work.

But in spite of all we have done to help preserve and restore peace in the world, the bitter truth is that the world is not at peace. As I speak to you tonight, guns are thundering on the battlefields of Europe and Asia. Ships that ply the seas are exposed to the hazards of bomb and torpedo.

Export Market Needed

In the midst of a world at war, we find that the foreign commerce we had managed to achieve is rudely disturbed. Some people may say, what of that? Does not our domestic trade comprise 90 per cent of all our business? Yes, that is true for the Nation as a whole. But, for some industries, export trade accounts for considerably more than 10 per cent of sales. In agriculture, for example, that is true of cotton, tobacco, apples, lard, wheat and other products. And all agriculture is certain to be seriously affected if our export market disappears.

So it is more than ever important for farmers to have a Government in Washington that is looking out for their interests—not just by uttering glittering generalities but by specific policies and concrete action. It is more than ever important to maintain a national farm program that can be adapted to meet whatever emergencies arise—whether they are emergencies of drought or of lost markets overseas. It is more than ever important to have a Government in Washington that can act to protect the interests of our farmers as well as our business men when foreign trade conditions are upset.

In Europe economic failure has led in some lands to dictatorship. In America we are using the tools of democracy to make our economic system efficient, to preserve our freedom and to keep away even from any talk of dictatorship. The national farm program is American democracy's response to agricultural distress. And any unprejudiced person who knows anything about the subject not only admits but proclaims the fact that our national farm program was democratically conceived and is being democratically conducted with the active help of our farmers themselves.

Times Are Troubled

Furthermore, they proclaim what they know—that their Federal Government counts on farm aid and farm advice to improve that program through the process of actual experience as the need arises. That I call a truly democratic process of government.

These are troubled times we of this generation are living through. Some of us, I know, are tempted to give way to doubt and fear, even to despair.

But when we are beleaguered by thoughts like these, let us remember how the Nation has come through its dark hours of the past, and take courage. Think of Adams and Jefferson and Madison, as they guided the Nation through the confusion of the Napoleonic period, with ships rotting at the docks and millions of dollars of farm products stored on the wharves of the Atlantic seaboard. Think of Lincoln as year after war-torn year he sheltered in his great heart the truest aspirations of a country rent in twain.

We believe our beloved United States will come through all its trials and tribulations of the present. Ever since 1929, the people of the United States have demonstrated the stuff of which they are made.

A Long, Hard Struggle

One of the reasons we know we shall win through is the national farm program, the inception of which you are commemorating tonight. The farm program is a splendid example of what 6,000,000 American families can do, when they have the will and leadership to do it.

The farmers have had a long hard struggle to get laws and programs which give them an opportunity to obtain economic and social justice, to make it possible for them to conserve the good earth which, next to our people and our tradition of freedom, is our greatest heritage.

I am happy in the thought that American farmers have gone part way along that road to economic and social justice, even though they have not reached the goal. I am happy in the thought that American farmers understand full well that other great groups such as industrial and retail groups in the cities, great and small, such as the small businessmen of the Nation, have not yet attained the goal of social and economic justice even though in these seven years they have made undisputed progress toward it.

Confidence in Future

Many years ago I was told by men of experience in State and national affairs that American farmers could never agree on a program. I did not share that pessimistic belief. My friends and I went out to disprove it and the farmers of America showed clearly that we were right. To them goes the honor and the glory.

In the spirit of progressive action that has animated these American farm families, all of us tonight can face with confidence whatever difficulties the future may hold.

Brazil Decrees Partial Payment On Foreign Debt

Rio de Janeiro, March 8 (AP).—President Getulio Vargas today issued a decree which calls for resumption of partial interest payments on Brazil's foreign debt, amounting to about $1,000,000,000.

Under a four-year plan effective April 1, Brazil will pay about $67,200,000 to cover interest which at original rates would total about $378,080,000.

The plan, it was said, will cost Brazil 53 per cent of what was offered by that country in an adjustment plan in 1934.

Informed sources said payments to United States holders of Brazilian dollar bonds, representing about 35 per cent of the total affected, would receive nearly 40 per cent of the toal payment.

Dutch Nazi Youth Group Dissolves

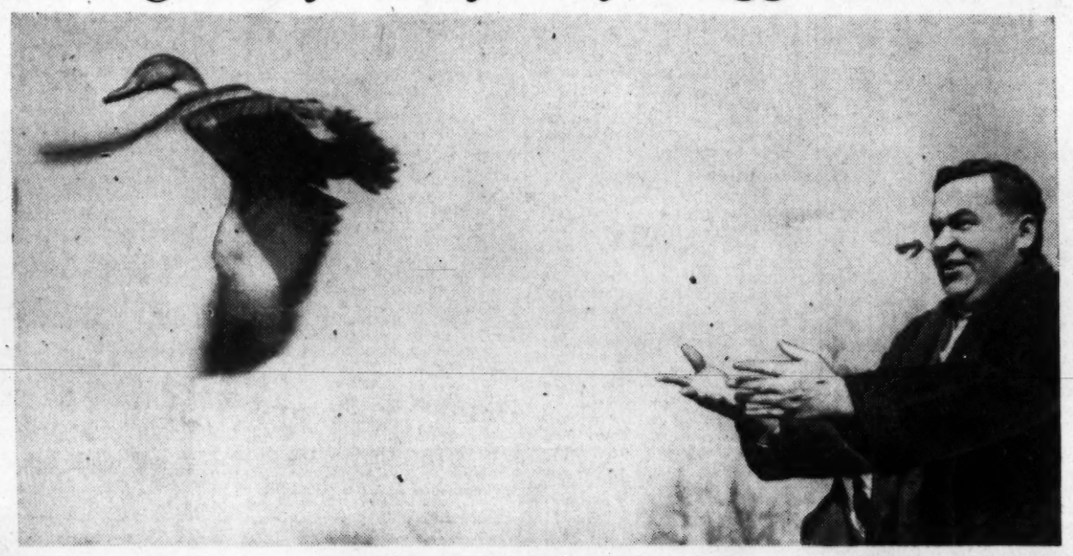
Mallards Fly Here (By Airplane) From Coast For Migratory Study; Lay 3 Eggs en Route



Dr. Ira N. B. Gabrielson, chief of the Biological Survey, releases a mallard. Feathers flew and tickled Dr. Gabrielson under the nose

By Scott Hart

Eleven mallard ducks, including two haughty drakes, arrived here from the West Coast yesterday to end the first transcontinental duck flight by airplane; to herald approach of National Wildlife Restoration Week, and to add to the sum of human knowledge. En route, Nature took her course.

Tickets were had for only 11 ducks, but on arrival there were three additional ducks stowed away in three eggs, laid somewhere above the great plains. The breach of transportation regulatory measures was dismissed by Federal authorities on the grounds that science, if not the airline, was compensated. For that a duck will lay an egg, as many as three eggs, at high altitudes and while floating through the air without benefit of its wings, had thus been settled.

At the airplane, alighting at Washington Airport, was Dr. Ira N. Gabrielson, chief of the Biological Survey, and staff attendants. More than a dozen photographers lined up as well as many lovers of birds and nature. Flight Capt. J. A. Perry, first aviator to fly wild ducks into Washington, posed. Secretary of the Interior Harold L. Ickes was assigned the top honor, that of opening the cage at Roaches Run, a wildlife sanctuary, hard by, where the ducks were freed in order to continue their service to science.

Post Staff Photos—Del Vecchio.

Could this be the papa? He looks guilty, doesn't he?

The birds, still caged, were transported in an Interior Department truck, followed by 17 automobiles in caravan, and all escorted by motorcycle patrolmen, to the sanctuary where tall, pretty cattails grew by the water and several hundred scaup, pintail and mallards floated, like painted wooden blocks far out.

Mr. Ickes didn't come, so Dr. Gabrielson opened the cage.

The mallard he held had a purple head. It was tense as a violin string. When the scientist turned her loose, what happened was like Casey Jones on his last run out of Memphis. Eyes darting, she surveyed the scene, the sweep of water and an adjacent railroad track, and was off to the South. But after flying 75 feet, she lighted.

The second was loosed, a more positive bird. Without a quack she made the farther shore, thought better of the westerly course, and swung south down the tracks, until she was no larger than a brown marble above the treetops, Alabama bound.

Others, in succession, took to the water, at varying distances. Where they go from here is the chief scientific problem. They wear gold-plated bands, engraved: "Notify Biol. Survey, Washington D. C." The Government, unromantic, seeking facts and figures, paid slight heed to the three eggs, but one of the ducks, on release, lighted near to shore as if to return to her sitting.

But the eggs had got cracked.

Spring Brings Challenge to Improve Throatline

Off and away with that double chin. Three steps, demonstrated here by movie stars, point the way. Above left, Anne Rutherford illustrates the proper method of massage. Center, Mary Howard, with head held high and chin upward stretched, achieves a perfect contour by revolving the head and chin. Double Chins, Out From Furs, Often Show Winter Neglect

Turtle Neck Posture May Have Developed From Wearing Heavy Coats; Dark Crepey Skin Also Must Be Combatted

By Carolyn Abbott.

NOW that high-neck woolen dresses, winter coats and furs are being relegated to the closets, the double chin pops up more predominant than ever. Even the throat is about two shades darker than the face.

As long as you are swathed in furs the effect wasn't too noticable. But the unveiling isn't too pleasing. The whole picture presents a discouraging outlook for the new spring outfits. However, much can be done to improve the bad chin line before donning your Easter finery.

Bad posture does more to mar the chin and throat than all combined foes. It's easy to slump over a book or typewriter and let your chin fall in folds. Determine to sit and walk regally, carry your head directly on top of your shoulders in perfect alignment with your spine.

Once posture faults have been corrected the double chin may disappear. But if it persists after straightening up, you must lengthen and strengthen the controlling muscle, the sternomastoid, that runs along the side of your neck. This muscle holds the rest of the neck in place. Lengthening and strengthening it by exercise is not a long-drawn process, but it does require a little time and patience.

Exercises Avoided

Here are a few simple exercises that will take away the double chin and give you a new contour:

Sit down and slump as much as possible. Now pull your stomach way in and lift your chest. Thrust the chin away out, then slowly draw it back as far as you can in a line parallel to the floor. Place a chair back to the wall so that when you get to the end you will feel your neck pushing against the wall.

Also, lie on a bed, arms relaxed at the side. Allow the head to drop over the top, foot or side of the bed. Slowly raise the head until the chin almost touches the chest, then slowly lower it again. Repeat this at least five times each day, gradually working up to 20 daily. This exercise firms the muscles under the chin and perfects the contour of the neck.

Other exercises that benefit both throat and chin are:

Daily Cleansing Needed

Another: Place the fingertips on the shoulders, elbows pressed against the body, then lift the shoulders in a rotating movement, reversing direction each time.

In addition to the exercises, the throat needs daily cleansing and massaging. After cleansing with soap and water or cream, apply a rich lubricating cream. Work it in with upward and outword rotary movements that stimulate the circulation. Add a few brisk pats under the chin and along the jaw line.

A bleaching cream or pack, applied only to the throat, will banish the dingy yellowness caused by coats and high-neck dresses. One that is easily made and will whiten the skin is this: Mix a half-cup of milk with almond meal to form a paste. Apply this to the face and leave on about 20 minutes. Another is a paste formed by adding the juice of one lemon to a well-beaten egg and almond meal. Spread on neck to stay for 20 minutes and remove with cotton pads dipped in warm water.

A Woman's New York

Eating Place Found Where Quiet Reigns And Rumba Is Taboo

New York, March 8.

THE fortunate people who live in the United States, far from this strange foreign port or "free city" of New York, may well think that the only places to go after dinner or the theater are these hectic drums where yellow boys rattle the gourds, and rumba dancers wriggle, and people fight, and the noise is appalling. Of course, it isn't really so, and there's one quiet gathering spot which is really dear to my heart, as a confirmed night-club hater.

HUGHES

This home from home is what is called The Oak Room, in the dear old Plaza Hotel, at the edge of Central Park. Only a few feet away the inn's gala Persian Room is filled with dance music and dancers, and probably a few upper-case movie actresses. But in the Oak Room all is peace—no music, no so-called entertainment. Just victuals and drinks and talk, in a masculine atmosphere of sturdy oaken tables and chairs—none of this overstressed red leather and chromium so dear to the flashy cocktail lounges of the day. Women are welcome in the evening, and I spent some mighty pleasant hours there a few nights ago, talking shop with David Rosenblum, new general manager of an afternoon paper here.

We had a go at some excellent shad roe, too, and during the evening saw and chatted with many others who love the place. Lillian Hellman, author of "The Little Foxes," and Laura Hobson, magazine girl, who was with the Ralph Ingersoll who proposes to publish a new tabloid here, to be called "P. M." And there were Bab Willimetz, a lady of title who works for a style mag, and Elizabeth Adams, who styles for a big mail-order house.

GIRL ABOUT TOWN—Speaking of this oddly foreign metropolis, I sometimes wonder if there is an American consul here. I really must drop Secretary Hull a note about it, as though the poor man didn't have enough frets these days, with the old world at war, the British burgling our mail, and so on.

Add to the broken leg from skiing brigade—Richard Koret who makes some of the best handbags now being toted in our country.

Dental Decay Largely Seasonal, Authority Says

Why does the path to the dentist's office seem to find more use during spring and summer months? An answer is partly supplied by Dr. S. F. Erpf in the Journal of the American Dental Association, who points out that dental decay to a considerable degree is seasonal.

The incidence of defective teeth, he says, is affected by the activating value of the vitamins. Vitamin D, the bone and tooth building vitamin, is normally supplied by the ultraviolet rays of sunlight. In winter the ultraviolet or vitamin D creating rays of the sun are only one-eighth as strong as the rays of the sun on June 15.

Therefore, tooth decay more frequently starts in winter when the teeth do not receive sufficient vitamin D. The result is that the path to the dentist's office becomes more beaten by spring and summer.

Girls Headed for Stardom All Know Work; Learning to Control Body Necessary in Dramatics

THERE is something about hard work that demands and gets respect. And, let me tell you, the boys and girls who are headed toward future stage and screen stardom know all there is to know about hard work!

Certainly that is my impression after watching the American Academy of Dramatic Arts in action . . . and I saw only one department, that conducted by Ruth Wilton, who frolics through a set of calisthenics that would leave the average woman in a weary condition. Miss Wilton is a streamlined but sturdy instructor who believes in the efficacy of the good example!

The ultimate objective in teaching the students to use their arms and legs correctly is to enable them to make use of pantomime when they have no lines to speak. If you think about it, you will realize that the elbows can say a lot—hold them tight against the ribs and turn the hands up in deprecating little gestures and what have you? A picture of timidity and self-consciousness; Elbows akimbo express aggressiveness!

Tuck the Hips Under

But if you were learning to be an actress you would start out with the rudimentary things—learning to hold your spine in a straight line so that you don't have a sway back or succumb to the temptation to let your head drop back lazily on your neck. You would have it dinned into you that you must hold your chest up, pull your ribcage as far away from the hips as possible, hold the head up rather than back, and keep the shoulders down and relaxed.

Since you couldn't possibly keep all those rules in your head and be anything but acutely self-conscious, there are exercises, and probably more of them than you suspected, to help you acquire the feeling of proper balance that takes care of everything very nicely.

One of the first things you would learn is to "tuck the hips under." You are familiar with this phrase. Some of you profess not to know what it means. All it amounts to is rolling the pelvic girdle down and under from the back, and up from the front, beginning with the lower abdominal muscles. It looks like a Hawaiian dance movement. If you lie down on the back on the floor, hands down at sides, legs extended down, and then pull the small of the back down to touch it to the floor, you will find that, involuntarily, you also pull up with these lower abdominal muscles. You "roll" the pelvic girdle. You tuck the hips under!

An Exercise to Rest

Once you learn the tuck-under position, you walk and run, first forward, then backward, taking long strides and swinging the legs freely from the hip joints. One of Miss Wilton's most difficult problems is to persuade the beginner to give up walking with the knees bent, hips out in back—what she calls a "sitting down, standing up" manner of navigating.

By the way, when you are desperately tired, Miss Wilton suggests this relaxing exercise: Lie on back on the floor, knees flexed and feet held off the floor. Clasp the hands under the knees and just lie there. That exercise straightens out your tired spine and is exceedingly restful. Fifteen minutes of that, followed by a hot bath, will pick you up amazingly.

There are any number of excellent posture exercises, but you will have to do some thinking about posture between exercises. When standing and walking, try to carry the chest up always, with the weight slightly forward so that an imaginary line from the center of the chest to the floor would fall directly between the balls of the feet.

Mary Haworth's Mail

Blessed With Love and Security, Woman Is Haunted By Fear of Hunger, Cold and Want; Why Is This?

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: I know there are thousands of persons worse off than myself and I have many things to be thankful for. But for years and years I have wakened in the middle of the night and worried about the future. I am 50, married (happily, for 28 years), have no children and, now, no living relatives. For 22 years I have worked at work I like. I went to work because I knew that my husband would never be able to support me and at the same time accumulate enough to keep me in my old age.

For 15 years I contributed to my parents' needs. Consequently, I was unable to save much, and then, too, I lost some small savings in the 1929 crash. At present, I have about $10,000, which, as you know, would go very fast with any illness. I can't enjoy the next few years for worrying about my future. Our salaries are small, allowing us to save very little.

At present, we have health, comfort, position and friends, but no money to spare for luxuries or many charities. While I know my blessings and daily give thanks for them, this fear I have concerning the future makes me ill at times. Don't the thousands who have less worry as I do? How do they keep from going mad? I have never been really poor, but the thoughts of hunger, cold, want, etc., have terrified me since childhood. I do not know why.

This has gone on for many years. But now, reading your answers to many problems, I am hoping you may be able to give me some word or thought that will dispel my fear and help me to enjoy, with my good husband, our few remaining years together. I have never discussed any of the above with anyone in my life, as you are the first person I have thought could help.

PHOEBE.

Hangover From Childhood Panic

DEAR PHOEBE: The fear of disaster lurking around the corner, which has haunted you since childhood, has little, if anything, to do with the possibility of "hunger, cold, want, etc."—since you have never known these experiences and are not likely to know them. You have suffered since childhood from a sense of insecurity, which is something else again, and which may derive from an emotional shock sustained in your earliest years; a shock which left a residue of fear and perhaps of guilt, so that you are constantly anticipating punishment or deprivation as the price of your fancied sin.

It could be, of course, that while still too young for your memory to have kept a conscious record of the episode you overheard your parents anxiously discussing finances, or making jocular references to the "poor house," or deploring the plight of certain persons in stark need.

Snatches of adult conversation concerning famine in other parts of the world may have reached your ears; or indigestible fragments of discourse on the evils which inevitably overtake the shiftless and extravagant; or lurid bits of some pessimist's pronuncations on the cruelty of life generally. And in the manner of the intensely imaginative solitary child, you may have lain awake afterward, fighting off a locust plague of indefinable terrors, seemingly too awful to describe even to the most receptive audience.

I am confident your lifelong habit of "night terror," if microscopically analyzed, would trace back to some such beginnings. The very fact that you never have found it possible to discuss the neurotic phenomenon with anyone suggests that it is a hangover from tongue-freezing childhood panic, incidentally inspired and outlandishly exaggerated. In hugging the nightmare to your breast from the hour of its inception until now, you have built it into a Frankenstein.

Probably the only way to get rid of it permanently is to have a few conferences with a psychiatrist or psycho-analyst, who could guide you back along memory's labyrinthine ways until you stumble across the bogeyman, which will seem harmless as a scarecrow at second glance.

The truth of the matter is that you have in hand enviable security — economically, socially and emotionally. With a "good husband," friends, health, material comforts, social position, $10,000 in savings, an annual earned income sufficient to your daily needs, and (I assume) the privilege of keeping your present job as long as you choose, you would be greedy in asking more. At the age of 50, blessed with sound organic health, you are in the very prime of life, and it is absurd to speak of your future in terms of "our few remaining years."

Incidentally, it might help you to read Dr. Louis E. Bisch's book, "Be Glad You're Neurotic," from which we learn that worry is symptomatic of superior intelligence; except that worry is misuse of one of mankind's greatest creative faculties—the gift of imaginative foresight. The faculty of imagining, when constructively used, as in the case of all great inventive pioneers—scientists, artists, authors, engineers, architects, humanitarians, etc.—has given the world every attribute of so-called civilization.

Be glad, therefore, that you have this dynamic faculty of projecting yourself, on the wings of fancy, into conceivable future situations that may be translated from dream to reality. But use the gift for compelling from life those things you most desire—not in cluttering your mental landscape with negative situations and destructive images.

Improve Your Personality

DOES IT happen to you too often—that you are forgotten when the plums are given out? Do you wonder why the other girl is chosen to meet the celebrity, to go to the club dance? Why does someone else get the job you wanted?

Usually the difference between you and the "chosen" is one of personality. Does that discourage you? It needn't. For people with magnetic friend-winning personalities have simply built up—sometimes instinctively—a stock of pleasing traits. You, anyone, by using a little psychology can do that, too.

Perhaps you have been trying to get people interested in you by talking about yourself. You've filled your conversation with "MY job . . . MY date." A psychologist would tell you sprinkle your talk with YOU and YOUR. Show an interest in other people's jobs and dates. They'll respond to it eagerly. Few are as confident as they seem. That seemingly cool, reserved young man you haven't "dared to talk to" is likely to melt at a sincerely spoken compliment.

And no fear that you won't look a person worth knowing if you know how to give your appearance, grooming a magic touch. Your voice, your speech—these, too, can serve you in winning friends.

Yes, thrilling—how you can change your personality—and with it your whole life. Our 40-page booklet, "Secrets of a Winning Personality," has sound advice, based on psychological principles, for building a radiant personality. Gives dozens of pointers on dress, grooming, voice.

Send 15 cents in coins for our booklet, "Secrets of a Winning Personality," to The Washington Post Home Institute, 109 West Nineteenth Street, New York, N. Y. Write plainly your name, address, and the name of the booklet.

Tenderize Meats With Cranberries

Good news for the thrifty housewives! Here's a quick, easy way to tenderize your inexpensive cuts of meat . . . with cranberries. It's as simple as this—for each three pounds meat (pot roast or boiled meats of less tender cuts), add two cups of raw cranberries to the gravy or juice while it is cooking.

Try this tenderizing treatment on your favorite low-priced meat for your next meal, and see what a difference it makes. You'll be delighted with the extra richness, extra tenderness, extra flavor it gives both meat and gravy!

Blisses to Entertain For Archduke Otto

Dinner Arranged at Dumbarton Oaks For Claimant to Nonexistent Austrian Throne; Hapburgs Visit White House

Almost as much a part of visiting royalty's schedule here as a call at the White House is an entertainment at Dumbarton Oaks, palatial Georgetown home of Mr. and Mrs. Robert Woods Bliss. So it should not surprise local society that Mr. and Mrs. Bliss have already arranged a dinner tonight in honor of Archduke Otto, claimant to the nonexistent Austro-Hungarian throne whose full name is only exceeded in length by a title of practically staggering proportions.

The Secretary of War, Harry H. Woodring, and several other Capital notables have been asked to meet young Otto tonight. Mrs. Woodring will be one of the honor guests at the Women's National Press Club party, so her husband will take to Dumbarton Oaks her sister, Mrs. Robert Greenwood, of Fitchburg, Mass., who is visiting them for a few days.

Yesterday the Senate rose in a body to bow in greeting to the Archduke and his brother, Archduke Felix, who were seated as ordinary tourists in the visitor's gallery. Referring to the brothers as being "affable, agreeable and democratic," Majority Leader Alben Barkley, of Kentucky, suggested the Senate action.

Later the Hapsburg brothers were whirled to tea at the White house, where their ambition to meet the President and Mrs. Roosevelt was realized. They were accompanied by William Bullitt, our Ambassador to France, and Luise Rainer, Austrian-born actress. After a pleasant chat with the Chief Executive the brothers went on to the Carlton, where the Secretary and Mrs. Cordell Hull received them informally in their apartment.

The young pretender's full name is Franz Josef Otto Robert Marie Charles Maximilien Henri Sixte Savier Felix Renatus Louis Gaeten Pie Ignace. His full title runs Emperor of Austria, King of Bohemia, of Dalmatia, of Croatia, of Slavonia, of Galicia, of Lodomeria and Illyria, Archduke of Austria, Grand Duke of Tuscany and Cracovia, Duke of Lorraine, of Salzburg, of Styria, of Charintia, of Carniola and Bukovina and Great Prince of Transylvania.

Martins and Manlys Hosts at Tea

Despite the title, Archduke Otto is visiting the Capital just as the Duke of Bar, and the White House did not roll out the red rug used for royalty. The brothers are stopping at a hotel, as did the Sultan of Muscat and Oman, a sightseer of past summers who tied up Capital traffic.

The brothers' hosts this evening, Mr. and Mrs. Bliss, entertained the Crown Prince of Sweden, Gushav Adolf, when he was here summer before last, and have been host to dozens of other titled visitors.

The Capital was the scene of several other pleasant tea parties yesterday afternoon. Senhora de Martins, wife of the Brazilian envoy, was host to their talented compatriot, Carmen Miranda, who came to pay her respects at the embassy. Senhora de Martins is a sculptress and is very much interested in artistic folk.

Two attractive newlyweds, the Assistant Secretary of the Interior and Mrs. Oscar Chapman, were honor guests at a tea given yesterday by Mrs. Chapman's uncle and aunt, Mr. and Mrs. Basil Manly. Mr. and Mrs. Chapman returned this week from a honeymoon in Havana and are living at the Kennedy-Warren.

Bride's Sister Sends Flowers

Decorations at the party were originally planned to carry out an all-white motif, but so many friends sent bouquets that the drawing and dining rooms were bowers of spring blossoms in every every shade. The tea table was centered with white candles and pink camelias, which were sent by the bride's sister, Mrs. H. R. Bodemuller, from Lafayette, La.

The bride was gowned in a floor-length frock of watermelon pink, made with a high neck, cowl back and bracelet-length sleeves. A corsage of gardenias completed her costume.

The hostess had chosen wine colored crepe made on classic lines and topped off her ensemble with an heirloom garnet necklace and gold brooch and a corsage of gardenias.

Pouring tea were Mrs. Burton K. Wheeler, Mrs. Robert La Follette, Mrs. D. Worth Clark, Mrs. Henry F. Grady, Mrs. Raymond Clapper, Mrs. Donald Richberg, Mrs. John O. Herrick, Mrs. Arthur Altmeyer, Mrs. Emily Newell Blair, Mrs. Ross T. McIntire, Mrs. George Holmes and Mrs. William Johnstone.

Generally assisting were Mrs. Wendell Lund, Mrs. Frederick Towers, Mrs. Frank Waring, Mrs. Hildreth Bond, Mrs. Grady, Mrs. Clapper and Mrs. Richberg.

Art Dominates Talk at Party Of Mrs. Black

Wife of Justice Has 'Talent' to Lunch In Alexandria

Mrs. Hugo Black is concentrating on art these days, having given up, momentarily, her ambitions to be a short story writer. This fact about the engaging wife of Justice Black was revealed at the luncheon which she gave yesterday afternoon at her home in Alexandria.

Six lessons at the Studio House of Phillips Memorial Gallery have not convinced Mrs. Black that she is another Rosa Bonheur, for she admits that she hasn't yet discovered whether she has real talent. Even so, Mrs. Black finds it all very absorbing.

Table talk revolved almost exclusively around art yesterday, for there was a lot of "talent" at the luncheon table. The table, incidentally, was centered with a low bouquet of white Eastern lilies and carnations.

Mrs. William B. Bankhead, who has gone in for sculpture in a big way, says she finds the work fascinating. She recently completed a head of Senator John Bankhead—a kind of companion piece for her head of the Speaker. At the opposite end of the table was Mrs. Harry Woodring, a portrait painter, who was well on the way to fame a few years ago. Three vivacious youngsters keep the Secretary of War's wife constantly on the go, but Mrs. Woodring does take to the canvas while spending the summers in New England with her parents. Also at the luncheon was Mrs. Robert E. Greenwood, Mrs. Woodring's sister, who recently arrived from her home in Fitchburg, Mass., for a brief visit.

Attractive Mrs. William O. Douglas, smartly turned out in a navy ensemble, was there, as were Mrs. J. Frederick Essary and Mrs. Clarence Lee Miller.

Prices Honor Eric Clarkes

Col. and Mrs. Charles F. B. Price entertained at a dinner party last night for their house guests, Mr. and Mrs. Eric G. Clarke, from Shanghai, China. Mrs. Clarke is the former Ruth Johnson, of this city, and attended school here.

Since their arrival in Washington they have been the guests of honor at a number of parties. Yesterday Mrs. C. G. Morgan entertained at luncheon for Mrs. Clarke. Today they will motor down to Dahlgren, Va., with Commander and Mrs. Valentine Pottle and spend the day.

On Monday the Clarkes will go to New York and from there will leave for the West Coast, where they will sail for their home in Shanghai.

Mrs. Roosevelt Honorary Head Of Ice Carnival

Mrs. Roosevelt is honorary chairman for the arrangements of the Ice Carnival of 1940 sponsored by the Washington Figure Skating Club for the benefit of the Washington Society for the Blind March 23 and 25 at Riverside Stadium.

Patronesses include Mrs. Ross T. McIntire, who is secretary of the society for the blind; Mrs. William A. Morgan, Mrs. Thomas Parran, Mrs. C. S. White, Mrs. W. A. Bloedorn, Mrs. A. J. Chenery, Mrs. E. J. Cummings, Mrs. William T. Davis, Mrs. J. N. Greear, jr., Mrs. G. W. Leadbetter and Mrs. J. C. Magee.

Among Those Present at Town Hall

Underwood & Underwood

Mrs. Ralph Fisher, wife of Maj. Fisher, and Mrs. Edward H. White, wife of Maj. White, were in the crowd which heard Mrs. Franklin D. Roosevelt speak at the Town Hall meeting at the Shoreham yesterday

Mrs. Luke To Be Married

Mrs. Ralph Worthington and her daughter, Mrs. Marian Worthington Luke, will leave by motor Monday for New York, where the latter's marriage to Norman Keith, of Malvern, Pa., will take place Wednesday.

Her wedding day falls on the 13th of the month, but Mrs. Luke claims that is her lucky number. The ceremony, an extremely simple one, will take place at the Central Presbyterian Church and the bride-to-be will have no attendants.

Mr. Keith and his bride will sail the same day for a honeymoon in Nassau and Cuba. On the way back they will stop in Georgia for a visit with Mrs. Luke's brother-in-law and sister, Mr. and Mrs. William Coad, jr., who are staying at their plantation there. The couple will make their home in Philadelphia.

Another wedding of a popular Washington couple which will take place out of town is that of Miss Nancy Luttrell and Edgar Orme, jr., who will be married March 30. Because of illness of the bride's father, Nathaniel Horace Luttrell, and the prospective bridegroom's mother, Mrs. Edgar Orme, the ceremony will take place at Palm Beach. Mr. Luttrell goes there every winter and, though now in New York, will be at the resort for the wedding.

Only members of the two families and friends of the young couple who are now in Florida will be at the ceremony. Miss Luttrell will leave Washington a week before her marriage to complete details for the ceremony.

Dents Announce Birth of a Son

Mr. and Mrs. Edward Addison Dent, jr., announce the birth of a son, Edward Addison Dent 3d, on March 5 at Georgetown University Hospital.

Mrs. Dent is the former Mary Elizabeth Cox, daughter of Mrs. Daniel Joseph Cox.

Notes of Society

Official and Residential

The Ambassador of Peru, Manuel de Freyre y Santander, gave a luncheon yesterday for the newly appointed United States Ambassador to Peru and Mrs. R. Henry Norweb. Mr. and Mrs. Norweb left Washington last night for New York, where they will remain before sailing March 22 for Peru.

The Belgian Ambassador and Countess van der Straten Ponthoz will entertain at dinner on Monday evening and again on Tuesday. They were hosts at dinner last night at the embassy on Massachusetts avenue.

The Military Attache of the Brazilian Embassy, Maj. Jose Bina Machado, has been appointed a lieutenant colonel.

Thomas Leiter will sail from Miami aboard his yacht, the Pegasus, for a cruise to the West Indies. He will be accompanied by Mr. and Mrs. E. Kenneth Jenkins, of Warrenton, and Miss Helen Potter.

Mrs. Emory Sands, of New York, will leave Washington today to visit her cousin, Mrs. Adgate Duer, of Baltimore. She has been staying here with Mr. and Mrs. George A. Garrett.

Mrs. Frederick A. Johnston, of Takoma Park, who will sail March 20 with Mr. Johnston for San Juan, Puerto Rico, was guest of honor at a luncheon and bridge given yesterday by Mrs. Arthur Tool. Mrs. Johnston shared honors at the party with Mrs. C. O. Mattfeldt, of San Antonio, Tex., who is visiting Washington.

Mr. and Mrs. George L. Harrison, who were married here last Saturday, are honeymooning at the Pancoast Hotel in Miami Beach. Mrs. Harrison is the former Mrs. Cary Grayson and her husband is president of the Federal Reserve Bank of New York.

Mr. and Mrs. H. Alexander Walker, of Honolulu, who are spending the spring season at the Mayflower, have as their guest Mrs. Vernon Tenney, of New York.

Mrs. J. F. Smith and her sister, Mrs. Mae Waesch, with Miss Margaret Waesch, have returned to their homes on Van Buren street, Takoma Park, after a two weeks' vacation in Miami.

Mr. and Mrs. Charlton B. Rout and Mr. and Mrs. Thomas J. Rout are among Washington arrivals at the Vinoy Park Hotel, St. Petersburg, Fla.

Col. and Mrs. D. Walker Wear are at the Mayflower en route from Miami Beach to their home in New York.

Robert P. Skinner And Wife Arrive To Stay Six Weeks

Robert P. Skinner, former United States Ambassador to Turkey, and Mrs. Skinner have arrived for a stay of six weeks at the Mayflower. They have a home in Belfast, Me., and one in Paris, but their return to the French capital is indefinite because of the war.

A career diplomat, Mr. Skinner served as consul general to London from 1914 to 1924 and filled the same position in Paris. In 1926 he was named Minister to Greece and after that to Latvia, Esthonia and Lithuania.

Berles to Give Party for Press

The Assistant Secretary of the State Department and Mrs. Adolf Berle will entertain at a cocktail party this afternoon for members of the press who cover the State Department.

The small company of guests, some 50 in all, will also include diplomats and Government officials. Mr. and Mrs. Berle will entertain at a party again next Saturday afternoon.

Mrs. Roosevelt Addresses 800

Several Republican women leaders were in an audience of 800 which heard Mrs. Roosevelt talk on "Woman's Place in the Modern World" at the Shoreham Hotel yesterday. Mrs. Charles McNary, wife of the Senate Minority Leader, and Mrs. Ralph O. Brewster, wife of the Representative from Maine, were among those who heard the First Lady speak under auspices of the Town Hall.

After her talk Mrs. Roosevelt answered many questions. She was dressed for a springlike day in a smart navy blue suit with a white collar and a navy hat trimmed with a cluster of Dubonnet flowers.

Among her audience were two Cabinet wives, Mrs. Henry Morgenthau, jr., and Mrs. Henry A. Wallace, who afterwards were luncheon guests of Mrs. Jacob Leander Loose at the hotel.

Others present included Mrs. Harlan Fiske Stone, Mrs. Claude Pepper, Mrs. Guy M. Gillette, Mrs. Henry F. Grady, wife of the Assistant Secretary of State; Mrs. Daniel C. Roper, Mrs. Wade H. Ellis, Mrs. James Carroll Frazier, Mrs. Hoffman Philips, Mrs. Leander McCormick-Goodhart, Mrs. Robert Love Taylor, Mrs. Emerson Howe, Mrs. B. B. Jones, Mrs. Oscar Ryder, Mrs. C. C. Calhoun, Miss Vera Bloom, Mrs. Clarence Norton Goodwin and Miss Sibella Skidelsky.

Entertaining at luncheon following the lecture were Mrs. Oswald Ryan, Mrs. P. J. Lockwood, Mrs. Stanley Smith, Mrs. Adam Weir, Mrs. Charles Kappler, Mrs. Robert Turner, Countess Luetichen, Mrs. Rudolph Stanley-Brown, Mrs. Bruce Smith, Mrs. Leslie Garnett, Miss Rebecca Dial, Mrs. Alexander Stark and Dr. and Mrs. Harry W. Little.

Rep. Byron, Wife To Be Silver Spring Women's Guests

Representative and Mrs. William D. Byron will be honor guests at the silver tea to be given tomorrow afternoon from 4 until 6 o'clock at the home of Mr. and Mrs. John C. Livingston, 602 South Noyes drive, Silver Spring, Md., by the Young Women's Democratic Club of Silver Spring.

Alternating at the tea table will be Mrs. Frances McFadden, president of the United Women's Democratic Club of Maryland; Mrs. Raymond Clapper, Mrs. Charles Roach, Mrs. Ralph Wells, president of the Montgomery County Women's Democratic Club; Mrs. R. M. Poole and Mrs. John B. Diamond 3d.

Society Sponsors Lenten Concert

Senora de Boyd, wife of the Panamanian Ambassador, heads the list of distinguished patrons who will attend the Lenten concert of the Washington a Cappella Choir, Monday night at 8:30 o'clock in the Constitution Hall.

Mme. Irimescu, wife of the Minister of Rumania; Dr. Hans Thomsen, of the German Embassy, and Mrs. Owen J. Roberts are others on the patrons' list, which includes Mrs. Copley Amory, Mrs. Jesse C. Adkins, the Rev. Howard Stone Anderson, Mrs. Harry Bernton, Mrs. Dion S. Birney, Mrs. W. W. Boyd and Mrs. Winthrop Chanler.

Gov. Vanderbilt Brings Wife To Capital for Press Party

Daughter Will Drive Up From School To Spend the Day With Them; They'll Return to Providence Tomorrow

The galaxy of prominent women here for the annual stunt party tonight of the Women's National Press Club includes one lady who was accompanied to town by her husband—charming Mrs. William Vanderbilt, wife of the Governor of Rhode Island.

The Vanderbilts are staying with Mr. and Mrs. C. Oliver O'Donnell, their summer neighbors in Newport. The O'Donnells are here this winter while Mr. O'Donnell does some special work for the Navy, and have taken a house on S street. Yesterday afternoon they were hosts at a small cocktail party. Their guests were given a dinner at the 1925 F Street Club by John Hamilton, chairmar of the Republican National Committee.

Today Gov. and Mrs. Vanderbilt will be joined by their young daughter, Paddy, who will motor up from Foxcroft School to spend the day with them. They will return to Providence tomorrow morning.

Arriving this afternoon is another interesting duo—Mrs. Thomas Dewey, wife of the New York district attorney and Presidential aspirant, and Mrs. Albert Gallatin Simms, formerly of Washington. Both are coming to the stunt party, Mrs. Dewey as an honor guest and Mrs. Simms as a nonresident member of the club.

As cochairman, with Russell Sprague, of Mr. Dewey's campaign, Mrs. Simms occupies a position unique in the history of women in politics. Never before has one played such a prominent part in a competition for the highest office in the land.

The press of business will probably allow Mrs. Simms to be here only overnight, which will disappoint the many friends she made when she was Ruth Hanna McCormick, member of the House of Representatives. Her daughter, Mrs. Courtland D. Barnes, jr., of New York, also will be here for the stunt party as the guest of Miss Maxine Davis.

Mrs. N. B. Dial To Be Hostess At Luncheon Today

Mrs. Nathaniel B. Dial will entertain today at luncheon at her home on Kalorama road. It will be the third in a series of luncheons she is giving this season.

Guests will be Mrs. Ellison L. Smith, Mrs. James Hughes, Mrs. Hampton P. Fulmer, Mrs. Garland Ferguson and her sister, Mrs. Wiggins; Mrs. Eldon P. King, Mrs. Edward Pou and Mrs. Davenport White.

Also Mrs. Strickland Gillilan, Mrs. Charles J. Williamson, Mrs. H. H. Sheen, Mrs. Frank Morrison, Mrs. Benjamin D. Hill, Mrs. Payton Green Jobe, Mrs. Joseph Graham, Mrs. Absalom Waller, Mrs. Ogilvie Shumate, Mrs. Thomas A. Wadden, Mrs. George Shafer, Mrs. Eugene Woodson and the hostess' two daughters, Mrs. Matthew White Perry and Miss Rebecca Dial.

Mrs. J. D. LeCron Gives Luncheon

Mrs. Wiley Rutledge, wife of the Associate Justice of the United States Court of Appeals for the District of Columbia, and Mrs. Adele Frush were the guests for whom Mrs. James D. LeCron entertained at luncheon yesterday in the Louis Seize Room of the Shoreham.

Mrs. Frush is visiting here with her daughter, Mrs. Richard Wilson, who also was in the luncheon party.

Other guests were Mrs. Guy M. Gillette, Mrs. John W. Studebaker, Mrs. R. M. Evans, Mrs. John Gordon Studebaker, Mrs. Elbert Waymack and Mrs. A. R. George.

Mrs. Martin to Fete Woman Geographers

Mrs. Lawrence Martin will entertain the Society of Women Geographers on Wednesday at which time Mrs. Joseph H. Jones, of Wilmington, Del., will give a lecture illustrated by motion pictures of her extensive travels in Africa.

Mrs. Jones' pictures of South Africa and her airplane views taken during her journey from the cape to Cairo, are being shown before the Washington group of the Society of Women Geographers for the first time.

Mrs. Alfaro to Fete Wife of Ambassador

Mrs. Ricardo Alfaro, wife of the former president of Panama, will give a luncheon Tuesday for Senora de Boyd, wife of the Panamanian envoy to this country. Dr. and Mrs. William J. Price will give a dinner for the Ambassador and Senora de Boyd Friday, and next Saturday Col. and Mrs. H. C. Pillsbury will fete them at luncheon.

Senora de Boyd will be "at home" the afternoon of March 29.

Radio Forum To Discuss Foreign Policy

Wallace, Bankhead, Tydings to Speak Tuesday Evening

Henry A. Wallace, the Secretary of Agriculture; Representative William B. Bankhead, Speaker of the House of Representatives, and Senator Millard Tydings will be among the speakers at the Democratic Forum to be held on Tuesday evening at 8:30 at the Carlton under the auspices of the Woman's National Democratic Club. The program will center about the subject, "Our Foreign Policy and Peace."

Mrs. Curtis Shears is chairman of the forum and Theodore Granik, of the American Forum of the Air, will be moderator. Dr. Isaiah Bowman, president of Johns Hopkins University, will summarize the forum from the point of view of the independent voter.

Mrs. Roosevelt heads the list of sponsors of the forum, and others include Mrs. Cordell Hull, Mrs. Henry Morgenthau, jr., Miss Frances Perkins, Mrs. Harry Woodring, Senator Hattie Caraway, Mrs. Claude Pepper, Senator George Radcliffe, Mrs. Millard Tydings, Mrs. Burton K. Wheeler, Mrs. Key Pittman, Mrs. Morris Sheppard, Mrs. Nellie Tayloe Ross, Mrs. John Allan Dougherty, Mrs. Blair Banister, George Allen, Mrs. Ellen Woodward and Mr. and Mrs. Charles Warren.

Mrs. James Baity Entertains Today

Mrs. James L. Baity will entertain a company of 19 at luncheon today during the fashion promenade in the Blue Room of the Shoreham.

In the party will be Mrs. M. A. Romjue, Mrs. Clarence Cannon, Mrs. Clyde Williams, Mrs. Richard M. Duncan, Mrs. Dow W. Harter, Mrs. Emil Schram, Mrs. Claude Porter, Mrs. Ernest W. Brown, Mrs. Vincent C. Burke, Mrs. Cleveland Newton, Mrs. Carl L. Ristine, Mrs. John B. Gordon, Mrs. Edward C. Shields, Mrs. Onan A. Hydrick, Mrs. Nietah King, Mrs. Wesley A. Zane, Mrs. Adam Weir, Mrs. Albert Evans and Mrs. William Ramseyer.

The Clarks to Make Home in Alexandria

Mr. and Mrs. Samuel Smith Clark, jr., who were married last Saturday, will make their home in Alexandria on their return from a wedding trip.

The bride is the former Miss Emma Shipman Hedges, daughter of Dr. and Mrs. Halstead Shipman Hedges, of Charlottesville, Va. The wedding took place at 4:30 at the home of her parents, the Rev. Dwight M. Chalmers, of the Presbyterian Church, officiating.

Waltons Announce Birth of Daughter

Mr. and Mrs. Charles H. Walton announce the birth of a daughter, Mary Patricia, on March 6 at Providence Hospital.

Mrs. Walton is the former Gertrude Colliflower, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. C. Ernest Colliflower, jr.

Redland Hunt Holds Its Point-to-Point Races Today

THE REDLAND HUNT point-to-point races being held today in Maryland will draw a large crowd from Middleburg. Beginning at 2 o'clock, there will be four interesting races—first, the Terpenning Cup pair race; second, the Gap Hunters race; third, one for heavyweights, and fourth, the Redland Bowl race.

MANY OF THE BEST hunters in the country will compete, Crompton Smith, of Middleburg, a consistent winner of point-to-point races in the last three years, has entered his hunter Mogley in the Redland Bowl race, in which about 14 horses will run.

Among those who will attend the event, which takes place at the James P. Welsh dairy farm between Norbeck and Redland in Montgomery County, are Harry Worcester Smith and his houseguest, Homer B. Gray, M. F. H. of Rombout Hunt in Poughkeepsie, N. Y.; Mrs. Crompton Smith, Gerry Webb and Reg Smith.

MR. AND MRS. Oliver Filley, of Bernardsville, N. J., have arrived by motor at their Virginia estate near The Plains for the fox hunting. Last Saturday, while acting as master of the Orange County Hunt, Mr. Filley lost a stirrup during a run, but, continuing on with the hounds any way twisted his back badly. However, on Thursday he followed the meet from his car. Going is still deep, but hunting conditions are improving daily.

Among those following Frederick Prince, Thursday's acting master, were Mrs. Prince, Mrs. Filley, Mr. and Mrs. Robert Young, Mr. and Mrs. Delancey Nichol, Mr. and Mrs. Fletcher Harper, Mrs. John Rawlings and Arthur White.

MRS. RICHARD E. BYRD entertained at her home in Winchester on Thursday for Mr. and Mrs. George P. Greenhalgh, jr., of Toledo, Ohio, who are visiting his parents, Mr. and Mrs. Greenhalgh, sr., at Springsburg. Mr. and Mrs. Greenhalgh, sr., gave a hunt breakfast in their honor after the meet this past week of the Blue Ridge Hounds.

Following the ride of the Fairfax Hunt last Saturday, Mr. and Mrs. Edward T. Howrey gave a breakfast at their handsome old home, Oak Hill, in Fairfax County near Burke Station.

TEN CADETS from the hunt at V. M. I., near Lexington, Va., are in Richmond this week-end to hunt today with the Deep Run Hunt when it meets at 3 o'clock at Monument and Libbie, university course. The uniforms of the V. M. I. students and the pink coats of the members of the hunt will make a colorful scene, and about a hundred spectators are expected to follow in their cars. Tea and refreshments will be served at the clubhouse after the hunt.

Among those from V. M. I. at Richmond today are William Emory, jr., of Warrenton; Samuel Marshall, jr., of Middleburg; Henry Foresman, of Philadelphia; Jack Camp, of Franklin, Va.; Wortham Spilman, jr., John Augustine 3d, Charles Moore, Alfred P. Goddin, jr., James C. Wheat, jr., Rutherford Spessard, jr., and Frank Louthan, jr., all of Richmond.

Large Middleburg Crowd Expected At Maryland Event

Several V. M. I. horsemen were guests at the Warrenton Hunt last Saturday and spent the week-end there. Mr. and Mrs. William Emory gave a breakfast in their honor.

Miss Margaret Byrd has returned to her home in Winchester after a visit with her uncle and aunt, Dr. and Mrs. Wylie Moore, of Charlotte, N. C.

First Lady Addresses League at Luncheon Given in Her Honor

By Jessie Ash Arndt.
The Post Club Editor.

"Gain real knowledge of the thing that interests you and learn to work with others."

These were the two simple rules for doing "something about the problems of today," given to members of the voteless District of Columbia League of Women Voters yesterday by Mrs. Roosevelt. The First Lady, herself a league member, credited the league with doing just that.

She addressed members and guests at the annual luncheon in her honor—always the occasion for dramatizing some of the facts the well-informed members have discovered in their study of local, national and international problems. Yesterday the program, presented in the ballroom of the Willard Hotel, concentrated on problems of the District in a skit called "Life With Stepfather." Mrs. Annie Solem was the appealing little District of Columbia, and Mrs. Gardner Jackson was Congress, the harsh stepfather.

In the opening scene, little Columbia is playing with a doll, labeled "vote." Mishie (District of Columbia Commissioners), played by Mrs. W. T. Cameron, enters with a toy dog, marked "Reorganization Plan." This, she thinks, might be traded off for a new dress for Columbia, who is wearing hoop skirts of the 1874 era. Stepfather is unsympathetic with the idea, accusing Mishie of spending too much money and telling Columbia she is too young to play with such things as votes.

"Beggars Ar Coming," Is Theme of Skit

Mrs. George L. Maxwell, as the League of Women Voters, enters as poor little Columbia's godmother and with her is Mrs. Harold Stone as "Orientation." They read Columbia Mother Goose Rhymes, dramatized as they are read.

Hark, Hark, the dogs do bark,
beggars are coming to town;
Some in rags and some in tags and some in velvet gowns.

This was the theme of the skit on Government and its operation. Mrs. Richard Stokes, as Mr. Pass-the-Buck, tells Miss Public, portrayed by Mrs. Marvin Farrington, to have nothing to do with the beggars (public institutions). They are the house of detention, portrayed by Mrs. Wood Gray in a dress with expensive "patches;" the Receiving Home for Children, Mrs. Wendell Berge in bare feet and rags; the Workhouse for Women, portrayed by Mrs. B. M. Battey, in a dress new but "too small since the cops gave me a crime wave;" the National Training School for Girls, portrayed by Mrs. Nathan Raffer, in a dress that doesn't fit, and, at the last, the Home for the Aged, a role taken by Capt. Rhoda Milliken, of the Women's Bureau of the Metropolitan Police, who is an active member of the League. Lamping in and presenting a pathetic figure, in an old gray shawl, she spoke for the home and declared she would "never forget the kindness of Mrs. Roosevelt."

Capital Pictured "In Blunderland"

The scene was "Columbia in Blunderland," with Mrs. Frank Waldrop as the March Hare; Mrs. Lillian Detre as the Mad Hatter; Mrs. Stanley Posner, the Dormouse, and Mrs. Thomas Androus, the Cheshire Cat, comprising the District committee.

Consumers' interests were represented by the old woman who found her petticoat cut off at the knees by "special interests." She denounced as "bad Tydings" the Fair Trade Act on the Hill. Mrs. L. E. Abbott was the old woman and Mrs. Ernest F. Parkinson, the peddler.

The department of foreign policy presented the "Sad Case of Georgie Porgie" who wore a blanket labeled, "Neutrality," and hid conspicuously under a table with the sign "Isolationist" in front of him. His quiet was invaded by "Democracy," portrayed by Mrs. Theodore Sheafer. "You save her and I'll help decide what to do with her afterwards," he tells Great Britain. The quarrels of Europe also come to his door. Mrs. F. A. Gutheim was Georgie; Mrs. Francis Staten, Hitler, and Mrs. Lawrence Monley, Stalin.

"Dillar a Dollar" Is School Song

"A Diller a Dollar," dramatized the education situation in the District. "More buildings, less dollars—more out-of-town scholars" went the lines. After pointing out that the new Calvin Coolidge School was ready, but could not be used because Congress had failed to appropriate money for furnishings, some one asked why it was named "Calvin Coolidge." The prompt answer: "Because it does not choose to run."

The final scene showed "Old Mother District," Mrs. Irwin Geiger, dancing back and forth in a Virginia reel, appealing to Congress, Commissioners, the press, the union, the Board of Trade and others in her efforts to solve her problems without the vote.

Mrs. Max O. Lorenz, president of the local branch of the league, presided at the luncheon and announced Mrs. Henry W. Moore as author of the skits, assisted by Mrs. Theodore Spector; Mrs. Charles Purman, director, and Mrs. Julian Burla, in charge of the music. Miss Marguerite Wells, national president of the organization, was among guests, as were Mrs. Baldwin W. Harris, vice president; Miss Katherine Lenroot, chief of the Children's Bureau; Miss Mary Anderson, chief of the Woman's Bureau; Mrs. Robert Taft, wife of Senator Taft, of Ohio; Mrs. Alexander Wiley, wife of Senator Wiley, of Wisconsin, and Mrs. Edwin Johnson, wife of Senator Johnson, of Colorado.

Writer's Stunt Party, Women's Bar Fete Highlight Today's Busy Club Calendar

Among the important events, of course, are the annual stunt party of the Women's National Press Club, tonight at the Willard; the Vassar-Wellesley luncheon at the Mayflower, honoring Miss Mildred H. McAfee, president of Wellesley, the annual dinner of the Women's Bar Association at the Mayflower, and the annual State conference of the District Children of the American Revolution at Pierce Hall.

Among other events scheduled are the tea dance this afternoon and prom tonight at Mount Vernon Seminary; the charity bazaar and luncheon at Gunston Hall School, in which alumnae will participate; the first of the series of lectures arranged by the American Horticultural Society at the Sulgrave Club at 3 p. m.; a buffet luncheon being given by the President Monroe Chapter of the D. A. R. in celebration of its anniversary, at the home of Mrs. John B. Coonley, in Virginia.

There will also be a luncheon meeting of the conference sponsored by the Progressive Education Association and the Education Association of the District, at the Mayflower. Representative Jerry Voorhis, of California, will speak and Mrs. Mary McKechnie, president of the Washington Branch of the Progressive Association, will preside.

Another event will be the tea given by the Women's National Democratic Club honoring Secretary of Labor Frances Perkins, at the clubhouse on New Hampshire avenue, at 4:30. Mrs. D. Tucker Brown, the club president, will receive, assisted by Mrs. James L. Houghteling, and Mrs. C. W. McLoughlin, with Mrs. Edward Pendleton making the introductions.

HOME AGAIN—Mrs. Saidie Orr Dunbar, president of the General Federation of Women's Clubs, who attended the board meeting of the Illinois State Federation of Women's Clubs in Chicago and a meeting of the Consumer-Retailer Council in New York this week, has returned to headquarters and will be among the guests at the stunt party of the Women's National Press Club tonight.

Record Throng Expected at Fete For Head of Wellesley College

Miss Mildred Helen McAfee, Youthful President, To Be Honored at Mayflower Luncheon Today; Vassar Alumnae Club Also Joins as Sponsor

Miss Mildred Helen McAfee, youthful president of Wellesley College, and a graduate of Vassar, will be the guest of honor at a luncheon being given today at 1:15 at the Mayflower Hotel by the Washingnual stunt party of the Women's National Club, as one of the "achievement" guests.

The Wellesley and Vassar Clubs are expecting a record-breaking attendance at this luncheon for Miss McAfee, many from out of town. Each club has asked a number of its alumnae to come as honor guests.

The Wellesley Club has invited as honor guests: Mrs. Charles Evans Hughes who takes an active interest in Wellesley affairs, Miss Belle Sherwin, alumnae trustee and former president of the National League of Women Voters; Miss Eliza Kendall, for years professor of history at Wellesley; Mrs. O. Harold Williamson, president of the Baltimore Wellesley Club; Mrs. Wesley Wright, president of the Richmond Wellesley Club; Mrs. Clarence E. Hancock, wife of Representative Hancock, of New York; Mrs. Ralph O. Brewster, wife of Representative Brewster, of Maine; Mrs. Ralph E. Church, wife of Representative Church, of Illinois, and Mrs. Bruce Barton, wife of Representative Barton, of New York.

Heads of Washington public and private schools invited by the Wellesley group are: Albert E. Rogers, Friends School; Mrs. David Wing, Madeira School; Dr. Elmer Newton, Western High School; Mrs. J. M. Holton, Holton-Arms School; Miss Mabel Turner, National Cathedral School; Thomas W. Pyle, Bethesda-Chevy Chase High School, and Mrs. Estella Phillips, assistant principal and dean of girls at Woodrow Wilson High School.

The Vassar Club has invited as honor guests Mrs. Henry Morgenthau, jr., wife of the Secretary of the Treasury; Miss Josephine Roche, chairman of the interdepartmental committee to coordinate public health and welfare activities; Mme. Charles Bruggman, wife of the Swiss Minister and a classmate of Miss McAfee at Vassar; Dr. Beatrice Fisher Berle, alumnae trustee, wife of Adolph A. Berle, Assistant Secretary of State; Miss Elizabeth Scarlett, national president of the Vassar Alumnae Association; Mrs. Avery Coonley, who, with her sister, gave Vassar its beautiful Alumnae House; Mrs. Cazenove Lee, trustee of the Restoration Association of Stratford Hall, and Miss Margaret Lambie, former national president of the Vassar Alumnae Association.

Officers of the Vassar and Wellesley Clubs will receive the guests at the luncheon. The Vassar officers are Mrs. Charles Will Wright, president; Mrs. Lee D. Butler, vice president, and Miss Mary E. West, a recent graduate, secretary treasurer. Wellesley officers receiving will be Mrs. Walter DuBois Brookings, president; Mrs. George D. Brabson, vice president; Miss Martha Morrow, recording secretary; Mrs. Robert Browning, corresponding secretary, and Miss Alice Richardson, treasurer.

Miss McAfee will be the only speaker at the luncheon. Mrs. Brookings will announce the appointment of the new national officers of the Wellesley College Alumnae Association, who, with one exception, have been selected from the Washington Wellesley Club. Mrs. Ralph E. Church, wife of Representative Church, of Illinois, for years prominent in Wellesley activities in New York and Chicago, as well as in Washington, will serve as president. Mrs. Donald F. Roberts, a past president of the local club, vice president; Mrs. O. Harold Williamson, president of the Baltimore Club, second vice president; Mrs. George D. Brabson, now vice president of the local club, secretary, and Miss Sibyl Baker, director of Washington's department of playgrounds and community centers, treasurer.

State Conference Of C. A. R. Opens Here Today

The Junior State Conference of the Children of the American Revolution of the District will be held at Pierce Hall today, opening at 9:45 a. m. The Junior State President, Robert De Shazo will preside.

Other State officers who will take part are Grahama Smallwood, Adelaide McAllister, Mary Jane Rogers, Virginia Scott, Alice Waldron, Getrude Hochbaum, Hunton Leith, Le Baron Washington, Robert Huey, Barbara Hamblin and Lois Lutton.

The United States Marine Band Orchestra will furnish a musical program.

Election of officers will take place in the afternoon, and the junior committee will read reports of the work done by the various committees. There will be a luncheon at 1:30 p. m. and a tea dance from 3 to 5 p. m. The work of the Juniors has been under the able leadership of Mrs. Carl Giroux.

Thug Beats Woman, 74; Is Captured

Girl's Cries Drive Prowler From Room; Impromptu Posse Seizes Purse-Snatcher

A 74-year-old woman was brutally beaten last night by a young intruder, who was captured by neighbors attracted by her screams, while a girl frightened off a colored man who invaded her bedroom.

Mrs. Jesse Gates, 74, was attacked in the hallway of her home, 321 Maryland avenue northeast, by a 23-year-old white man, who dragged her across the floor by an arm and beat her repeatedly with his fists. Her attacker was captured when neighbors rushed to her aid.

Doesn't Know Why

Mrs. Gates was treated at home for shock and contusions of the forehead. At Ninth Precinct Station the captive told police, they said, that he "had no idea" why he assaulted the elderly woman, whom he declared he did not know.

When Miss Margaret Swindell, 19, opened a clothes closet in her room at 1754 Massachusetts avenue northwest last night, a colored man leaped at her with outstretched hands. The marauder fled when she screamed.

Miss Swindell told police she left the bath and went to a woman friend's room on the same floor while other residents of the house were at dinner. Not finding her friend, she said, she returned to her own room and went to the clothespress for a dress. Returning from dinner, several roomers found their belongings ransacked.

Purse Snatcher Captured

After snatching pocketbooks from two women in rapid succession, a 34-year-old colored footpad was captured by an informal posse of citizens who saw him fleeing from the scene of his second attack. Both pocketbooks were recovered in his possession, police said.

His first foray resulted in the theft of her pocketbook containing $4 from Mrs. Catherine Dugan, of 600 Maryland avenue northeast, in a grocery at 640 G street northeast. A few minutes later he snatched a purse from Mary A. Van Ness, of 925 Fourth street northeast, at Sixth and H streets northeast.

Mary Moore, manager of an art store at 1143 Connecticut avenue northwest, reported the theft of three ivory and silver Chinese statuettes by one of two men who spent some time examining rings.

Capital News In Brief

'Twas a Hot Job

Last night Edward Eden, 38, of 1230 Seventeenth street northwest, was syphoning gasoline from a gallon can into the carburetor of his car.

His lips held a lighted cigarette. When firemen from Engine House No. 8 arrived they found Eden suffering first-degree burns about the face and neck.

The board of the Washington Lutheran Inner Mission Society will hold its monthly meeting at 8 o'clock tonight in the chapel of Luther Place Memorial Church, Thomas circle.

75 Scarlet Fever Cases

Scarlet fever cases are running above average, the District Health Department reported yesterday.

Seventy-five were reported in the three-week period ended last Saturday, compared with 57 for the corresponding interval last year. Diphtheria, however, claimed fewer victims.

Gallinger Hospital said its isolation building has 40 scarlet fever patients on its current list, far more than usual for this season of the year.

Hospital's First

Doctors Hospital chalked up another first yesterday.

A 6-pound 8-ounce girl was born to Mr. and Mrs. Robert E. Wester, of Berwyn, Md., the first bundle delivered by the stork at the new hospital, of which the maternity ward was opened yesterday. Other departments of the institution were in operation Thursday.

Mother and child were reporting doing well last night.

Kite Try-Outs

Trial flights of hand-made kites by members of the Boys Kite Club of the Georgetown Children's House will be made from Georgetown University grounds beginning at 10 a. m. today. The kites were made under the guidance of Miss Pherne Miller, instructor in arts and crafts at the Children's House.

Burned Fighting Fi.

Charles T. Money, 29, of 1241 Raum street northeast, was treated for minor burns about the face last night after he attempted to extinguish a trash fire at the rear of a cleaning company in the 1200 block South Capitol street.

Princess Gives $1,365 for Poland To Red Cross

A personal gift of $1,000, together with $365.15 in proceeds from the exhibit of her collection of modernistic paintings, was presented yesterday to the American Red Cross by Princess Gourielli-Tchkonia, of New York.

The princess, known professionally as Helena Rubenstein, gave the exhibition here and made the contributions for Polish relief work.

Two members of the Red Cross staff, H. Sherburne House, of New York, and Raymond T. Shaeffer, of St. Louis, will leave Baltimore by clipper plane today to join the relief staff in Europe.

Jury Clears Two Motorists In Fatalities

Driver Exonerated In Huidekoper Death; Boy and Woman Struck

Two motorists were exonerated by a coroner's jury yesterday, while a boy and a woman were injured by automobiles last night.

William T. Murphy, 23, of 1110 Raum street northeast, was acquitted when the jury ruled that Col. Frederick L. Huidekoper, 62, of 1868 Columbia road northwest, was killed due to his own negligence. Col. Huidekoper was struck Sunday at Connecticut avenue and S street northwest. He died Thursday at Emergency Hospital.

A verdict of negligence on the part of the deceased was returned in the case of Heywood Hazzard, colored, 56, of 1511 Sixth street northwest, who died in Freedmen's Hospital Tuesday shortly after he was struck at Sixth and O streets northwest. The verdict acquitted Henry S. Washington, colored, 29, of 467 N street northwest.

Boy, 11, Struck

Meanwhile, Billy Pemberton, 11, of 132 C street northeast, was struck as he was crossing the street in front of his home by an automobile which police said was operated by Joseph L. Vuolo, of 1016 Massachusetts avenue northwest. The boy was treated at Casualty Hospital for contusion of the left knee and the base of the skull.

Dorothy Coles, 32, colored, of 126 W street northwest, was crossing the street after alighting from a bus at Eighteenth and P streets when she was struck by an automobile operated, according to police, by Philip N. Saure, 29, of 933 H street northwest. At Emergency Hospital she was said to have several fractured ribs and possible injuries to the spine and pelvis.

U. S. Must Prepare For Sacrifices, Says First Lady

The Nation is facing a "period of insecurity in some of the material things" to make "a little more security for those who have been insecure," Mrs. Eleanor Roosevelt told 200 women yesterday at the Town Hall forum.

Women, she said, must prepare to sacrifice things "we have come to take for granted as part of the necessities of modern life." Since women frequently are accused of being at the bottom of men's troubles, she added, women could "free men of their fear of facing things."

She was introduced by Huston Thompson, president of the Town Hall board of trustees, as "a fearless woman in a fearful time."

Collingwood Is Appointed Chief Forester

Lumbermen Name Him to Succeed John B. Woods

G. H. Collingwood, 1234 Crittenden street northwest, has been appointed chief forester of the National Lumber Manufacturer's Association, it was announced here yesterday at headquarters of the association.

Collingwood

Collingwood succeeds John B. Woods, of Portland, Oreg., and takes his post April 15. As forester for the organization since 1928, Collingwood has directed much of the educational work in forestry, cooperating with Governmental agencies, industries and private timberland owners in promoting forest interests. He is a member of the American Forestry Association.

Born in Fayetteville, Ark., he was educated at Michigan State College and the University of Munich, where he studied forest practices in Germany, Switzerland and Austria.

Serving in the United States Forest Service early in his career, he was stationed for two years as an assistant ranger in the Apache National Forest, Ariz. In 1916, he became assistant extension professor of forestry at the New York State College of Agriculture, Cornell University. He resigned in 1923 to become extension forester for the Agriculture Department.

Educator Denounces U. S. Castes

Dr. May Charges Class System Bars Equal Opportunities In Schooling, Jobs

Caste and class systems have set up social and economic barriers which bar equal opportunities in education and jobs for American children, a conference of teachers and educators was told here yesterday.

Before 300 members of the Progressive Education Association and the Education Association of the District at a banquet in the Mayflower, Dr. Mark May, of the Institute of Human Relations at Yale University, denounced the "waste" in the American education system which he said has failed to provide enough and the right kind of education for children of the low-income and colored families.

Dr. May also charged that there is a failure to utilize talent of the children who are properly trained, and observed that 50 per cent of vocation-trained youths are unable to stay permanently in the trades for which they prepared.

Charges Talents Are Wasted

"The American ideal of education is that the amount and kind of education that any child is entitled to receive should depend on his native, innate, God-given talents," said the educator.

"Actually, however, we fall far short of that ideal. The youth's education, and his job, depend on where he happens to live, on his racial or ethnic grouping, and on the social and economic status of his home."

The time has come to impress upon school children the need for conserving the Nation's resources about which they are taught, Dr. Charles Judd told the opening session yesterday morning.

Dr. Judd, educational director of the National Youth Administration, stressed the importance of the role teachers might play in making their pupils aware not only of the existence and uses of land, forests, waterways and mineral deposits, but of the necessity to exploit them intelligently.

Urged to Tell the 'Truth.'

Introduced by Dr. Frank W. Ballou, superintendent of District schools, as "the United States ambassador to the youth of America," Dr. Judd urged his listeners to tell their charges the truth; How this country's lands, forests, oil and coal have been wasted down the years and only in recent times has anything been done to conserve them.

The speaker also pointed out the shifting age levels in the American population resulting from lowering of the birth rate and steadily increasing longevity. Teachers, he declared, will gradually notice the effect of a shrinkage in the child population.

In 1930, he said, this country had 12,000,000 children four years old and under and 6,600,000 persons 65 or older. The new census is expected to reveal these groups to number 11,000,000 and 8,400,000, respectively.

At a sectional meeting on American resources in the arts, Charles Seegar, of the Library of Congress Music Division, divided musical education into three parts—folk, popular and classical—explaining that the first is almost always oral and that the last invariably written, with popular music sometimes being one and sometimes the other.

Miss Ruth Reeves, artist and founder of the Index of American Design, a WPA project, described that enterprise and explained its value in teaching art. Forbes Watson, special adviser to the Fine Arts section, Federal Works Agency, presided over the symposium and outlined the Government's achievements in stimulating native American art.

Other speakers at sectional meetings included Jacob Baker, president of the United Federal Workers of America; Gardiner C. Means, National Resources Planning Board; Benjamin J. R. Stolper, Lincoln School of Teachers College, and Herbert Price, Works Projects Administration.

Approximately 1,200 public and private school teachers from Maryland, Virginia and the District are expected to attend the final sessions this morning and afternoon.

G. U. Debaters Beat Princeton

Georgetown University debaters last night defeated a Princeton University team on the negative side of the question, "Resolved: That the United States should adopt a policy of strict military and economic isolation toward all belligerents outside the Western Hemisphere."

Edward J. Keenan and George A. Christy represented Georgetown. Princeton was represented by Robert Ginsberg and John M. Ely. Judges were Justice Harold Stevens, Paul D. Spearman and G. Gould Lincoln.

Economist Says Puerto Rico Needs Credit

Peace and Freedom League Is Told U. S. Should Aid Financing

A central planning and credit organization under control of the Federal Government is needed in Puerto Rico, Dr. Paul T. Homan, professor of economics at Cornell University, declared last night at a session of the Women's International League for Peace and Freedom Institute on Puerto Rican problems.

The sessions opened yesterday afternoon at the Washington Hotel and will continue through this afternoon, with educators and authorities on the Island's affairs taking part.

Dr. Homan emphasized Puerto Rican representation and United States Government funds in the reorganization plan which would finance "new private, cooperative, public and mixed types of projects."

"Immediate steps should be taken to organize experimental industrial innovations," he said. "A land resettlement program is urgent, combined with promotion of cooperative organization, stimulation of agricultural production and building up of a marketing structure."

Miss Ana Maria O'Neill, of the University of Puerto Rico, discussed social problems of the island. A person needs 35 cents a day to live in Puerto Rico, but if the total income of the island were divided equally among its inhabitants, each would receive only 17 cents a day, she said.

Dr. Charles Dearing, of the Brookings Institution, presided at the evening session. Speakers yesterday afternoon included Representative Marcantonio, of New York; Dr. Rafael Pico, of Catholic University, and Dr. James A. Dickey, director of the Association of Sugar Producers of Puerto Rico.

At today's sessions speakers will be Dr. Bailey W. Diffie, Earl P. Hanson, Harry M. Shooshan, jr., Senor Filiberto Varquez Lopez and Senor Alberto Rembao.

Boone Andrews' Funeral Monday

The funeral for Boone B. Andrews, 56, a conductor with the Capital Transit Co. for 30 years, will be at 2:30 p. m. Monday at the Brightwood Methodist Church, with burial in Rock Creek Cemetery. He died Thursday at Garfield Hospital.

Mr. Andrews made his home at 814 Longfellow street northwest. Surviving are his wife, Mrs. Elsie R. Andrews; five half-sisters, Mrs. Ethel Jewel, Mrs. Theresa Sobotka, Mrs. Bessie Smith, Mrs. Myrtle Sullivan, Miss Viola Nichols; three half-brothers, Roger, Conrad and Gilbert Nichols, and a stepfather, Charles Nichols, all of Washington.

1,000 Attend Gym Exhibit At Y. M. C. A.

Tumbling, Dancing And Height Stunts Follow Parade

Nearly 1,000 persons last night witnessed the third annual Gym Night at the gymnasium of the central Y. M. C. A., 1736 G street northwest. Tumbling, dancing, stunts at dizzy heights and stunts on the ground followed the entrance parade led by Justin Laurie, master of ceremonies.

A drill by the men's class was led by John Schmidt. Under colorful lights, L. C. Everard, national gym champion for three years, performed with Indian clubs. An exhibit by girl gymnasts from New York and Baltimore included Margie Weissman, of New York, national A. A. U. champion, and other sars.

After a fancy march, members of the Marjorie Webster School performed an old-fashioned square dance under the direction of Miss Ruby Neal, director of physical education at the school. Girls of the Julia Cunningham School of the Dance performed a hula.

The senior gym team put on an exhibit under the leadership of William Hutzell. An aerial perch act was performed by Robert Porter and Allen Eney.

Chicken Truck Saved From Voracious Boys

Many mouths that watered for fried chicken in certain parts of Northwest Washington yesterday watered last night in vain.

So near, though, did fried chicken yearners come to fruition of their desire that Stewart W. Hilton, of Elkwood, Va., put in a bad few minutes in the 100 block of D street northwest and police had to rush to his rescue. Hilton had just driven up with a truckload of fine friers when his truck was surrounded by a mob of colored boys, very noisy and very insistent on a crate of chickens. While Hilton demurred with heated language and his two fists, someone called a holdup report to police.

Occupants of a squad car and several motorcycles which responded found the embattled Hilton astride the crate in dispute and six colored boys fleeing down all adjacent alleys.

Wheat Frees State Dairies From Accord

Chief Justice Says Rule Governs Only Those Doing Interstate Business

Chief Justice Alfred A. Wheat of the District Court ruled yesterday that the new Washington milk marketing agreement does not control dairies which do all their business in Maryland or Virginia. The ruling limited the agreement to dairies engaged in interstate commerce.

The chief justice granted a temporary injunction which forbade the Department of Agriculture to enforce the agreement against the Holbrook Farms Dairy, Brentwood, Md. The writ exempts the Holbrook Dairy until final action on its suit against Secretary of Agriculture Wallace.

Although the court's order protected only the Holbrook firm from the price fixing and other provisions of the agreement, half a dozen other dairies near Washington, which also lack interstate trade, were considered likely to file suits for similar injunctions.

Chief Justice Wheat rejected the contention of the Department of Agriculture that the Holbrook dairy was subject to the regulation, which would be gravely handicapped if the Maryland dairy were left free to fix its own prices. The Holbrook dairy claimed that the agreement would force it to pay $65,500 more to producers in a year than it has been paying.

The Department of Justice might petition the United States Court of Appeals here to hear the issue on a special appeal from the ruling of Chief Justice Wheat. Should this not be done the Holbrook dairy would be able to operate under the protection of the temporary injunction until the final hearing of the injunction case in the District Court.

Government spokesmen said last night it probably would be ten days or two weeks before the next step is decided upon.

20 Youths Entered In First Boys Club Diving Contest

Twenty boys have entered the first Washington Boys Club city-wide diving championships scheduled today at the Southeast branch.

The meet is divided into three sections, for boys 12 years and under, for boys 16 and under and for boys 18 and under.

Twelve years and under entries, all representing the Southeast Boys Club, are Ernest Thomas, George Thomas, George Harrison, George Myers, Jack Potts, Jack Potter, Kenneth Hopkins and Jack Boyer. Competing in the 16 years and under class will be Leo Jarboe, Joe Wratten, Robert Benson, George Hansbrough and John Summers, of the Southeast Boys Club; Buddy Rowland, unattached; Robert Kohin, Central High School, and John Deasy, Wilson High School.

In the last class will be Kenneth Curles, Southeast Boys Club; Bert Williams and Dave Lewis, Wilson High School, and Tom Payne, Takoma Pool.

Rep. Mansfield Rests in Hospital

Representative Joseph J. Mansfield (Democrat) of Texas, taking a rest treatment in Naval Hospital in expectation of undergoing an operation, was reported in good condition last night.

Mansfield, chairman of the House Rivers and Harbors Committee, went to the hospital several days ago in a generally weakened condition. Aides of the Congressman said physicians believed an operation would be beneficial after he had built up his strength.

Nats to Inaugurate Night Ball Here in July

The Washington Post Sports

18 WASHINGTON: SATURDAY, MARCH 9, 1940 X*

O.K. of Plan By Griffith Anticipated

Eynon en Route To Orlando With Lighting Layout For D. C. Stadium

By Shirley Povich.
A Staff Correspondent

Orlando, Fla., March 8.—They will turn on the lights for big-league baseball at Griffith Stadium in July, The Post learned today despite the silence of Clark Griffith on the subject of night baseball in Washington.

En route to Orlando now is Edward B. Eynon, jr., secretary-treasurer of the Washington club, with final plans for the installation of Griffith Stadium lights which he will present to Mr. Griffith for the latter's anticipated approval.

Washington club officials have been negotiating with electrical contractors for the past four months on a lighting system reported to cost $100,000 and contracts were let in early January.

Large Field Hinders

Originally Griffith planned to have the lights installed earlier in the season, but difficulties presented by the large playing area of Griffith Stadium would not permit the completion of the job before July 1.

The lights to be installed will be the most modern of all lighting systems and will be mounted both on the grandstands and on special towers to be erected around the field near the fences.

Because of the shape of the Washington grandstands, which are low, rambling affairs, in contrast to other high-walled stadiums, the Washington games will require more lighting, according to electrical experts. They point out that low stands do not reflect light in the same degree of higher walls.

The Nats have already made application to the American League for permission to stage night games, but it is doubtful that they will be able to stage as many as the seven nocturnal contests each club is permitted.

Too Cold for Practice

Five night games at most will be on the Griffith Stadium schedule, due to the inability to switch dates with other clubs which will be in Washington on week-ends when night play is not sanctioned.

Meanwhile, one of those cold windstorms from the dastardly North, of course, all but blew the Nats' workout off the schedule today. Manager Harris weathered a drab, forbidding morning with his regulars in a brief drill, but with a new-found pity for the rookies, he called off the afternoon practice.

There wasn't an Orlando Chamber of Commerce official to be seen today in their usual haunts around the Nats' hotel reciting the beauties of the Orlando weather and pointing out that this is the ideal Florida town to train a big league ball team. The C. of C. folks were at the movies, which seemingly, is the only steam-heated joint in the town.

Townsfolk Excited

The immediate objective of Manager Harris is Sunday's game with the New York Giants which will officially open the exhibition season at Tinker Field. The local citizenry is excited about the contest, which the Chamber of Commerce is billing throughout the countryside as the feature attraction of the exhibition season. Early in the week the game was a sell-out.

There is more than mild curiosity on Harris' part also in another young fellow who, like Gehrman, will pitch three innings on Sunday. Harris is sending young Sid Hudson back to the mound despite Hudson's

Merrill Advances In Florida Golf

Palm Beach, Fla., March 8 (AP).—E. L. Merrill, jr., of Daytona Beach, advanced to the finals of the annual Palm Beach championship amateur golf tournament by defeating Joseph H. Schenck 3d, of New Yok, 5 and 4, today.

H. L. Willoughby 3d, of Port Sewell, Fla., will oppose Merrill in the 36-hole match. Willoughby defeated David Clark, of New York, 3 and 4, in a semifinal encounter.

Eagles Hold River Vale to Triumph, 6 to 4

Stewart Aces, Greenbelt Post Victors

Washington Flour, Treasury Defeated; Bellman Fuel Also A. A. U. Survivor

By the slimmest margin in the rule book, the Greenbelt A. C. and the Stewart Brothers Aces survived play last night in the District A. A. U. championship tournament, being sponsored by The Washington Post in the Heurich gymnasium. Led by Mickey McDonald, one-time pride of the Powell School Playground, Greenbelt, representing Maryland's thriving community, nosed out Treasury Department, 33-32, in one of the unlimited battles. In the other, Bellman Fuel Co. came from behind in the final half and downed the Census Bureau Americans, 55-33.

The Stewart Aces barely lasted to take a 21-20 verdict over the Washington Flour Co. in the 145-pound games that had the crowd on its collective feet from start to finish.

McDonald, several times a father, played one of the best games of his career. He was without Johnny Bozek, former Georgetown U. star who was his running-mate last year. However, McDonald played enough basketball for two men. In fact, he wore out a pair of shoes and time had to be taken out while he borrowed another pair.

In all, McDonald supplied eight field goals and three fouls for a total of 19 of Greenbelt's points. In addition, he contributed mightily to the defense. It was McDonald's basket that broke a 22-22 tie to put Greenbelt in the lead although points by Abrams and Barker were the ones which finally clinched the thrilling battle.

Olson was the best shot for Treasury, keeping them in the running with six field goals and foul for 13 points. Treasury led, 21-17, at the half.

The Aces held a 15-8 advantage over Washington Flour at the half but could not maintain that pace in the second half. However, the Aces had enough punch left to win and it was a field goal by Lowell (Slip) Keagy that decided. The Aces had their usual Poston front with Dick, Bob and Johnny of that family being prominent in the action.

The Census Americans held the upper hand on Bellman Fuel in the first half, emerging for the rest period with the score 22-21. Bellman returned to the floor to forge to the front and was making a runaway of it at the close. Scott, Callow, Dobbyns and Glynn did the bulk of the Fuel scoring. Peterson and Perlberg were in shooting form for the Americans.

River Vale Player Steals Puck From Eagle

Skeeters' Late Rally Is Repelled

Jersey Team Gives Strong Opposition In 1st Period Only; 3,000 See Ice Game

By Jack Munhall.

Repelling River Vale's savage last-period onslaught which netted three rapid goals, the Washington Eagles last night completed their eighth straight Eastern League game without defeat by whipping the Skeeters, 6-4, at Riverside Stadium.

About 3,000 fans saw the Eagles forge into undisputed second place and at the same time preserve their record of never having lost to the Skeeters at home. It was Washington's sixth victory in a streak that began after a 3-0 shutout by Atlantic City about two weeks ago.

But the Eagles didn't win until they had thrown a fearsome scare into the local fans by allowing River Vale to suddenly threaten in the last period, when they tallied three times within four minutes. Washington seemed powerless as River Vale all but wiped out a 5-1 deficit as Norm Burns, George Kelly and Percy Nichols sent sizzling shots past Goalie Les Colvin.

However, just as the outlook seemed dark, Paul Courteau came through with his third goal of the evening to clinch the game for the Eagles just eight seconds before the final whistle. It was the second straight match in which the stocky, little French-Canadian had accounted for three counters.

Courteau also chipped in an assist to round out another brilliant performance. Washington's other three goals fell to as many players, Bill Cairns, Hal Dewey and Alan Foster, as the Eagles continued to display a well-balanced attack and fine teamwork.

Eagles Start Scoring

Washington opened the scoring at 2:03 of the first period on a fine play by Courteau, who took the puck at midice and fired in a long shot after eluding the River Vale defense men.

The Skeeters retaliated at 9:56 to tie the count at 1-1 as Allen, standing close to the net, deflected in a shot from Swanson who in turn had been assisted by McGregor.

Each team wasted a chance to score afforded by the banishment of players. Germann, of the Eagles, and Portland, of the Skeeters, drew 2-minute exiles for high-sticking.

Skeeters Begin to Fold

Making good three of the nine shots they took, the Eagles broke the 1-1 deadlock and shot ahead in the second period as the Skeeters found it next to impossible to get clear shots at the Washington goal.

Cairns was credited with the Eagles' second goal after his forward line mates, Partis and Foster, had set up the shot with great passes. Dewey, who is fighting it out for third place in the individual scoring race, added to his total soon

This Morning

With Shirley Povich

Orlando, Fla., March 8.—Quite the most exciting baseball news of the week was the report from the Tiger's camp at Lakeland that Charley Gehringer would quit baseball if his lame back continued to pain him. For some reason the dispatch was not generally regarded as head-line stuff, but actually it was worthy of four-alarm treatment.

POVICH

Charley Gehringer, a great ball player, has never been an exhibitionist. On the contrary he has been one of the strong, silent men of baseball, exceedingly chary of statement-making. So when Gehringer says "I am going to quit if my back continues to give me pain," he not merely seeking to get his name in the paper. He means it.

That of course, would mean the end of the Tigers as a pennant threat, perhaps as a first division threat. The Detroit club which has been rated as one of the teams that might end the domination of the Yankees would be just another ball club sans Gehringer. Ball players like him are rarely replaced on short notice.

For the Tigers, Gehringer's ailment presents a crucial situation. The Detroit infield, already lacking a capable shoristop, would be short beyond immediate repair. Three months ago, the absence of Gehringer would not have been such a grave development for the Tigers. Then they had Bennie McCoy as a substitute, and there was reason to believe that McCoy's presence would cushion the blow considerably whenever Gehringer chose to retire.

The little fellow from Grand Rapids had filled in nobly for Gehringer last summer when his back troubles first began to beset the Detroit veteran. Bennie McCoy was a steady infielder, even on the brilliant side and he had youth. He was not as powerful a hitter as Gehringer, but he promised to be a good hitter.

And then, for some strange reason, the Tigers decided to trade McCoy to the A's along with Pitcher Slick Coffman in exchange for Outfielder Wally Moses. There never was any indication that the Tigers needed an outfielder as badly as they needed McCoy in view of the fact that Gehringer was already 36 years old and admitting that he could last little longer. But the trade was made, nevertheless.

A few weeks later, we remember, Judge Landis forced the Tigers to call off the deal with the A's. McCoy, said Landis, was a free-agent and the Tigers had no power to trade him. Then the mystery of the deal with the A's began to unravel. The Tigers knew McCoy was a "hot" player. Perhaps they could salvage their equity in him by trading him to the A's.

Without Gehringer, without McCoy, where do the Tigers stand in their attempt to keep in contention in the American League race? They don't stand any too well, we assure you. They don't have a blessed soul worthy of a second base job in the big leagues, their chief candidate to succeed Gehringer is, at this writing, Red Kress, who had slowed to the extent that he was discharged for incompentency by the Washington club four years ago.

That isn't all. The Tigers' entire infield has lost its anchor if it loses Gehringer. As it stands, it is now the most uncertain infield in the league. On first base is not Hank Greenberg, but Rudy York who has yet to prove that he is a big league first baseman. On second base, without Gehringer, they will be depending on Kress. At shortstop, the Detroit management is taking a long gamble on Dick Bartell, a spavined National League veteran whom the Cubs willingly traded for Bill Rogell, a shortstop the Tigers had been hoping to retire for three years before they succeeded in getting him out of the league. On third base, Pinky Higgins long ago ceased to be a star.

There appears to be very little solid about the Detroit club save for the known hitting power of Greenberg, York and Pete Fox, the clever catching of Birdie Tebbetts and the pitching of Tommy Bridges. The Tigers are experimenting in no less than four positions, five if you wish to count second base where Gehringer may or may not perform.

Manager Del Baker is gambling on (1) the ability of Rudy York to play first base, (2) the hope that Hank Greenberg can make the transition from first base to the outfield, (3) the rejuvenation of Shortstop Dick Bartell, who last year was called the Cubs' $22,000 luxury, and (4) the promise of Schoolboy Rowe that he will regain the full use of what was once a fine pitching arm.

That's too many gambles for one big league club to take in one season. The Tigers scarcely loom as the same threat they were at this time last year when some folks were silly enough to credit them with a chance of beating out the Yankees. And if Gehringer does, indeed, decide to quit, his erstwhile teammates are a gone gang.

Young Miami Girl Wins Swim Crown

Among New Champions In Opening of National Women's Indoor Event

By International News Service

Miami Beach, Fla., March 8.—Three new champions—a 15-year-old Miami Beach high school girl, a New York University senior and a Chicago veteran of 21—were crowned today at the opening of the National Women's indoor swimming events.

Competing in her first national meet, Mary Patricia Fairbrother captured the 3-foot board diving championship from Barbara Cook, of Jeffersonville, Ind. So close was the score of the rivals that judges had to recheck the figures before announcing the youthful Miamian the winner.

Lorraine Fischer, 22-year-old New Yorker, won her first national title in dethroning Dorris Brennan, Providence, R. I., in the 300-yard individual medley.

Mrs. Tullis took the title won last year by Dorothy Evans, of Philadelphia, who failed to qualify in the preliminary heats. Brenda Helser, Portland, Oreg., finished second ahead of Dorothy Leonard, Worcester, Mass., and Patricia McWhorter, Newark, N. J.

In capturing the diving event, Miss Fairbrother scored 111.05 points as against her Indiana rival's 110.72. Behind the two leaders were two Brooklyn divers, Ann Ross and Helen Brenner.

Helen Rains, of New York, came in second to Miss Fischer in the individual medley with Miss Leonard, third, and Ruth Hawarth, Whitinsville, Mass., fourth. Miss Brennan could do no better than sixth.

Four events are scheduled for tomorrow, including the 220-yard breast stroke, 100-yard backstroke, 440-yard free style and the 440-yard relay.

Miss Hicks, Patty Berg In Florida Golf Finals

By International News Service

St. Augustine, Fla., March 8.—Nineteen-year-old Elizabeth Hicks, of Long Beach, Calif., who has been burning up the winter golf courses, will meet Patty Berg, of Minneapolis, tomorrow for the Florida East Coast woman's championship.

The California youngster defeated Mrs. Thomas Nolan, of Newcastle, Pa., 4 and 2, in one of today's semi-final matches over the St. Augustine links and Patty was forced to go to the home green before eliminating Clara Callender, of Long Beach, 2 up.

Mrs. Nolan had beaten National Champion Betty Jameson, of San Antonio yesterday in the tourney's upset, but she met more than her match in Miss Hicks today. The latter was out in 38 to be 2-up, and needed two pars for a 77 when the match with Mrs. Nolan ended on the sixteenth green.

Dodgers Beat Reds In Grapefruit Opener

By the Associated Press

Tampa, Fla., March 8.—Opening the intermajor program of the Grapefruit League, the Brooklyn Dodgers stopped the Cincinnati Reds, 9 to 6, today in a 10-inning struggle.

Six pitchers performed during the contest and Brooklyn finally got to John Hutchings and Joe Beggs for three runs in the extra stanza to triumph. Singles by Gus Mancusco, Jimmy Ripple and Bert Haas, and Haas' steal of home turned the trick.

CARDINALS

St. Petersburg, Fla., March 8 (AP).—Manager Ray Blades decided today to go easy on the New York Yankees by sending recruit pitchers to the mound in the St. Louis Cardinals' exhibition game with the world champions here tomorrow.

Blades nominated Ernest White, Murry Dickson, Red Barrett and Harry Breechen, if a fourth pitcher was needed. All were with Houston, of the Texas League, a Cards' farm, last season.

There will be a liberal sprinkling of other rookies in the line-up.

BROWNS

San Antonio, Tex., March 8 (AP).—President Donald L. Barnes, here to watch the St. Louis Browns train, had good words today for "the spirit of cooperation" among the players, Shortstop Alan Strange, and the team's pitching staff, "the best in years."

Strange, coming up from Seattle, "may be the needed spark to hold the infield together," Barnes commented. Of the team's chances of emerging from the cellar this season, he said, "we have hopes."

INDIANS

Fort Myers, Fla., March 8 (AP).—Cleveland Indians officials will summon Johnny Allen from his St. Petersburg home next week to resume negotiations with their holdout pitcher, said Vice President C. C. Slapnicka today, convinced there's no chance of bringing Allen to terms via the mails.

"I don't know whether we'll have any better luck with a personal meeting," Slapnicka added, "but it's worth trying. We feel that Allen's demands are out of reason, but if he thinks he can change our minds we'll be willing to listen."

CUBS

Avalon, Calif., March 8 (AP).—The Chicago Cub regulars defeated the Yannigans today, 3 to 1, in a six-inning practice game, first of the spring training season.

The Yannigans got five hits off Rookies Vern Olsen and Ken Raffensberger, same number collected

NATS' ROOKIE PARADE

At Orlando Camp

(This is another of a series of sketches on the rookies seeking jobs with the Nats at their Orlando training camp.)

LOUIS MINSAL, THIRD BASEMAN.

If, for any reason, you bought license plates for your automobile in Havana during the past three seasons, the sharp-featured, olive-skinned fellow who handed you your tags over the counter was the hero of this piece—Louis Minsal.

LOUIS MINSAL

He liked the pay in the Havana Baseball League better than his salary in the license bureau and that is how come he started the baseball career that this spring has landed him in the Nats' Orlando camp as a third base prospect.

Minsal is another of Scout Joe Cambria's products, plucked from the Havana lots this winter after Cambria thrilled a bit at the lad's third base play and found encouragement, also, in his .375 batting average in the Winter League.

There is no mistaking the fact that Minsal is Cuban. He has the acquiline Spanish nose, the dark complexion, the small, wiry build, and the only English he knows to this dat is "Okay."

He is already something of a figure in the Nats' camp. For two weeks, before the regular infielders arrived, young Minsal was staging something of a show with his fielding at third base. He towered far above the American kids in the rookie crop and stubbornly refused to move off third as long as there was a hitter at the plate. He wanted to show off his fielding.

He did, too, and the Nats' bosses were willing to let him field to his heart's content, because they were enjoying it and tabbing the lad as a fellow who was sure-fire to help one of their farm system teams. It is sufficient that he was not signed to a contract of one of Washington's Class D or Class B clubs, but to the Class A Springfield Club

He hits right-handed and has been pasting everything they've thrown to the plate.

Billy Burke, Craig Wood Golf Favorites

By the Associated Press

Coral Gables, Fla., March 8.—Billy Burke has been something of a forgotten man in big time golf the last several years, but the records show that over a long route he is still one of the best in the business.

That is one reason he and Craig Wood are favored to beat Dick Metz and Ky Laffoon tomorrow in the delayed 36-hole finals of the $5,000 International Four-Ball Tournament.

It is of Burke's own choosing that he hasn't appeared much in the headlines since he won the 1931 National Open. He prefers to devote the larger part of his time to teaching the game, and has passed up the winter circuit in favor of his job at Belleair, Fla., the last six years.

He is 37 now, but his nerves still behave under fire and his iron approaches to the green are little short of miraculous.

"I am playing as well now as I ever did," Burke said today puffing placidly on his ever-present cigar. "Just before coming down here I had two 65's, a 63 and a 64 up at Belleair. It's a par 71 course, and that 64 last Friday included a nine-hole 30."

During the first three rounds of the four-ball Burke and Wood were 31 under par for an even 100 holes—almost a birdie every third hole.

Bassin Leaves For Newark Camp

Harry Bassin, former Georgetown University first baseman, who is now the property of the New York Yankees, will leave here today to report to the Newark Club for spring training in Seabright, Fla.

Bassin, who played with Binghamton, a Yankee farm team in the New York - Pennsylvania League, isn't sure whether he'll remain with the Bears or be sent elsewhere.

At Georgetown, where he was graduated in 1938, Bassin starred in both baseball and basketball. He prepped at Eastern High School.

Jenkins Knocks Out Larkin in 1st

Texan Slugs Way Into Commanding Position for Shot at Lightweight Title With Quick Garden Victory

By the Associated Press

New York, March 8.—Lew Jenkins, knockout specialist from Sweetwater, Tex., climbed into a commanding spot for a chance at the lightweight championship tonight by flattening Tippy Larkin, Garfield, N. J., in the first round of a scheduled 15-round fight in Madison Square Garden.

Jenkins weighed 134¼; Larkin, 135¼.

Tearing out with the bell, the slugger from the Southwest took command immediately. He threw both fists without a stop, finally connecting with a series of solid lefts and rights and Larkin dropped in his own corner.

He went sound asleep as Referee Pete Hartley counted the full ten. The time was 2 minutes 41 seconds.

For his convincing display, Jenkins was immediately promised a fight with Champion Lou Ambers for the lightweight title in this same arena on May 10. Promoter Mike Jacobs made the announcement as Larkin was assisted from the ring by his handlers and the jubilant Jenkins headed for his dressing room.

A crowd of 11,542 contributed to a gross gate of $28,420 to see the fight.

Jenkins was a bare favorite at fight time, at odds of no more than 5 to 8, despite his record of having whipped all eight of his previous New York opponents—the last five by knockouts.

Larkin, who has been somewhat of a kayo specialist in his own right, made a futile attempt to jab and box, but Lew broke through in a hurry, chased the Jersey boy back and floored him.

He landed on his back and rolled over on his face as his handlers gaped, open-mouthed, at their gladiator lying in the rosin in the same corner he had left only a few moments before.

Marteliano was floored for a nine-count in the second round, came back in the third to rip Lello's right eye in two places, and then had his own left eye gashed by a right-hand smash in the seventh.

G. W. High Seeks State Title Against Glass Five Tonight

No Favorite In Battle at Alexandria

Coach Doran Starts 'Pressure Boys' in Game; Victory Means Trip for Presidents

Special Dispatch to The Post

Alexandria, Va., March 8.—George Washington High School's surprising cagers, winners of their last nine contests, bid for their first Virginia Class A Conference championship tomorrow night when they meet E. C. Glass High, of Lynchburg, in the final game of the title playoffs, on the G. W. courts, starting at 8 o'clock.

The Presidents, after winning the Eastern District title, qualified for the finals by eliminating Newport News High, Central Division winner, last Tuesday night, 30 to 29. The Lynchburg five, Western District titlist, was awarded a bye in the opening round of the playoffs and will be playing its first game since the close of the regular season.

The two teams will go into the championship contest without either being established as favorite, simply because there has been no basis for comparison. Glass has played all its games in the southwest section of the State, winning the Western District title with a record of seven victories and one defeat, while George Washington has performed in the Eastern-Central sector, and copped the Central Division crown with nine wins and one loss. They have met no mutual opponents during the campaign.

Scouted G. W. High

The visitors come to Alexandria well armed with information concerning G. W.'s style of play, inasmuch as their coaches, Tom Funk and Marshall Smith, scouted the Presidents in their semifinal contest with Newport News. G. W. officials, on the other hand, have never seen the Hilltoppers in action, but Coach Al Doran has succeeded in rounding up a few facts on Lynchburg's tactics. He talked to Harry Martin, coach of Lane High at Charlottesville, by telephone this morning and was given the benefit of Martin's knowledge of the Lynchburg squad. The Hilltoppers defeated Lane twice during the regular season.

Two Lynchburg players who will bear watching, Doran was informed, are Capt. Les Pugh and "Corn" Rosenberger, who have set a hot pace in the Hilltoppers' string of victories this season. These two set-shot artists were impressive in a brief practice held by the Hilltoppers this afternoon in the G. W. gym, while the performance of the entire squad indicated the Presidents will have their hands full.

Pressure Boys

Doran plans to start his "five pressure boys," so tagged because of their apparent ability to perform at their best when the going is roughest. The combination includes Ed Williams and Nick Latsios, forwards; Amos Clift, All-Central District selection, center, and Capt. Ed Snyder, another All-Central choice, and Johnnie Shelton, guards. For reserve duty he will have a quartet of dependable performers in Johnnie Murnane, Jack Kreamer, Alvin Anderson and Leon Chisholm.

John Borican Promises Fast Pace in Mile

Reformed Half-Miler Competes Tonight In K. of C. Event

By the Associated Press

New York, March 8.—John Borican will run in the Columbian mile tomorrow night at Madison Square Garden for the express purpose of leading the season's "Big Four" through a record-breaking three-quarters.

But Big John, who has promised to hit the three-quarters pole in 3:05, won't drop out at that point. Undoubtedly he will be unable to match the last-quarter race of Chuck Fenske, Glenn Cunningham, Lou Zamperini and Gene Venzke. He'll be satisfied if he runs the mile in 4:13, the best he's ever done.

If he can do that well, the big, handsome Negro with the powerful, stylish stride intends next season to move up to the mile. The half-miler has a burning ambition to become the first Class A miler of his race.

Many Sterling Sprinters

Negroes have contributed vitally to the track and field record book. There have been sterling sprinters like Ralph Metcalfe, Eddie Tolan, Jesse Owens, Ben Johnson, Herb Thompson, Mozel Ellerbee and Barney Ewell; fine quarter-milers and 600 men like Archie Williams and Jim Herbert; half-milers like Borican and Long John Woodruff, and all-around stars like Borican and Bill Watson.

Phil Edwards was their closest approach to a star miler. The Toronto Negro won third place for Canada in the 1932 Olympic "metric mile." Yet even he was better at 880 and 1,000 yards.

Coach Emil von Elling, of New York University, believes there've been no star Negro milers because Negroes primarily are imitators. Endowed with a natural aptitude for sprints, they soon came to dominate this field. One or two men, thus encouraged, stepped up to the quarter and half, and others followed when the trail-blazers were successful.

May Offer Competition

Now, if Borican shouldf make a success of his mile-running venture, Fenske, Zamperini and the rest may find competition from a new quarter.

The Columbian mile, feature of the Knights of Columbus meet, rings down the curtain on New York's regularly scheduled indoor track season. Entered in the other events are almost all of the stars of the winter, including Allan Tolmich in the hurdles, Herbert, Wes Wallace and Charley Belcher in the 600, Greg Rice and Walter Mehl in the 2-mile, Al Blozis in the shot-put, and N. Y. U.'s star foursome in the mile relay.

Metropolitan Tourney In Semifinals Tonight

Riders Meet Bethesda-Chevy Chase In Opener of Doubleheader at Tech; Eastern, Gonzaga Clash in Nightcap

With the suburban entry whittled from an original four to only one team, the Metropolitan Scholastic Basketball tourney goes into its semifinals tonight at Tech gym at 7:30.

Eastern, the defending titlist, and Gonzaga feature hostilities in the nightcap, and in the opener Roosevelt and the lone county representative, Bethesda-Chevy Chase, come to grips.

A second edition of the capacity crowd which saw the first twin bill of the eighth annual event is expected when the whistle sends Eastern out in an effort to retain its only remaining cage crown. Shorn of the interhigh title by Roosevelt, the fast-improving Tide will probably "shoot the works" to keep at least one championship intact. And it will be favored, having amassed the largest total of the season in beating Georgetown Prep, 62-41, last Thursday.

For Gonzaga the game will furnish a chance to tie up the only outstanding loose end of its season. Eastern is the sole local team with an edge on the Purple. Twice the Tide took Gonzaga into camp, but the first time it was by 36-31 and the second time it was 24-20.

Roosevelt, of course, will enjoy the odds in its game with Bethesda. But the suburbanites, in addition to a highly successful season, were responsible for one of the few games in which the Riders were extended. The outcome was 45-39 favoring the Riders.

With Roosevelt already in possession of two outside tourney bids, and Eastern resolved to accept none, action tonight will have a strong bearing on invitations for the underdogs. Bethesda is almost certain of getting a bid to Durham, N. C., if it gets past Roosevelt and Gonzaga's chances of entering the Eastern Catholic Tourney in Newport, R. I., will be immeasurably helped by a triumph over Eastern.

The first girls' action occurs today at 3 p. m. when Montgomery Blair, defending the feminine title, squares off with Hyattsville. Approximately one hour later the forces of Mount Rainier and Bethesda-Chevy Chase meet. In each game it will be Montgomery County versus Prince Georges County. The two winners clash Monday night as a prelude to the boys championship game.

Two Devitt Boxers Win In Tourney

Normyle and Correa TKO Victors; Krieger, Local Boy, Defeated

Special Dispatch to The Post

Fort Defiance, Va., March 8.—Two Devitt Prep representatives were victorious and one lost here today in the opening round of the thirteenth annual South Atlantic prep boxing tournament.

The winning Devitt boxers, John Normyle, in the 155-pound class, and Angel Correa, at 165, scored quick technical knockouts in afternoon bouts, while 145-pound Emory Krieger lost on a TKO in the second round of an evening encounter to Bill Mears, of Charlotte Hall.

Correa and Normyle both won in the first round, stopping Leonard Coote, of Augusta Military Academy, and Charles Legg, of Charlotte Hall, respectively.

George Pajak Tops Hoyas' Cage Scoring

George Pajak, forward and guard, led Georgetown University's basketball scorers in the season recently completed with a total of 144 points in 15 games for an average of 9.60 per contest. Irving Rizzi, a guard, was second high with 111 points in 18 contests and an average of 6.18.

The Hoyas scored an average of 36.77 points per game; a total of 660. They won eight games and lost ten, but scored upsets over George Washington U., Army, Penn State and Tempie.

Eagles Defeat Elizabethtown In Last Game

American Wins, 43-38, As Brown Plays Final College Battle

American University's basketball team wrote a happy ending to its disastrous basketball season last night on the home floor, where it took the measure of Elizabethtown College, 43-38.

It was American's fifth victory in 13 games this season, the contest further serving as a grand send-off present for George Brown, captain and one of the greatest athletes in Eagle history.

Led by Eugene Shirk, classy forward, Elizabethtown fought all the way, but the Eagles' sharpshooting proved too much for the visitors to overcome.

Scoring in the first half was fairly evenly divided, as both teams missed repeatedly at the hoop, Elizabethtown's zone defense restricting American's scoring, while the visitors found equal difficulty getting around American's man-to-man style of defense.

A. U.'s floor game and passing outclassed the Pennsylvanians by far throughout the first half, but when Coach Stan Cassell chose to insert his second team midway in the second half, Elizabethtown began to make threatening gestures.

From a scoring standpoint Lanky Bruce Etchison was A. U.'s star. He ringed the hoop for 12 points to lead his team's scoring, but if floor play is to be included in the quest for American's star, Hugo Schulze and Brown would have to be counted in on the proceedings.

Special Dispatch to The Post

Baltimore, Md., March 8.—Turning on the heat with a well distributed scoring attack in the last two periods, the Baltimore Clippers defeated the Washington Heurich Brewers, of Washington, D. C., in an American Basketball League championship play-off series game here tonight, 43 to 37.

The Brewers were leading at the end of the first period, 18 to 13, but were trailing after the second intermission, 33 to 24. The Brewers fought back furiously in the last period, but to no avail.

Reds Wait in Vain for Cubans Already in Nats' Training Camp

Scout Cambria Pulls Fast One on Cincinnati; Signing Trio Consigned Reds by Government

Special Dispatch to The Post

Orlando, Fla., March 8.—The best laid plans of the Cuban government and the Cincinnati Reds were foiled by a bud-nipping little Italian who scouts for the Washington club.

Tonight in Orlando a grinning Joe Cambria clarified in full "The Mystery of the Little Men Who Weren't There" when the steamship Cuba docked this morning at Tampa, supposedly with a consignment of government-selected ballplayers for the Cincinnati Reds.

When the boat from Havana hove in at Port Tampa today and a welcoming committee comprised of Cincinnati club officials and eminent Cubans from Tampa's Ybor City waited in vain for the Cuban ballplayers to come down the gangplank, their discomfiture could have been foretold by Cambria.

"Those players they have been expecting at Tampa have been in the Washington camp here for two weeks," smirked Cambria. "I signed them in Havana early in January."

Two of the four players, Cambria revealed, are outfielder George Torres and Third Baseman Louis Minsal. A third, safely under contract to the Nats' farm system and whose name is Gonzales, a pitcher, is due to arrive in Orlando next week.

"The fourth player I left in Cuba," said Cambria. "He wasn't good enough."

Last summer the Cuban government announced that it had agreed to cooperate with the Reds in delivering to the Cincinnati club the outstanding baseball talent on the island. The agreement was made through the Sports Commission, a Cuban government agency, in appreciation of the Cincinnati club's long-time disposition toward Cuban players.

In Washington, that announcement was received with some surprise. Clark Griffith said, bluntly, "They can't do that to us. I was the first big league manager to sign a Cuban ball player. The Washington club has always encouraged Cuban players."

Joe Cambria said nothing. But he had his own plans. Early in the year he embarked for Havana. In the amateur league there he appraised the Cuban talent. Quietly he selected the three outstanding players, signed them to contracts. No longer was Joe Cambria worried about any such item as an agreement between the Cuban government and the Cincinnati Reds. —Povich.

Condor Arrival Completes Fleet For Yacht Race

By the Associated Press

St. Petersburg, Fla., March 8.—Thirteen sailing yachts, headed by Stormy Weather, four-time winner of the Miami-Nassau race, will answer the starting gun for the eleventh annual St. Petersburg-Havana race tomorrow at noon.

The fleet was completed late today with the belated arrival of the Condor, 59-foot yawl owned by L. W. McFarland, Greenwich, Conn. The Condor was delayed by head winds on its trip up the Gulf of Mexico from Key West.

Stormy Weather, 53-foot yawl owned by William Labrot, Annapolis, Md.; Good News, recently completed 65-foot yawl, owned by Robert Johnson, Princeton, N. J., and the Wakiva, 70-foot yawl owned by Harkness Edwards, New York City, are the favorites for the 284-mile race down the Gulf of Mexico and across the Gulf Stream to Havana. The Wakiva was the first boat to finish the race last year, but R. J. Reynolds' Blitzen was the winner on corrected time. The Blitzen is not entered this year.

Weather conditions for the start of the race are favorable, with westerly and northwesterly winds forecast, and the possibility of a new record looms. The yacht Sirrocco set the record in 1937, 39 hours and 26 minutes.

North Beach Bids For Boat Regatta

The board of trade of North Beach and Chesapeake Beach at its monthly meeting last night decided to bid for a regatta to be held at North Beach this summer. The meeting was held at Fireman's Hall, and dinner was served by H. MacWilliams.

Dates for the proposed regatta were not discussed, but it was pointed out that its date should not conflict with that of the annual Solomon's Island regatta, said Mr. Arthur Shaffer, president of the board. But the intentions of the board were to stage one of the best on the East Coast. This will be the first attempt of a regatta for North and Chesapeake beaches.

Hoya Sextet Beats Loyola By 4-2 Score

Georgetown Downs Baltimore Team 2d Time This Season

Special Dispatch to The Post

Baltimore, Md., March 8.—Loyola College dropped its second straight hockey game to Georgetown University here tonight by a 4-to-2 score.

The Hoya skaters went on a spree in the second session to chalk up two tallies, while the local team managed to register once. Washington's team work was superior to the locals, but the visitors lacked the shooting power and all of their counters came as the result of setup plays.

After a scoreless first period, Frank Deegan, Hoya center, flashed the light after nicking a shot in the corner of the cage. Less than two minutes later Mulchaey and McBride teamed together on a perfect play to add to the Georgetown lead. Then Jim Graham blazed in another counter after luring Goalie Hennegan out of position. Edelin accounted for the Hoyas' fourth point.

Indiana's Cochran Sets American 440 Mark

Chicago, March 8 (U.P.).—Roy Cochran, Indiana's international 400-meter hurdle champion, tonight bettered the American indoor record for the 440-yard dash with a spectacular time of 48.4 seconds in a qualifying heat of the Big Ten Championships.

Hoyas Conceded Good Chance in 3 Events

Closing its indoor track season, Georgetown University is conceded a good chance to sweep its three events tonight in the annual Knights of Columbus met at Madison Square Garden.

Al Blozis, 248-pound sophomore whose last three appearances have produced two world's records, will be an odds-on favorite in his event; Phil Graves, a flying freshman, will be a cofavorite with Sanford Goldberg in the invitation 1,000, and the Hoya 1-mile relay team will be a 50-50 bet to win its race against N. Y. U., St. John's College, of Brooklyn and Holy Cross.

Graves has been rated the one to beat in the 1,000 since Lester MacMitchell, of N. Y. U., and Joe Zeitler, of Manhattan, withdrew yesterday. This eleventh-hour chance of plans is apt to brighten the outlook for both Georgetown and Maryland, which has entered its crack 2-mile relay team.

MacMitchell, winner of the I. C. 4-A mile in 4:24.8 last week, will take his place in the 2-mile relay lineup for N. Y. U. and the Violets will be a much more formidable opponent for Maryland.

The Georgetown relayers are given a fine chance to beat N. Y. U. for the second time this season because Jim Herbert, the Violets' crack anchorman will not be in the race. Herbert, who was missing the night the Hoyas dealt the Violets their first defeat, will be withheld from the relay to allow him to compete in the Casey 600.

Boots, Baltimore Cocker Spaniel, Is Bountiful Mother

When she had a family, Boots, a cocker-spaniel, did a thorough job. She proudly presented her owner with ten little spaniels, five boys and as many girls. There was quite a crush around dinner time, though, so the family was taught early to eat like grown-ups—out of dishes

Solarium Upsets Choices to Win Tropical Park Feature

Charlton's Foul Claim Not Allowed

Cardinalis' Jockey Lodge Complaint; Colonel Joe Wins, But Is Disqualified

By the Associated Press

Tropical Park, Fla., March 8.—A strong wind was blowing here today, and with it went the hopes of favorite players, race after race, right out of the park. When Mrs. E. L. Martin's Supreme Sir finished third in the Miami Beach Handicap, a mile and one-sixteenth feature that held fifth place on the card, no public choice had found his way home successfully. The Knollwood Stable's Solarium, a $16.10 for $2 shot, took the purse by three-quarters of a length, but he was only one of the milder surprises of the afternoon.

P. L. Kelley's Cardinalis finished second, two lengths before Supreme Sir. Solarium, recently a winner at Hialeah in $3,500 claiming company, made the excellent time of 1:43 4-5 for the distance. "Chuck" Charlton, who rode Cardinalis, claimed foul against the winner, but the stewards, after digesting the facts of a bitter stretch drive, allowed the result to stand.

Supreme Sir, in his last outing, finished in a dead heat for third with Day Off in the rich Widener Challenge Cup, carrying 107 pounds. The colt had 118 up today. He failed to stage the powerful late rally that marked his Widener performance.

Cardinalis in Front

Cardinalis outran the favorite, which closed at $1.05 on the dollar, in the early stages. Solarium ran past Supreme Sir after three furlongs and overtook Cardinalis soon afterward. He continued gamely while Cardinalis also held on desperately to the end.

Apprentice Jack Flinchwood, after finishing fourth on High Fidelity, became indisposed and canceled his remaining mounts.

A disqualification and another beaten favorite marked the seventh race. Colonel Joe, an outsider ridden by the unfashionable J. Marinelli, beat Mobcap by a head after a bitter drive, then the stewards ordered his number down. Colonel Joe appeared to bear in and crowd Mobcap during their hard duel. Mobcap, paying $8.30, was awarded first position while the place went to the favorite, Turf Sting. Alpenglow was moved up to third. Colonel Joe and Mobcap had the issue between them after the first half mile. Turf Sting broke slowly and closed ground too late to get close to the first two horses.

A dozen 2-year-old platers of the $1,500-$1,200 variety matched strides in the four-furlong test that ushered in the program.

Kaptime Surprises

An upset developed out of the running when Charlton Clay's Sparkling Heel, soundly thrashed in her one race at Hialeah Park, got up in time to record a head triumph at odds of $40.40 for $2. It was a thrilling finish, for New Year, All Even and Overflowing finished heads apart behind the winner, in the order named. All Even could not maintain a daylight advantage and fell prey to Sparkling Heel's late spurt. The time was :49 3-5.

A bad start marred the second race. Joaney B. and Happy Nymph got off so slowly they had no chance. The purse went to the suddenly improved Kaptime, a $28.10 for $2 proposition. Running in a fashion more befitting an odds-on favorite, the gelding sprinted to the front after the first quarter mile of the 6-furlong affair. He opened up an unbeatable lead and clicked by five lengths. Steel King was a game finishing second, with On Quest a half length behind. Perfect Peace, the standout choice, rushed to the front, only to drop out of contention before the end of a half mile.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—SPARKLING HEELS, $40.40, $15.80, $12.30; NEW YEAR, $5.60, $4.80; ALL EVEN, $6.20.

SPARKLING HEELS, pinched back slightly at the start, swung around the field entering the stretch and closed gamely to wear the leaders down through the stretch. NEW YEAR broke alertly, went forwardly all the way and closed with good courage, but was unable to match the winner's bid. ALL EVEN moved to the front with a rush rounding the turn and opened up a good lead, but faltered when placed to punishment. OVERFLOWING made up ground in the final furlongs.

SECOND RACE—Six furlongs. Purse, $900; claiming. For 4-year-olds and upward. Start bad from Puett gate. Won easily; place driving. Went to post 2:37½. Off 2:40½. Winner, Miss K. Peters' ch. g. Two-dollar mutuels paid—KAPTIME, $28.10, $13.70, $8.10; STEEL KING, $9.50, $6.80; ON QUEST, $13.50.

KAPTIME, away well, drew into command when ready and then opened up easily to draw away at the end. STEEL KING was not rushed in the early stages, but came on when called for his best and proved next best. ON QUEST displayed nice speed from the start and held on well. HEADIN HOME, away slowly, closed with a rush in the last quarter mile. PERFECT PEACE showed speed for about 3 furlongs, then quit to a walk.

Daily Double, SPARKLING HEELS and KAPTIME, Paid $345.60

THIRD RACE—Six furlongs. Purse, $900; claiming. For 4-year-olds and upward. Start good from Puett gate. Won driving; place same. Went to post 3:05½. Off 3:06. Winner, H. R. Pardue and Son's b. g. (7), by Twink—Mai Dee. Trained by W. O. Hicks. Value to winner, $650; second, $150; third, $75; fourth, $25. Time, 1:12⅘.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—HAT CHECK, $20.70, $9.00, $4.40; PRAETORIAN, $14.80, $6.30; EPICAL, $3.70.

HAT CHECK, going in his best form, saved ground and, closing gamely, shook off EPICAL but had to be vigorously ridden to stave off PRAETORIAN'S bid. The latter, on the extreme outside, finished with a belated rush. EPICAL took a short lead in the early stages, but faltered when the final test came. CRUISING, prominent early, retired after going half mile.

FOURTH RACE—Six furlongs. Purse, $1,000; claiming. For 3-year-olds. Start good from Puett gate. Won driving; place same. Went to post 3:31½. Off 3:33. Winner, Mrs. J. K. Russell's dk. ch. f. Two-dollar mutuels paid—NEDDIE LASS, $76.30, $30.50, $19.30; ALZURA, $8.60, $6.50; FRIAR'S SCOUT, $11.80.

NEDDIE LASS moved up steadily on the outside rounding lower turn, wore the leader down through the stretch, but just lasted long enough to withstand ALZURA'S bid. The latter, slow to begin, began to gain on the extreme outside in the last quarter mile and would have won in another stride. FRIAR'S SCOUT, hard ridden the entire trip, closed with good courage. SWING BAND, prominent early, faltered and was bumped entering the stretch.

FIFTH RACE—One and one-sixteenth miles. Purse, $1,200. The Miami Beach. For 4-year-olds and upward. Start good from Puett gate. Won ridden out; place driving. Went to post 3:58½. Off 3:58½. Winner, Knolwood Stable's b. g. (5), by Victorian—Sun Rogue. Trained by J. M. Black. Value to winner, $850; second, $200; third, $100; fourth, $50. Time, 1:43⅘.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—SOLARIUM, $16.10, $6.20, $3.50; CARDINALIS, $5.60, $3.40; SUPREME SIR, $2.40.

SOLARIUM, a forward factor on the outside all the way, raced CARDINALIS into defeat, rounding the lower turn and drew clear entering stretch, but was ridden out cleverly to the finish. CARDINALIS, displaying the most speed, saved ground all the way and was slightly pinched back entering stretch, but was beaten at the time. SUPREME SIR, nicely placed in the opening half mile, faltered thereafter. HIGH FIDELITY lacked his usual dash in the last 3 furlongs and only passed tired horses.

SIXTH RACE—Six furlongs. Purse, $1,100; allowances. The Surfside. For 4-year-olds and upward. Start good from Puett gate. Won driving; place same. Went to post 4:32. Off 4:32. Winner, W. J. McCune's ch. m. (5), by Don Leon—Myrtle Belle. Trained by J. F. Quinn, jr. Value to winner, $775; second, $190; third, $100; fourth, $35. Time, 1:12⅘.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—DONNA LEONA, $6.20, $5.00, $4.20; RADIO GOLD, $7.10, $4.40; AMBROSE LIGHT, $4.80.

DONNA LEONA, hustled into a good lead the first quarter mile, faltered slightly through the stretch, but continued determinedly to hold RADIO GOLD safe. The latter, strongly urged from the start, finished gamely, but could not overhaul the winner. AMBROSE LIGHT, on the outside all the way, outlasted LATEPASS when the final issue came. WISE BARRISTER broke slowly and sulked.

SEVENTH RACE—One and three-sixteenths miles. Purse, $900; claiming. For 4-year-olds and upward. Start good from Puett gate. Won driving; place same. Went to post 4:57. Off 4:57½. Winner, F. E. Ray's b. m. (5), by Mad Hatter—Spellbound. Trained by owner. Value to winner, $650; second, $150; third, $75; fourth, $25. Time, 2:00⅘.

†Won but was disqualified.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—MOBCAP, $8.30, $4.50, $4.00; TURF STING, $3.90, $3.30; ALPENGLOW, $4.80.

COLONEL JOE, well up on the outside, moved up on the outside of MOBCAP rounding the far turn, bumped and threw her against the fence, then just lasted to win, but was disqualified for foul. MOBCAP, raced in front, was slightly outrun while saving ground entering the stretch, was crowded against the inner rail, but closed gamely around entering the stretch and was wearing COLONEL JOE down in the final strides. A. Schmidt, lodged a claim of foul against the winner and it was allowed. TURF STING worked his way up gradually and easily disposed of the others. ALPENGLOW was pinched back in the stretch turn.

EIGHTH RACE—One and three-sixteenths miles. Purse, $900; claiming. For 4-year-olds and upward. Start good from Puett gate. Won easily; place driving. Went to post 5:26½. Off 5:26½. Winner, Crutcher and Thompson's br. or blk. g. (7), by Bevitchus—Ashram. Trained by H. Thompson. Value to winner, $650; second, $150; third, $75; fourth, $25. Time, 2:00.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—LISTOWEL, $28.00, $12.60, $6.30; DOUBLE R, $3.90, $3.10; OUR LADDIE $4.50.

LISTOWEL assumed command with a rush leaving the backstretch, and drew steadily clear to win as his rider pleased. DOUBLE R, outrun in the early stages, closed with a rush in the final furlong. OUR LADDIE came through between the leaders in the stretch run and shook off DIABROOM. The latter was kept on the inside all the way.

Banks Urged To Put Idle Money to Work

Aid Small Business, Buy More Long-Term Bonds, Says Thomas

By the Associated Press

Woodlief Thomas, Federal Reserve Board economist, called on banks yesterday to put their unprecedented volume of idle money to work by lending more to small business, buying more long-term bonds and cutting home mortgage and some other types of interest rates.

Thomas called attention to the $5,730,000,000 excess reserves in the banks in an article in the board's monthly bulletin issued yesterday. Although his views were similar to some expressed by members of the board in the past, the article carried a note saying that Thomas' views were "not necessarily" those of the board.

Recalling the intensive discussion last year for aid to small business—a project abandoned for lack of agreement of different Federal agencies and Congressmen—Thomas asserted, "the provision of credit facilities for small business enterprise offers another field for possible expansion of bank credit."

Small Business

"Either because the type of financing needed by these enterprises is of a nature which banks have not customarily supplied or because of past unfortunate experience with such loans, banks are hesitant to enter this field on any broad scale. It cannot be denied that this is a costly and risky business. The problem is one of finding a way to supply business with such financing as it may need and at the same time to safeguard the soundness of our banking system."

He recalled that Federal Reserve officials last year recommended creation of an industrial loan corporation which, through existing Federal machinery, would help the banks on small loans. Other proposals include setting up of independent agencies to make loans directly to small businessmen, and having the Reconstruction Finance Corporation underwrite bank loans to small business.

Thomas asserted that while it was the primary duty of banks to safeguard their depositors' money, they also had a duty to keep the Nation's savings invested, a duty which he said was easier now that Federal Deposit Insurance has reduced the risk of bank failures.

Long-Term Investments

Less need for ready cash to meet possible runs on banks, Thomas continued, ought to enable the banks to put more of their funds—but not too much—in long-term bonds and other long-term investments. Such investments, he explained, should be made with the intention of holding the securities indefinitely because of their intrinsic worth. They should not be sold, he said, to make a trifling profit on a temporary change in market price.

He conceded that mortgage interest rates had been reduced somewhat in recent years, but added that in view of mortgage insurance by the Federal Housing Administration and other protective measures, a "further decline in interest rates in this field would not be impossible and would no doubt be in the public interest, because interest charges are an important part of the cost of home-ownership. The reductions that have occurred have no doubt been a factor in increasing building activity."

Hayden, Stone Co., Glore, Forgan & Co. Discuss Merger

New York, March 8 (AP).—Merger discussions, "in the preliminary stage," are being carried on by the New York Stock Exchange firms of Hayden, Stone & Co. and Glore, Forgan & Co., the firms announced today.

The former firm, which still bears the name of the late Charles Hayden, millionaire investment banker and philanthropist, has extensive connections in New England. Glore, Forgan & Co. of which Charles F. Glore is the senior partner, has its principal office in Chicago. Charles M. Connfelt now heads Hayden, Stone & Co.

Annual Fire Index Published Today

This publication shows that during 1939 all stock fire insurance companies had a premium income of $825,759,550, representing an increase over the previous year of $49,824,106, or 6.4 per cent. Total losses paid by all stock fire insurance companies during 1939 totaled $342,869,630, or 41.5 per cent of net premium income. Total losses paid were $3,955,330 under the previous year.

It is significant to note that during 1939 straight fire premiums showed a decrease of $9,799,394, or 2.1 per cent, while straight fire losses increased over the previous year by $11,492,828, or 6.4 per cent.

Industrial Rate, 128 in December, Is 109 in February

By the Associated Press

The Federal Reserve Board estimated yesterday that its index of industrial production, which hit a record high of 128 in December, sank to 109 in February. The index had already gone down to 119 in January, but the February estimate of 109 was still 10 points higher than in February, 1939.

Secretary Hopkins and other officials have predicted a further drop in March, and one source close to President Roosevelt estimated that the index would touch bottom at 105 in April, when he expects a gradual upturn to set in.

In its monthly bulletin, the board explained that part of the decrease in the index was due to actual curtailment of industry and part was due to the decreases occuring at a season when production usually is going up.

The board noted that part of the intensive industrial production of last fall had been added to inventories rather than sold and said the decline set in December because "the flow of new orders fell below the level of current shipments."

Bankers Find Business View Favorable

But U. S. Case of 'Gold Indigestion' Is Cited As Reason for Caution

By Thomas M. Cahill.

Our business outlook is described as favorable by the March survey of the American Bankers Association, which finds three factors operating on the side of caution. These are statistical, economic and political. Reasons for caution are described by Banking, official publication of the association, as "our case of gold indigestion," awaiting of a more clear picture of the political outlook in connection with the Presidential campaign, and fear over what may happen economically when Government spending is further limited.

Although the review forecasts the outlook as favorable, the magazine's cross index of business opinion resulting from a poll of 3,000 bank officers and directors in all parts of the United States, is not as cheering as in the preceding month. Forty-seven per cent of those canvassed for this summary reported business as improving, 33 per cent found conditions the same, and 20 per cent announced a decline. In February, 55 per cent listed an upward trend; 34 per cent, an even keel, and 11 per cent, a decline.

Gas Exhibits, Inc.

Marcy L. Sperry, president of Washington Gas Light Co., has been reelected to the board of directors of Gas Exhibits, Inc., for 1940, which sponsors in behalf of the American gas industry an exhibit at the New York World's Fair known as the "Court of Flame." This has been announced by Hugh H. Cuthrell, president, from headquarters of the organization in New York City.

Mr. Sperry is one of 24 executives of gas utility and gas appliance and equipment manufacturing companies from all parts of the Nation who are either officials or directors of as Exhibits, Inc. In announcing personnel of the 1940 board, which has been enlarged by election of seven new members, Mr. Cuthrell stated that plans are now completed for a spectacular group of new exhibits in the Court of Flame Building, which will be named the Gas Wonderland.

Another new feature, according to the announcement, will be "Tiny Town," a typical American suburb in miniature with ingeniously devised "talking houses" which will reveal interiors to graphically demonstrate the use of the various gas appliances—cooking, refrigeration, water heating, air-conditioning and househeating apparatus—that are marketed by the industry. Numerous other new exhibits of a colorful character also are being added to illustrate the modernity of gas as a fuel.

Aetna Casualty Meeting

Aetna Casualty & Surety Co., is planning to hold a meeting of its representatives at the Wardman Park Hotel next Wednesday. The assembly will start at noon with a luncheon and during the afternoon there will be talks on important subjects by Assistant Secretary Paul Rogers and Field Supervisors L. B. Fowler, F. W. Potter and William W. Ellis. Following each talk there will be adequate time devoted to discussion of the subject. The meeting will close after a dinner, which will be served at the end of the business session.

These home office representatives are well known in Washington insurance circles. Mr. Rogers has visited this city a number of times and has recently been elected assistant secretary. He is an authority on health and insurance. Mr. Fowler has been the field supervisor of this territory for some years and has spoken at previous meetings of insurance men here. Mr. Potter and Mr. Ellis have been instructors in the sales course, conducted by the company at its home office in Hartford, Conn., which has been attended by a number of Aetna representatives of this city.

Magill Heads Millers

By unanimous vote, R. Ward Magill, president of the Kansas Milling Co. of Wichita, has been elected president and chairman of the board of the Millers' National Federation, national association of the flour milling industry. Mr. Magill, who is now serving as first vice president and chairman of the finance committee of the federation, will take office May 9 when the millers' organization holds its thirty-eighth annual convention in Chicago. The federation includes in its membership more than 500 flour mills producing 80 per cent of the total flour production of the country.

Mr. Magill was born in Kingman, Kans., in 1891. He was graduated with a law degree from the University of Kansas in 1913. He has been identified with the milling industry of Kansas for a decade and has been president of the Kansas Milling Co., since 1933. His other business connections include membership on the board of directors of the Missouri Pacific Railroad, the Fourth National Bank of Wichita, and the Western Millers Mutual Fire Insurance Co. He is married and has three daughters in college at Lawrence and Manhattan, Kans., and Washington, D. C.

Most Stocks Lower at Closing; Aircrafts Firm Despite Peace Talk; U. S. Bonds Firm, Brazilians Higher

New York, March 8.—Peace talk and profit taking after the four-day rise possibly accounted for the ragged performance of share markets today although softness in commodity sections could have played some part. Aircrafts gave the sole demonstration of vigor but they too faded in late dealings. After holding quite firm, the main body of stocks was on the down grade at the finish. The aggregate decline, however, was negligible, the 100 key issues ending only 5-100ths of a point down. Steels and coppers lost most while rail equipments and utilities did best.

Sterling was sharply lower in foreign exchange trading on the eve of the announcement of the new control measures. Speculators got out of the market to the tune of a 4⅜-cent drop. Canadian dollars, quoted at a 15 per cent discount, were at a new low. French francs also eased. Firmness of Brazilians on debt settlement reports lent a little color to bonds which otherwise jogged along without much price variation. Wheat tumbled 1¼ to 1¾ cents and cotton was shaded 1 to 7 points.

Record Aircraft Earnings

The demand for aviation and airline stocks was touched off by publication of record earnings reports and word that Anglo-French negotiations in this market for $1,000,000 worth of planes and equipment were progressing. Curtiss-Wright led the list on turnover of 66,000 shares, reaching a new high for the year and closing with a ⅜ point net gain. Aviation Corporation, Martin Parry, United Air Lines, Bendix, Glenn Martin, Pan American Airways, Lockheed and United Aircraft were all squeezed into the 15 most active list, all but two advanced quotations.

Aside from the aircraft group, selective buying of such issues as Telephone, Eaton Manufacturing, Hayes Body, Houdaille Hersche B, Motor Products, Noblitt-Sparks & Spicer, accounted for the bulk of the 52 new highs recorded during the session. The favorable Celanese report was followed by demand for the stock at its high of 30¾ for the day. New highs also were made by American Encaustic Tiling, National Acme, Jewel Tea, Market Street Railway and Twin City Rapid Transit. Monsanto Chemical made a good advance.

G. M. Off Despite Sales Peak

General Motors was off ¾ despite its record February sales, and other automotives failed to reflect much buyer interest in the bullish forecasts on consumer demand for the new models. Ward's figures showed a small increase for the week in assemblies. Chrysler was off a point, but some of the low-priced motor shares ended with small gains.

The decline in steel issues coincided with estimates from some of the producing centers, including Youngstown, that output will be about unchanged next week, and to estimates that there has been no accelleration in new orders of a general nature. Westinghouse was off a point and smaller declines were recorded by Loft, Republic Steel and Standard Oil Co. of New Jersey.

Among items of domestic business news were the decline in the Federal Reserve Board index for February to 109 per cent of the 1923-1925 average from 119 in January and 128 in December, and Dun & Bradstreet's average estimate that retail trade had been hampered to a less than seasonal increase in the last week by adverse weather.

Brazilian Bonds Active

Defaulted Brazilian bonds today were active in the listed market, gains of 1 to 2 points developing in such issues owing to preliminary reports of the four-year debt agreement of which details are promised for today. Other departments of the market were quiet, but the tone was generally good. Treasury bonds held around former levels, and small gains predominated in the speculative corporate list. Turnover in all bonds was $6,700,000.

Almost all Brazilian issues moved to best levels of 1940 on the indications that service payments are to be resumed, apparently on an even more modified basis than was represented by the Aranha plan. A few of the State bonds showed gains slightly exceeding 2 points, but most issues were up less than this amount. Other Latin-American bonds were relatively quiet. Finland 6s were not traded, while Scandinavian bonds were irregular. Belligerent country issues moved forward slowly, but impressively.

Am. Airlines, Inc., Earned in Year $1,467,751

American Airlines, Inc., earned $1,467,751.02 in 1939, after provision of $330,300 for Federal income taxes, as compared with net profit of $213,261.88 for the year of 1938, according to figures released today by C. R. Smith, president.

Provision for depreciation and obsolescence in 1939 amounted to $1,261,918.29, as compared with $1,548,196.14 in 1938. On January 1, 1939, the depreciation rates on certain types of aircraft operated by the company were changed from a four-year to a five-year basis. As a result of this change, the depreciation provision for 1939 was $252,685.91 less than would have been provided on the basis used in the preceding year.

Outstanding at December 31, 1939, were 303,320 shares of capital stock. An additional 50,000 shares were sold on December 14, 1939, and were issued on January 31, 1940. Shares reserved for the conversion of outstanding convertible debentures, in the amount of $2,536,975 and due July 1, 1941, were 202,958 shares.

The company operated 19,170,018 revenue plane miles during 1939, as compared with 15,314,792 miles during 1938. The number of passengers transported during 1939 increased 51.2 per cent, as compared with 1938. Total revenue passengers transported in 1939 were 541,757, as compared with 358,295 in 1938. Revenue passenger miles were 207,360,215 in 1939, as compared with 140,869,290 in 1938, an increase of 47.2 per cent. In 1939 American Airlines, Inc. transported 31.5 per cent of the total number of passengers transported during the year by the domestic air transport industry, as compared with 30 per cent in 1938.

P. C. Air Travel Up 40 Per Cent

A 40.06 per cent increase in revenue passenger traffic on Pennsylvania-Central Airlines was realized last month over February, 1939, it was announced today by J. J. O'Donovan, vice president. Seven thousand seven hundred and eighty-eight revenue passengers flew P. C. A in February, as compared with the 5,561 revenue passengers carried by the airline in February of last year. There was a 35.53 per cent increase in revenue passenger miles last month, O'Donovan said, 1,312,629 revenue passenger miles being flown in February, 1940, as compared with 968,466 revenue passenger miles flown during February, 1939.

This was the twentieth consecutive month that traffic over Pennsylvania-Central Airlines has realized a substantial gain over the corresponding period of the preceding year.

United Aircraft $3.53 a Share

United Aircraft Corporation, a leading manufacturer of airplanes, engines and propellers reported today consolidated net profit for 1939 of $9,375,437, or $3.53 a share, compared with $5,426,276, or $2.12 a share, in 1938.

The 72 per cent rise in earnings was accompanied by plant and equipment expansion which increased to $19,216,936 from $11,507,072 the valuation of those fixed assets. The backlog of unfilled orders on December 31 was reported as $127,004,032 compared with $17,463,969 on December 31, 1938.

Frederick B. Rentschler, chairman, reported to stockholders: "There was an abnormally sharp increase in the business of the corporation during the year just ended.

Celanese Corp. Profit Largest In Its History

New York, March 8 (AP).—The annual pamphlet report of Celanese Corporation of America, released today, said the 1939 profit of $6,374,100 was largest in the company's history.

The result was equal to $3.53 a share on the common stock after preferred stock dividend deductions. The 1938 profit was $2,479,749 or 26 cents a share on the common stock.

Camille Dreyfus, president, asserted that demand for the company's produces "was and still is in excess of production capacity, but we expect that the rapidly increasing output at Cumberland, Md., as well as production from the first unit of our new plant at Celco, Va., will help to relieve this condition."

Standard Oil of Ohio, $6.64

Cleveland, March 8 (AP).—Standard Oil Co., of Ohio tonight reported net profit of $5,602,499, compared with $1,964,605 in 1938. After preferred dividends the net was equivalent to $6.64 a common share against $1.81 in 1938. Dividends aggregating $1.50 were paid last year. President William T. Holliday told stockholders the company had completed the shift in its source of crude oil from Southwestern States to Ohio, Indiana, Kentucky, Michigan and Illinois.

Timken Roller, $3.02

Canton, Ohio, March 8 (AP).—Timken Roller Bearing Co., reported today 1939 net profit of $7,287,911, equal to $3.02 a share, against the preceding year's $1,427,902, equal to 59 cents a share. Dividend payments of $6,032,950 last year represented $2.50 a share.

Pullman Co. Reports Profit

Chicago, March 8 (AP).—The Pullman Co., sleeping car subsidiary of Pullman, Inc., reported today a 1939 revenue of $2,176,319 from transportation operations, after taxes and air conditioning revenue deferment. The net from transportation operations was $1,502,997 in 1938. The December net revenue was $254,677, compared with a deficit of $1,411,045 in December, 1938.

Foreign Markets

London, March 8.—The stock market drifted back when support waned after a firm opening today. Rail shares moved forward briskly at the start, but profit-taking undermined the gains. Textile and rayon shares eased in an irregular industrial group. Government bonds improved at the outset, but there were few sustaining orders. Kaffirs were a bit droopy, while most base metals posted only minor changes.

Paris.—Scandinavian issues advanced sharply in the bourse following rumors of peace talks between Russia and Finland. The balance of the list shifted irregularly. Bank shares were under considerable pressure. Rentes closed 15 centimes higher to 20 lower.

Amsterdam.—Prices fluctuated nervously in the bourse while traders waited more definite news of Finnish-Russian peace negotiations. Small losses predominated among American shares.

Liverpool.—Small opening gains in cotton futures were canceled and the market dropped 2 to 9 points today. A lower opening at New York discouraged support.

Cotton Prices Drop With Foreign Sales

Bombay, Liverpool Offer Contracts; Prices Down 1 to 7

By the Associated Press

New York, March 8.—The cotton futures market had heavy going today through selling by foreign interests and domestic hedging pressure. Final prices were down 1 to 7 points.

Bombay and Liverpool offered contracts briskly in morning trade, although this was offset, in part, by buying through a large spot house.

Issuance of 32 delivery notices against the March contract brought out considerable selling in the spot month, but when they were stopped by spot interests the delivery recovered nearly all of early losses.

The relative steadiness of new crop deliveries, brokers said, appeared to stem from hopes the Senate may raise the farm appropriation bill to more than $200,000,000 above President Roosevelt's budget estimate.

Cottonseed Oil

Buyers and sellers had trouble getting together in the cottonseed oil futures market today. Final prices were unchanged to 3 points lower on sales of only 33 contracts.

Traders moved warily in view of the down trend in grains and cotton which countered the influence of improved demand for cash oil.

March closed 7.05 bid; May, 7.14; July, 7.22; September, 7.30; October, 7.30 bid.

Crude oil sold at 6¼ cents f.o.b. mills in the Southeast, an increase of ⅛ cent. Sellers asked 6¼ for Valley crude while in Texas buyers offered 5¾@5⅞ cents.

Contract Bridge

By Florence Osborn.

A hand such as today's might find its way into the puzzlers that pop up in the died of any contract coterie.

In today's hand, West opened the queen of hearts, holding the trick. South took the next heart and looked around for a way to make his twelfth trick. Five diamonds, three spades, two clubs and a heart were sure, but any attempt to set up an extra club trick would surely result in the loss of heart tricks.

The best chance seemed to be that of wheedling a club discard or two out of one of the opponents. He therefore ran off the diamonds at once, discarding three low clubs from his own hand. West had to make three discards and found himself in a quandary. His first discards were the hearts. East's play having indicated strength in the suit, but then West had to decide whether to discard a spade or a club. Because of South's club discards, West thought it safe to release a club.

That gave North his contract. He cashed ace and king of clubs, clearing the suit. Dummy's innocent four of clubs then finished the twelfth trick.

Gracie Allen, who threw her hat into the ring late last month when she announced her intentions to be the next President, invades the Capital this weekend.

Gracie Allen

She'll be a guest of honor at the National Women's Press Club Stunt Party tonight, joining Mrs. Roosevelt and the wives of many of the leading Presidential candidates.

Mrs. Roosevelt has nothing to worry about if Gracie is elected President; Miss Allen has already sent out a statement saying she wanted Mrs. Roosevelt to remain in the White House because George Burns cannot write "My Day."

Gracie even has a campaign song; it's called "Vote for Gracie to win the Presidential racie."

While waiting for her platform to be sawed off the rear of a Pullman car, Miss Allen told two newsboys and a Hollywood Boulevard box-lunch salesman that she has written all the other Presidential candidates—asking them to retire from the race.

"It's silly to have anybody run against anybody else," the Surprise Party candidate stated. "That accounts for about half of the highway accidents in America." Besides it's a great waste of taxpayers' money. And a great waste of candidates, too."

Another unusal twist to Miss Allen's campaign is that she's running for her third term first. When interviewed on this she said, "Sure, I want my third term first—then I'll take the first and second terms later—like coming into a movie during the last half of a double feature on bank night." Gracie arrives by plane this morning at 9:30 or so; a torch light parade is being planned.

NUTS AND JOLTS

Another Nero Wolfe Story

BY REX STOUT

OVER MY DEAD BODY

When Carla Lovchen was announced to Nero Wolfe for the second time in one day, a lot had happened. On her first visit, Carla had asked Wolfe's help for her friend, Neya Tormic, accused of stealing diamonds from a pupil in the fencing school where they both taught. Wolfe refused. Subsequently, Stahl, an FBI man, had inquired into Wolfe's possible representation of some foreign power and had specifically mentioned the Princes Donevitch, old Peter and young Stefan. After lunch, while quizzing Archie Goodwin, his confidential secretary, Nero Wolfe had found in one of his books a note from Prince Stefan Donevitch, designating his wife to act in his stead in certain important affairs. The book was one which Archie had seen Carla take from the shelf while waiting for Wolfe to see her. Wolfe mailed the paper to Saul Panzer, one of his agents, for safe-keeping.

Chapter IV

"The young lady——"

"We'll attend to her."

Fritz departed. Wolfe cocked an ear and waited until the sound of the street door opening and closing reached us, and then told me, "Remember to phone Saul and tell him to expect that envelope and to take care of it." He slid United Yugoslavia across the desk. "Put this away before you bring her in."

I returned the book to its place on the shelf and then went to the front room for her. "This way, please. Sorry you had to wait." As I stood back to let her precede me into the office, I inspected her build and swing and the set of her head from the fresh viewpoint of the princess theory, but the first strong impression I had had of her was the way she said pliz, and to me she was still an immigrant girl and in my opinion always would be. Anyway, judging from various pictures of princesses I had seen, from brats on up, I was inclined to give her the benefit of the doubt and assume that she had swiped that paper from the rightful owner.

She thanked me for the chair and I returned to my own. I had a notion to warn her to lay off of the hvala Bogu stuff, but decided that Wolfe was in no mood for the light touch. He was upright in his chair with his eyes narrowed at her.

"I sent you a message this morning, Miss Lovchen," he said dryly, "by Mr. Goodwin, that I would be unable to help you out in your trouble.. Your friend's trouble."

She nodded. "I got it. I was disappointed, very much, because we're from Yugoslavia and we know you have been there, and we're strangers and there was no one else to go to." She kept the lashes up, her dark eyes at him straight. "I told Neya—my friend—and she was disappointed too. It is a very extremely serious trouble. We talked it over, and there is only one thing to do, and that is you must get her out of it."

"No." Wolfe was still dry, and positive. "I can't engage to do that. But I would like to ask——"

"Pliz!" She snapped it out. "It must be done quick now, beacuse they will all be there at 5 o'clock to settle it, and that man is not only an American fool, he is the kind of man who would simply make trouble anywhere. And somehow there is a terrible mistake. There is no one we can go to but you. So we talked it over and I said the only thing to do is to tell you the very good reason why you must help her, and she agreed to it because she had to. The reason is that my friend, Neya Tormic, is your daughter."

WOLFE'S eyes popped open to a new record. Not liking the sight of that, I transferred my astonished stare to the girl.

Wolfe exploded: "My daughter? What's this flummery?"

"She is your daughter."

"My daugh—" Wolfe was speechless. He found a piece of his voice: "You said her name is Tormic."

"I told you her name in America is Neya Tormic just as mine is Carla Lovchen."

Wolfe blurted, "I don't believ it. It's flummery. My daughter disappeared. I have no daughter."

"You haven't seen her since she was 3 years old. Have you?"

"No."

"You should. Now you will. She's very good-looking." She opened her handbag and fished in it. "I suspected you wouldn't want to believe me, so I got this from Neya and brought it along. Here." She reached to hand him a paper. "There is your name where you signed it . . ."

She went on talking. Wolfe was scowling at the paper. He went over it slowly and carefully, holding it at an angle for better light from the window. His jaw was clamped. I watched him and listened to her. What with the paper hid in his book and now this, it began to look as if the Montenegrin female situation held great promise.

He finished inspecting the thing, folded it with deliberation, and stuck it in his pocket.

Miss Lovchen extended a hand. "No, you must give it back. I must return it to Neya. Unless you take it to her yourself?"

Wolfe regarded her. He grunted. "I don't know anything about this. The paper's all right. That is my signature. It belonged to that girl. It still does, if she lives. How do I know it wasn't stolen?"

"For what?" She shrugged. "You're suspicious beyond anything to be expected. Stolen to be brought across the ocean for what? To have an effect on you, here in America? No, you are famous, but not as famous as all that. It was not stolen from her. She sent me to show it to you and to tell you. She is in trouble!" Her eyes flashed at him. "What are you in your opinion, a rock on Durmitor for a goat to stand on? You will see your grown daughter for the first time perhaps in a jail?"

"I don't know. I am not in my opinion a rock. Neither am I a gull. I couldn't find that girl when I went back to Yugoslavia to look for her. I don't know her."

"BUT YOUR America will know her! The daughter of Nero Wolfe! In jail for stealing! Only she didn't steal! She is no thief!" She sprang up and put her hands on his desk and leaned across at him. "Pfui!" she sat down again and flashed her eyes at me to let me know she was making no exceptions. I winked at her. Admitting the princess theory and counting me as a peasant, I suppose it was out of character.

Wolfe sighed, long and deep. There was a silence during which I could hear both of them breathing. At length he muttered:

"It's preposterous. Grotesque. No matter how many tricks you learn, life knows a better one. I've put many people in jail, and kept many out. Now this. Archie, your notebook. Miss Lovchen, please give Mr. Goodwin the details of this trouble your friend has got into." He leaned back and shut his eyes.

She told it and I put it down. It looked to me, as it unfolded, as if somebody's confidence in someone's daughter might turn out to be misplaced. The two girls taught both dancing and fencing at Nikola Miltan's Studio on East Forty-eighth street. It was an exclusive joint with a pedigreed clientele and appropriate prices for lessons. They had got their jobs through an introduction from Donald Barrett, son of John P. Barrett, of Barrett & De Russy, the bankers. Dancing lessons were given in private rooms. The salle d'armes, on the floor above, consisted of a large room and two smaller ones, and there were two locker rooms, one for men and one for women, where clients exchanged street clothes for fencing costumes.

One of the fencing pupils was a man named Nat Driscoll. She pronounced it Nawht He was middle-aged or more and fat and rich. Yesterday afternoon he had informed Nikola Miltan that upon going to the locker room after completing his fencing lesson, which had been given by Carla Lovchen, he had seen the other female fencing instructor, namely Neya Tormic, standing by the open door of the locker, in the act of returning the coat of his street suit, on its hanger, to its hook within the locker; and that she had then closed the locker door and departed by the door to the hall. Upon inspection, to which he had proceeded as soon as possible, he had found that his gold cigarette case and wallet, the contents intact, were in the pockets where they belonged and it was not until after he got dressed that he remembered about the diamonds, in a pillbox, which should be there, too. They were gone. He had carefully explored each and every pocket. They were not there. He demanded their immediate recovery.

Miss Tormic, summoned by Nikola Miltan, denied any knowledge of the diamonds, and further denied that she had opened Mr. Driscoll's locker or touched his clothing. The accusation, she said, was outrageous, infamous, and false. She had not been in the locker room. Had she been in the locker room for any conceivable purpose, it would not have been to go through men's clothes. Had she gone through a man's clothes, it would not have been Mr. Driscoll's clothes; it was beyond the bounds of possibility that she should have the faintest interest in the contents of Mr. Driscoll's pockets. She had been justly and somewhat violently indignant.

SHE HAD submitted to a search of her person, performed by Jeanne Miltan, Nikola's wife. Everybody at that time in the studio, on both floors, employes and clients alike, had been questioned by Miltan, and a search of the premises conducted. Driscoll stated positively he had seen Neya Tormic's face, from the side, as she stood by the locker, and furthermore that she was wearing her fencing costume. Neya and Carla had both insisted that they be searched again before leaving the studio to go home. Miltan was half frantic at the threat of disgrace to the reputation of his place and had successfully resisted Driscoll's demand that the police be called. In the morning—this day—he had spent 2 hours pleading with Neya to tell where the diamonds were, what she had done with them, to whom she had given them, who was her accomplice, and had met with the disdain which his assumption deserved. In a desperate effort to solve the affair without police or publicity, he had arranged for everyone concerned, all who had been on the premises yesterday afternoon, to meet in his office at 5 o'clock today. In Neya Tormic's presence he had told his wife that he would engage the services of Nero Wolfe; and Neya, knowing Nero Wolfe to be her father, had promptly stated that he would be present in her behalf. But Neya had a strong disinclination to reveal her identity to her father, for reasons understandable to him, and therefore Carla, hotfooting it for Wolfe's office, had been instructed not to divulge it.

That was the crop. Miss Lovchen, looking at her wrist and stating that it was five minutes to 4, added that Wolfe must come immediately. Fast.

"Why didn't Mr. Driscoll challenge Miss Tormic on the spot, seeing her with his coat?"

"He was naked. He came from the shower bath."

"Is he too fat to be seen even at the risk of losing diamonds?"

"He says he is modest. He also says he was too surprised to speak, and she moved rapidly and went away at once. Then his wallet and cigarette case were there, and he forgot about the diamonds until he was dressed. He is not nearly as fat as you are."

"I wouldn't expect him to be. Do the lockers have keys?"

"Yes, but there is much carelessness. The keys lie around. That part is very confused."

"You say Miss Tormic did not steal the diamonds?"

"I do say that. Never did she."

"Did she take something else from Mr. Driscoll's clothing? Something he fails to mention? Letters, papers, even a piece of candy perhaps?"

"Nothing. Nothing at all."

"Did she go to the locker room?"

"What would she go there for?"

"I don't know. Did she?"

"No."

"Fantastic." Wolfe's eyes threatened to open. "How long have you known she is my daughter?"

"All my life. I have been . . . her friend, very close. I knew about you—about your—I knew your name."

"About my deplorable intransigience, you would say." Wolfe's tone was suddenly savage. "Ha! You juicy girls with your busts swelling with ardor for the heroics of past centuries! Pah! Do the rats still gather crumbs from under the Donevitch table?"

"We are—" Her chin went up and her eyes showed fire. "They preserve honor! And they will share glory!"

"No." Her bust was swelling, but not apparently with ador.

"What's your name?"

"Carla Lovchen."

"What's your name at home?"

"I am not at home now." She flung out a hand impatiently. "What is all this? All this about me? Do you realize what I have told you about Neya? About your daughter? Does it help you to sit there and sneer? I tell you, you must do this at once or there will be the police!"

Wolfe sat up. I was thinking it was about time. The clock on the wall said two minutes past 4, and his daily routine, which included an afternoon session in the plant rooms from 4 until 6 was supposed to be unalterable by fire, flood or murder. I was flabbergasted when, although he glanced at the clock, he merely sat up straight.

But his tone was brisk. "Archie, please conduct Miss Lovchen to the front room and return for instructions."

She started to sputter. "But there's no—"
